It's here that Mami frowns. "Oh, come on, Chiaki-san, stop making that face. It wasn't that bad, was it?"

What face? You're not making any--oh. Well. That's just how you frown.

Mami huffs here, but even you can tell that she's just jerking you around. "Well, thankfully I thought of you not really being into the whole paperwork thing, so I thought up of something to help you delegate those tasks to someone else."

Really? That's Mami for you.

What is it, then?

"Well, I heard that you wanted to make Midori-chan your secretary or something, Chiaki-san? As it is, she's just registered as your aide-de-camp, now." She clicks something offscreen, and Midori's smiling picture appears at the upper right hand corner.

"We can formalize her role right here, right now, to be the one handling your paperwork for you." Mami frowns again. "Now, don't take this as a permanent excuse from paperwork, as you'll have to synch up with her every day to make sure you're not missing anything important, but at least you'll have someone you trust to do the interviews, look over requisition and disputes, the little details, while you do all the fieldwork as Warmaster" Another smile. "Of course, I'll be here every step of the way to supervise and train her for the position."

Huh. Well, that....that sounds pretty good, actually. And it'll keep Midori out of harm's way, too, just being here. Away from the Tenth, and the Prophet.

"I thought so too, Chiaki-san." Another smile. "But if you'd like me to handle your paperwork personally, then I'll also suggest making Midori-chan one of our Callidus instructors. I checked out her profile earlier - she's not that experienced in terms of mission time, but she IS ratified as a full Callidus, and you know how Enishi-chan always has her hands full with the new trainees. Of course, we don't get them all that often, but another full-fledged Callidus on the instructor staff would be good."

Huh. So...you're to pick between Secretary Midori and Physical Trainer Midori, eh?

Mami giggles again. "W-well, when you put it that way, Chiaki-san..."

Which one do you pick for Midori, then?

Hnn. Both sound tempting, especially when one of them gives you a legitimate out from paperwork - but as it is, you'll have to leave it for Midori herself to decide which she wants. You're not into forcing people into doing something they might not like, anyway.

"Oh?" Mami seems surprised at your decision, here. "Mmm, well, that's certainly very kind and considerate of you, Chiaki-san, but..." It's here that the blonde's expression turns serious. "What if Midori-chan wants to be placed in the active roster, along with you? You want her to be safe, but what if what you want is at odds with what she wants, too?"

The blonde Vindicare lets out another sigh, before smiling at you. "Chiaki-san, you are our Warmaster. You make the decisions here, not us. It's not a matter of being polite or being considerate - you earned the right to choose, and I'm sure whatever you pick Midori-chan will do her best to fit. But please, remember that you have the authority to make decisions that affect those in our Officio, and while their feelings may be hurt, it usually pans out in the long run. Most especially if you made the decision with their best interests in mind."

You're sorry.

"It's fine, Chiaki-san. No need to apologize." Mami shakes her head. "We'll go with what you want. You're Warmaster, after all." Another smile curves her lips, just as warm, just as heartfelt as all the rest of her. "And I'm sure you'll do much better after getting your feet wet a bit more."

Yeah. You hope so, too.

It's here, then, that a shadow falls over Mami, and she looks at something behind the screen with something approaching recognition. "Oh! Chiaki-san, my lunch date's here! I'll talk to you later, alright?" She closes her end of the connection before you can greet her goodbye, the screen blanking out. You shake your own head, and shut your own laptop in turn.

So this is what being a Warmaster's all about, huh? What dildos. You wish you never got the position.

You shake your head, before pulling open your boxed lunch.

Uncovering...well. It's a rice meal, that's for sure. Not the pancakes you were expecting. For a moment, you consider throwing it away.

Until you realize that the colorful garnish is actually carefully arranged and shaped to resemble a super-deformed Murder Mayumi and a Miracle Midori holding hands, with hearts all over them.

Yeah, okay. This job may indeed be dildos, you think, as you break your chopsticks apart and start eating.

But it's not all that bad.

As long as we can find out Midori's reaction to our decision I'm fine with anything.
Also, when Kyoko left to meet up with Sayaka, was that so Sayaka could inform Kyoko about the Prophet? That would be nice to sort out before our joint operation.

So difficult.

On the one hand I REALLY want Midori to be able to handle herself better in combat for when the shit hits the fan.

On the other, Mami deserves more "me" time and less chasing down our fuckups, and we could use someone like Midori who actually has a head for organisation.

[x]Catching up with Misaka
We need to know when tiny pete can get back into the action.

[x]Endurance training with Kyoko
We might have to hack our way through 100 magical girls again, and Kharn won't be there. Might as well get started with getting more stamina.

But please, remember that you have the authority to make decisions that affect those in our Officio, and while their feelings may be hurt, it usually pans out in the long run. Paperwork and Misaka. Specifically:

reviewing our mission briefing
Looking up the Officio records of notable missions that we probably took part in (like Walpurgisnacht), so we can act like we know something
Browse Officio dossiers (if they exist) on NECO, Yuu, Risa, Kirika, and the girls we talked to earlier.

Try to pull a fun project for Misaka to work on out of our shield.

It depends on the framework and the general tone of the story but I do not believe that hard-boiled has to be there. After all, that would limit the scope of protagonists extremely and that just won't do, will it.

Practically speaking, this sums it up the best:
>But down these mean streets a man must go who is not himself mean, who is neither tarnished nor afraid. The detective in this kind of story must be such a man. He is the hero, he is everything. He must be a complete man and a common man and yet an unusual man. He must be, to use a rather weathered phrase, a man of honor, by instinct, by inevitability, without thought of it, and certainly without saying it. He must be the best man in his world and a good enough man for any world.
>The story is his adventure in search of a hidden truth, and it would be no adventure if it did not happen to a man fit for adventure.
That's Raymond Chandler btw. What you need for a noir story is someone who's Good (or at least Neutral) in an Evil world, driven and willing to pull that off no matter the cost.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 01/26/14(Sun)06:29 No.29796676

You are a Magical Girl, and you're currently en-route to your next assignment - a smash-and-grab op, where you'll have to steal into a heavily-guarded facility, take something from it, and get back in one piece.

You won't deny it, you love this kind of mission. Simple, easy, and completely lacking in any annoying VIPs with an unhealthy disregard for self-preservation. No security procedures to enforce, no patrols to conduct...just an opportunity for you to relax, stretch your legs, and kill people trying their best to kill you back.

And you're thankful to get out of your office for what seems like the first time ever since you got back from the Kirishima job. AS much as you appreciated Mami getting you exposed to the kind of stuff that a Warmaster should do - it just didn't feel right, the...the watch-wearing DILDONESS of it all. Even the concept of tolerating Kirishima Ruri at her worst for another minute longer didn't make you recoil as much as the sight of paperwork piling up on you desk hour after hour.

In-between meetings with Kyuubey and Mami - where they continued to torture you with the boring part of being a Warmaster - you managed to catch up with Misaka, your favorite arms dealer. She was back in her secluded warhouse, and you caught her in the act of attaching what appears to be two collossal missile pods on top of Tiny Pete's shoulders.

She was cursing a blue streak then, something about not getting the calibrations right - but all that stopped when you stepped into the warehouse, calling her name. You found yourself not caring at all as she crashed into you in a tackling hug, very nearly knocking you over and smearing your mainly-white costume with grease and engine oil. It's your opinion that no matter how much shit anyone's gone through, no one has the right to be grumpy after being greeted with the same bright-eyed enthusiasm and joy as the little Russian had.

After a few minutes of getting Misaka to calm down (and her just not standing for it, completely elated that you've come to visit) you finally discover that she'd just been back from another trip from Siberia. You attempt to ask how Souji and Kharn are adjusting to married life, but this only gets you a pouting tantrum from Misaka, and a screaming tirade of how Kharn seemed to be taking up all of Souji's time, now that she's gotten all fat and pregnant and stupid. With twins, apparently, if the preliminary ultrasound wasn't lying.

After she calmed down from THAT, though, Misaka did admit that she was, in a way, very excited to be an aunt - or really, more like an older sister, considering that Souji had been the only one to raise the young arms dealer. She'd already picked out nicknames for the two future offspring - nicknames that she was obviously proud of. Gork and Mork, she shared with you with nothing less than a thousand-watt smile.

After a bit more of catching up, you finally decide to head home, but not before telling Misaka that she can always visit you anytime at your apartment, or at the office if she wants to. She smiles at this, and hugs you again. Telling you how happy she was that you visited. That her big sister visited.

She also gave you a new teleport beacon, for you to use in case you needed Tiny Pete's help again. It's shaped, amusingly enough, like a small gold pocketwatch.

More meetings came after that, more bureacratic garbage that you could handle - until salvation came in the form of a green-haired angel with a tray of pancakes and spiked lemonade. You asked for a break then, and Mami and Kyuubey were only too happy to oblige (you'd been filling your ashtray ever since the three-hour-long fiscal earnings meeting started).

It's then, as you enjoyed your dinner, with her rubbing your shoulders - she noticed you wincing whenever you moved your neck, and offered to try and fix it - that you asked her about her future in the Ninth. What she wanted to do.

You told her about what Mami asked you the other day, and how you wanted for Midori to choose for herself. If she had something else in mind other than those two options, then she's welcome to suggest them, too.

It wasn't easy to get her to make a decision, in the end. She kept on asking you to choose for her, stammering something about being happy with whatever you decided, what you wanted. You couldn't help but laugh at this - god knows you don't find much reason to laugh nowadays - but after laying out what kind of work was expected of her in either role (with Mami coming in and helping you with the nitty-gritty of it), she finally chose to be an instructor for the Callidus Rank.

Both Kyuubey and Mami seemed pleased at her decision, although the blonde did remark something about regretting that she wouldn't be getting help with your paperwork, causing Midori to get flustered and stammer all over the place again. Mami put a stop to that with one of her smiles - and after asking you for permission, to 'borrow' Midori for a bit, took the Callidus out of your office, to get her introduced to Enishi and the rest of the rank. You remember the brief look of fear and panic Midori shot you just as she was pulled away from the door, with you only able to wave and lament that you'd cut your own backrub short.

You filled another ashtray after that, as you continued the meeting, this time with only Kyuubey for company. Fuck if the mutant cat loved to hear itself talk.

Thankfully, that's more or less twenty-four hours ago. Right now, you're sitting in what could be one of the biggest pieces of equipment the Ninth had ever fielded - its very own AC-130W, Stinger Variant, cruising towards Singapore at 40,000 feet above sea level. It's also night time - a few minutes to midnight, actually. Kyuubey had insisted that the op be run at night, under the cover of darkness.

>>29796772

In any case, you're now waiting in the passenger area. Sakura Kyoko, one of your teammates on this op, is noisily slurping cup noodles beside you, an open manga on her lap (the latest issue of Eiyuu Densetsu Rena: Super Extreme Hardcore, she told you when you asked. Apparently it's one of those superhero comic books imported from the US and translated to Japanese). Your other teammate, Miki Sayaka, is sitting on your opposite side, the rifle components of Blueberry Cheesecake Brownie's sheath spread on a black cloth on her lap. She'd been obsessively cleaning each piece as soon as the three of you got on and got settled in.

Thirty minutes..well, that's still thirty minutes too long. You want to get to the good part already. The part where you get to go back to being a Magical Girl again, instead of being a watch-wearing dildo.

...Oh, yeah. You're supposed to review the mission dossier Kyuubey gave you before takeoff. It's on your lap right now, just waiting to be read. You didn't manage to do so earlier, with it being buried under more paperwork that you had to resist dumping into a shredder.

What do you do now?

You decide to review the dossier yourself. As much as every cell in your body is recoiling at the sight of more paperwork - and the temptation of 'delegating' it to your equerry proving to be almost too much - it'd probably be much faster and easier for you to read it on your own. Besides, she'd probably bitch at you about being lazy or abusing your authority, or something.

You flip through the fortunately (and slightly worryingly) thin dossier in no time flat. The off-shore facility you're heading towards is called the Big Shell, a large marine decontamination facility established approximately 20 kilometers away from Singapore's coastline. Once the property of the Singaporean government in an attempt to combat a major oil spill ten years prior, it's now owned by a marine biology research company focusing mainly on shellfish and other deep-sea specimens.

Reading more into the dossier, you discover some facts about the facility: namely, how it's comprised of two hexagonal structures, connected end-on-end, north to south. Shell 1 and Shell 2. Each 'shell', then, consists of a central "core" surrounded by six struts - with each strut housing a different sub-facility key to the operation and maintenance of the facility itself.

The estimated number of personnel currently stationed in Big Shell number into the hundreds - five hundred to be exact, give or take fifty or so engineers that get cycled with fifty more in reserve in Singapore. Security is supposed to be light - just security guards trained to repel pirates - but the recent surveillance photos that Kyuubey had managed to procure show a different story, with heavily-armed men in combat gear patrolling the struts and providing overwatch.

One of the pictures, grainy as they are, also managed to capture a particularly heavily-armored individual standing on top of one of the struts, balanced precariously there, and flipping the camera off. You can't make out just who it is - its armor covering it from head to toe - but the confident stance and slight build gives away the fact that it is, in fact, a Magical Girl. Just one wearing some fancy type of full-body armor suit.

"Oh, Rena, you're so silly! Again with the lasagna!" Kyoko cackles beside you, half-muffled by a mouthful of instant ramen.

You continue reading. The mission - you, Sayaka and Kyoko, are to recover something from Big Shell for the client (who is curiously unnamed in this dossier). That something isn't listed either - only that it's stored in what looks like a very ornate and very gaudy jewelry box. The sort grandmothers store their jewelry in.

The dossier doesn't say where it's kept in Big Shell, either, only the client's suspicion that it's kept under heavy guard in one of the cores. Amusingly, the client had also seen fit to mention that they don't particularly care what happens to Big Shell right after the operation - only that the main objective be secured and delivered.

Best mission. Best mission ever.

"Right, right, you've been gushing about it ever since takeoff," Sayaka grumbles beside you, before blowing through what looks like an AR-15's truncated barrel. "Just don't overdo it today, alright? This is supposed to be a simple smash-and-grab run. We don't need to take unnecessary risks." It's here that she turns towards you. "Speaking of unnecessary, what kind of golden shit did you bring? You brought one along, didn't you?"

Which Golden Weapon did you bring? You only brought one along with you.

[] The VII Golden Weapon.
[] The IX Golden Weapon.
[] The XV Golden Weapon.
[] The XX Golden Weapon.
[] No, you didn't bring any.

You nod. Yes, you brought one of your Golden Weapons with you, namely the chainaxes. You were tempted to bring the gauntlets along, but you wanted to give poor Yuu a bit more time to recover. You forgoed bringing along the Desert Eagle, too - as much as it seemed natural to have it resting against you in its shoulder holster, you wanted to see how it'd be like to just rely on something you've only begun to train with.

Besides, if it came to the point that you needed to shoot something, there's always your Shield to puke out a rifle or two.

"That works, I guess. I mean, you could've brought along that Desert Eagle of yours, or Kirika's katana, but since I've been training you with those things..." Sayaka shrugs as she starts to reassemble the contraption she'd been fiddling around with, piece by piece. "Can you at least make sure you don't go on another rampage this time? Because as much as I enjoyed beating your ass unconscious, we probably won't have time to do that on this op."

Whose ass got beat? You didn't hear that correctly. Did she just say SHE beat your ass unconscious? Because you're pretty sure you were the one left standing then, and--

"You know what I mean, Murderface." Sayaka snaps. "Can you make sure or can't you?"

You meet Sayaka glare for glare, before nodding. Yeah, you'll make sure. No more freakouts like the last time. You've got everything under control.

Mostly, anyway. You still think Risa's too unpredictable for her own good, but at least she can be talked to.

"Good." The blue-haired Eversor finishes putting together Blueberry Cheesecake Brownie's sheath here, the parts snapping into place with a solid metallic click. "Now, let's go over the plan. Kyoko, put that stupid comic book away, and finish up your noodles. We need to get things straightened out here."

"Almost done!" The red-haired Eversor raises a hand. "Just let me finish the last few pages, I think it's gonna end on another stolen kiss cliffhanger with the Monster Master chick or something--"

"KYOKO!"

"Alright, alright, jeez." The cup noodles is quickly slurped down and drained of its contents, the comic book closed and folded away. "What's the big deal, anyway? Aren't we just gonna drop in, kill everyone, and steal what the client asked for?" Kyoko looks at you, then at Sayaka. "That's all of it, right?"

"Well, uh..." Sayaka blinks here, before nodding. "That's right. But this isn't a purge, we don't need to do that unless we have to. We can do this the smart way - sneak in, kill anyone who notices, steal the thing, and then get out."

Kyoko frowns. "That doesn't sound as fun as my plan, though."

"It's a mission! It's not supposed to be fun!"

...Huh. You were thinking that they'd be a bit more...well, in-sync with each other, considering that they're a couple.

Now you realize that they can just have disagreements with each other, just like regular jackoffs.

"Anyway, look, Murderface." Sayaka takes the dossier from you and opens it to the map of Big Shell. "Our target's in either one of these two cores." She taps the two cuboid shapes surrounded by interlinking rings of hexagon shapes. "Once we're over Big Shell, we'll do a HALO jump at 35,000 feet, aiming for Strut A."

She taps at the labeled hexagon with a gloved finger. "That's where their deep sea dock is, and where we can just swim up and infiltrate through. From there, we'll make our way to Strut B, since that's where their main power source is. We take that out, the entire facility goes dark, security and defenses go offline. Then we can just make our way to either core, take the main objective, and high-tail it back to Strut A for evac."

"...All this sneaking around. It's like we're Callidus, or something." Kyoko grins here, before nudging you with an elbow. "Shoulda bought Midori along too, eh? If we're gonna be sneaking around like her."

"We still need to worry about the Magical Girl resistance Kyuubey warned us about," Sayaka cuts in. "We don't know which Officio they're from, so they're still a variable we shouldn't take lightly."

"Eh, not like that stopped us before." Kyoko shrugs. "I don't like it, actually. It's too...sneaky for me." She crosses her arms. "I mean, I like it up to the entry thing? But maybe it's easier if we just go loud once we're in there. I mean, we're going to have to fight our way out of there eventually, right, Murderface?"

"Only if we fuck it up, which we won't, if we take out their power first." Sayaka insists. "Look, I know this looks like a great opportunity to fuck around, but until we're sure of what we're coming up against here, we should do this by properly! Come on, Kyoko, this is pretty fucking basic procedure!"

The two Eversors glare at each other here, one crimson eye against two blue ones - before they both turn to you. Making you notice for the first time the apparent tension between the two - something you couldn't believe you didn't notice earlier.

"Well, let's see what Murderface thinks," Kyoko says quietly. "Murderface? What'd ya think? Sneak in or go loud?"

How do you react?

Remember when we got our arm chopped off by Kirika and Misaka said she would build us a mechanical arm that would make us strong as ten gorillas? Maybe we should have taken her up on that offer instead of having our regular arm regrown.

You narrow your eyes at your team mates. The hell's up with the both of them? You'd have expected this kind of behavior from anyone else, but not from the legendary wife and husband team of the fucking Ninth. Is there something you should know about, here, or should you chalk this up to their periods being in sync?

Silence reigns in the passenger bay for a few moments, with only the sound of the plane's engines filling the void - before Sayaka finally speaks up, turning away. "No. It's...it's nothing, Murderface. Just something private that'll have to wait until after we get home. Right, Kyoko?"

...Right. Well. To answer Kyoko's question, you do think that there's merit to what Sayaka suggested. Do the jump, sneak in without noticing, cut off their power.

"See?" You don't even have to look to see that Sayaka's trying her best not to sound like a bitch, here. "It's the most sensible way of doing things--"

But it's the stuff after that you don't necessarily agree with Sayaka, you cut her off. After you cut the power...well, you'll take that as an opportunity to let off some steam. In fact, maybe all three of you should. You certainly think there's some stress that needs to be let out.

Sayaka opens her mouth to protest, but sighs instead. "...Fine. Sure. But let's try and make our decision about that when we're already in there, alright? We don't know what kind of actual security they have there, and how many Magical Girls we'll be fighting."

That sounds fair, you nod. More than fair.

"Ten minutes to destination." Rea's voice echoes throughout the passenger area. "Mission party, please assemble at departure area and prepare for imminent drop."

"Right, that's our cue." Sayaka stands up, stowing Blueberry Cheesecake Brownie back into its case. "Let's get this thing going."

You and Kyoko make to follow her, but you find yourself stopping.

Your Shield. It's clicking. Really loudly. Loud enough that it's impossible for Kyoko and Sayaka to miss it.

But they're not saying anything. Kyoko's even yawning, here, grumbling about looking forward to getting home early.

"Murderface?" Kyoko taps your shoulder. "What's up? Come on, we gotta go."

You tell them to hold on for a moment. You just need to attend to something.

"What? But--" Sayaka starts, frowning - but you've already engaged your Shield before she could even say another word. The gears inside the heavy metal disc grinding, screeching in protest as you force it to turn a complete ninety degrees, pushing until the familiar locking mechanism clicks home.

The half-formed frown freezes on the Eversor's face, making her look like she's about to cry - just as the rest of the world does, in the dull cast-iron grey of your Time Stop. You'd laugh here, if not for the fact that you're not exactly looking forward to meeting your own personal Satan in pink.

Not after what you learned from your...past selves? Is that what you're supposed to call them?

But yeah. It's not...it's not that you're afraid of her or anything, no.

More like...well. You feel guilty about the entire thing. About what happened to her. Why she turned into...how she is right now. About how most of it - if not all of it - is your fault, even if you don't exactly know or remember how you did it.

"Homura-chan~" Her voice is immediately familiar, despite your not hearing it for a while already. It almost felt nostalgic, the way she sounded so happy to see you, despite you knowing full well that she's smiling with a mouthful of blood-pinked teeth.

You look around, and see what looks like a trolley cart being wheeled towards you - the same sort of trolley cart that stewardesses hocking snacks push around the aisles.

Only this cart isn't filled with snacks - rather, they're filled with severed heads, all of them from Magical Girls you've never seen before. You know they're magical girls, because they're holding their soul own soul gems in their mouths, their jaws locked around the bauble in rigor mortis.

"Thank you for choosing Pinky Airlines again, Homura-chan!" Pinky giggles. "My, you're certainly racking up the miles! Get enough, and maybe I'll invite you to our exclusive Mile High Club!"

Mile High what...?

"I'll tell you when you're older." Pinky giggles again. "Oh, wait, actually, you already are! Two thousand years old's old enough, isn't it? That's no longer underage, right?" She doesn't wait for your answer, reaching down instead to pluck a soul gem from one of the severed heads rolling around her trolley. With a frightful, ear-splitting crunch, she bites through the nearly-black gem, and you hear what sounds like glass being ground to powder as she starts to chew. "See, Homura-chan, when two Magical Girls love each other very much, they get into an airplane bathroom, and--"

...Wait. Stop. You get the idea. Just...what is going on? What's the costume about? You wanted to check up on her, since she was trying to get your attention, and--

"You wanted to check up on ME, Homura-chan?" Pinky blinks her black eyes at you. "Just now? That's...that's actually funny! Because I was trying to get your attention DAYS AGO!"

She throws the remaining half of the Soul Gem she'd just bitten through at you. You dodge it easily, and you turn to see it bounce off of Kyoko's forehead before tumbling away and disappearing in a curl of black flame. "I KNOW I KICKED YOU OUT BUT FOR FUCK'S SAKE, HOMURA-CHAN, I'M NOT YOUR FUCKING EX TO SNUB WHEN YOU'RE NOT IN THE MOOD TO JUST TALK!"

What the fuck is up with everyone? It's like everyone else is taking cranky pills. Even Pinky.

Well, anyway, you're here now. What did she want to talk to you about?

"Khh...talking like nothing's wrong..." Pinky tears out another blackened Soul Gem from another severed head, this time popping the entire thing in her mouth and crunching down HARD.

"You know, that's what really turned me on about you, Homura-chan. The way you can act cool like that? But it's not working now." A moment. "Well....n-not as much, anyway."

"I was gonna warn you not to use the Desert Eagle I gave you that one time, okay?!" Crunch, crunch. "Whatever you do, don't use it anymore! And don't try to talk to whoever's inside it, either! They're just going to lie to you a whole lot!"

I just realized something: we're in Homucifer's world. There are no Wraiths, and for all the talk about Witches we haven't seen a girl turn. Decu said there's something fishy about Grief Seed production. Pinky is eating the Gems of girls she would save as Madokami, and the Golden Weapons seem to prevent Witchouts.

Homucifer done fucked up real bad. We need to off her and protect Pinky. Pink's still the Law of Cycles, just a super fucked up version.

According to my art folder which also has conceptual characters/characters that haven't appeared yet, we're at around 40-50 total that have appeared/were named in some way. Counting the writeup characters that haven't appeared in the main quest we're approaching probably 60-70.

There are 32 separate characters that profiles have been done for, with some snapshots of a few characters (mostly Wendy and Malal) in different periods, too.

IIRC, Mirai didn't actually witch. It was Chiaki. Everyone was just caught up in it because FUCKHUGE and painfully complicated overlapping BARRIER. As befits a Homu.

Mirai was in pretty bad shape though, since when she got dragged into the barrier she was already just a Soul Gem.

...Fine. Whatever. You're not going to promise that you won't ever use it - it is pretty nice to shoot and everything - but you won't talk to whoever's inside of it. Or believe their lies. Can you use your Shield again, now, or are you still fucked in that regard?

Pinky narrows her eyes at you as she continues to grind and crunch the Soul Gem she's eating into fine powder. Her own blood, a cancerous, clotting black, dripping down onto her immaculate pink stewardess costume, blotting on the once-pristine cloth. "Maaaaybe. You promised that way too quick, Homura-chan, and honestly, I'm not sure if I can trust you that easily now. I mean, you did break Wendy-chan's heart, after you promised her and everything."

It's here that Pinky sniffs dramatically. "How could my pure, sweet and gentle Homura-chan become such a heartbreaker? Oh, the horror! The tragedy!" She turns to the side to spit what looks like the brass gilding of the soul gem she'd just eaten, but bent and chewed up and stringed with blood and saliva.

The pink-haired demon then rummages on the pile of heads on her trolley, pulling out a very young-looking magical girl's still-screaming head by its ponytail and tearing out the soul gem stuffed into its mouth. Another wince-inducing crunch, and the muffled, incoherent screaming immediately cuts off. "Nnngh, all this stress you're giving me is gonna make me faaaat, Homura-chan! How will I ever fit into my dress for our wedding? This is all your fault!"

"Anyway, you'll be able to use your Shield again, but only on a trial basis this time, just to make sure you're still loyal to me an' everything." Pinky grins at you before swallowing. "Let's set the limit at....two! Two Time Stops! Ah ah ah ah!" Thunder suddenly booms from somewhere, along with the brief strobe-light effect of lightning. "After you use up those two, you won't be able to time stop anymore unless I visit again!"

We haven't seen it ourselves, but Murderface did, as did the rest of the Officio, as we've been told. She did Witch out, and the procedure that she underwent to get the Witch-flesh grafted to her is slowly spreading to the rest of her body despite attempts to keep her Soul Gem clean.

Well. That's...better than nothing, you suppose. At least it's not going to be some sort of useless disc clamped on your arm that you can't even block shit with.

So fine. Not all that happy with it, but...at least you can stop the really ugly crap from happening if they do.

Where did Pinky get all these soulgems she's snacking on, anyway?

"Wendy, of course! At least SHE knows how to be grateful, and to be a nice person!" Pinky sticks out her tongue at you. "But not all of these are from her, though. I got the others from the girls who really, really like me." It's here that she grins, a secret, almost sly grin. "Better watch out, Homura-chan, or they might just steal me away! And then you won't have me to look after you anymore, only that...that broccolihead fatty that you're so protective of!"

...Well, that's a bit unfair. Midori really isn't that fat.

"Wake up, Homura-chan! What do you think those huge, bouncy things on her chest are, muscle?" Pinky spits at you. "Honestly! They're so violent and vulgar, they probably explode out of her bra whenever she runs! And don't get me started on her butt, and--"

It's here that the goddess stops as she sees just who you're with.

"...Wah. Sayaka-chan and Kyoko-chan...? I..." Something comes over the crazed eldritchian nightmare, here, something that suddenly turns her black eyes into something approximating warm amber. "...It's been a while since I saw them together like this...w-when was it, Homura-chan? Which loop was it?" She turns towards you, before scoffing. "Eh, you wouldn't know, would you? You never really cared about them at all. Not really."

She steps forward, away from her trolley, stopping in front of Sayaka and...giving her a hug. "Sayaka-chan, you stupid idiot. Why don't you just turn into a fish right now, and save Kyoko the heartbreak, huh? So she'll just kill herself instead of turning into that strange candle-headed thing..."

How do you react?

How aware of the looping nature of the last ten thousand months is pinky?

The announcement was delivered as a notice taped on the inside of my door. It said that I have to take my things out of the broom closet by next Thursday, and move them to my new office. I have been here three months, enduring nightmares thick with the smell of turpentine, but better late than never. Behind a wooden door with the nameplate "Eleanor A. Slam", no title, is where I get to work for the rest of my life. When I walk into the room, the door shuts itself behind me. No distractions allowed, after all.

I guess it's not a bad little office - it's mostly bare, needs some personal touches - and few in the Sixth can boast that they have their own. That's normally reserved for the people at the very top. So it means that they care about my wellbeing; but they don't care enough to end this torment. After all, the Sixth doesn't want its precious eversors wasting time writing that could be spent training. No, that is almost entirely my job, because I'm their special Vanus.

I examine the windows and see they decided to add bars to them. They're not taking any chances this time, after hearing what I tried back at the Eighth. I bet they reinforced the glass, too. Well, at least it should keep the drop bears out. Not that I can see much through the frosted glass.

I stomp back to my shiny little black swivel chair and spin around slowly. Remembering what the Incubator said about how to relax myself, I try those breathing exercises and reassure myself that things aren't so bad. I could be homeless. I could be chained up. I could be dea-

Well, that might be an improvement.

Sigh. I never wished for this.

So, how badly will Pinky react when we go back on what we said and talk with the other Homura's in the DEagle?

Does Chiaki remember anything at all about PMC anti-magic equipment? Can we ask Misaka to get ahold of some for us?

There's a knock on the door and I compose myself before speaking. "Come in."

Some girl whose name I can't be bothered to learn opens the door and wheels in the first gurney of the day, covered in boxes of varying sizes. She tells me the usual spiel : take a box, fill out the forms inside, then put them back in the box they came in. Lunch break isn't until all these papers are filled out. Start on the second set afterwards before you go home.

"Understood."

She does a little curtsey before leaving me alone with my hated nemesis. I take a long hard look at a box containing financial records and order forms that need to be checked for errors. Maybe it won't be so bad this time. I lift up the box and upend its contents on my desk. And as soon as I lock eyes with them, it starts.

I'm almost used to having little to no autonomous control of my body during my little "work trances". I clutch at the gem around my neck as my casual attire is replaced by my Official Magical Girl Costume, appearing with little fanfare or special effects. Well, maybe there's a subtle noise I can't hear, everything's kind of muffled during these states. It might some kind of crunching noise, since I look like a breakfast cereal mascot. Getting sick of being called Crunchberry.

Pinky claims Chiaki/Homura is 2000 years old, but the people inside the gun claimed they had looped for 900 years. Whats up with that?

I reach into my pockets and pull out an assortment of pens with one hand, the other grabbing a sheaf of papers without me even looking at it. And as I look it over, I can feel it. Unfamiliar thoughts pouring into my head like a raging typhoon, granting me the knowledge of what I need to do, without comprehension of any of the alien symbols written down. A mental cheat sheet that doesn't show its work. I whip my pen back and forth in neat little strokes, writing down words that mean nothing to me and crossing out parts that look identical to the others. Flip page, write write, flip page, write write. Put the pages aside and grab the next one. The Incubator was smart enough to leave holes in the boxes so that my trance state can see there is unfinished business. Put papers in the box, toss it to the side, grab another box and start all over, discard empty pens, acquire fresh pens. All in the span of a few minutes, but each stack of remaining boxes is about as tall as I am.

Within the first hour my eyes are already watering from being unable to blink. I can see little halos of light around the black ink on the page, not that I can tell them where to look. I develop tunnel vision, there's only the task in front of me. My wrist begins to ache dully in protest of this treatment. And as time drags on, I begin to lose my sense of self.

Each new page means another memory pushed aside, filled in with incomprehensible knowledge. With only the scratching of the pen, the buzzing in my head, and the boiling corruption as ambience, I struggle to remember why I'm here, what I'm doing, who I am, as the maelstrom of eldritch knowledge tears through my head. Rending such useless thoughts until only a pristine, perfect worker is left behind. There's some kind of repeated sound in the background, but I can't even identify it.

At some point, I lose all awareness of anything but the words, words I only know I must write down. At least I can't comprehend pain.

As soon as the last box is packed up, I start to regain cognizance of my surroundings. I can hear a crackling noise in my head as my memory gradually returns. It's a bit disconcerting to remember who you are in bits and pieces that aren't even in order. And I become aware of how much I ache from keeping my posture.

I bite back the urge to scream; it never helped before and it won't help now. Just... Breathe. I take a good look at my soul gem and retrieve the last grief seed I was allotted. A little tap, and the darkness flows out of the jewel as it returns to its immaculate blue color. How long was it this time? The caged wall clock has its hands at quarter to twelve, which is faster than what it used to be; I bet the Incubator will try to compensate for it later. Good news is the pain hurts a little less now, so I think I can manage to haul everything back. It'd be nice if somebody else was here to do the heavy lifting, though. I'd like to be able to eat now rather than later.

As I shake my head, my peripheral vision picks up something in the window. I try to look at it, but it's hard to make out. Some kind of reddish thing is hurtling towards the window. Looks like a person. Must be one of those assholes from the other day trying to get to me again. Heh. Like to see them try to break through magical girl-proofed windows. I recline back in my chair to take in the spectacle, glad to have a distraction.

"RRRROARING WINDOW BREAKERRRRRRRR!!" it roars out as its cry of battle, a shrill voice definitely belonging to a magical girl. And I watch as that somebody kicks through magical girl-proofed windows and scatters glass and twisted metal everywhere. I'm barely aware of something silvery swinging in the breeze outside, as they crash right into the boxes and bury themselves beneath them. The work of an entire morning of suffering, ruined by some asshole. Well it serves her right.

Said boxes are thrown back with great force as this intruder stands to her feet. I realize I'm sitting here with my jaw open as I try to take in this figure. She's wearing some kind of maroon long coat over a frilly pink dress. She also has a hat, with a little lacy flower decoration... thing. Is that a pirate hat? It's a goddamn pirate hat. She's dusting herself off like nothing happened and she's dressed like a pirate, what the hell. Have I gone completely mad?

Still, what the hell?

"Oh, yeeeeeeeeaah!! It's Crunch time!" she calls out triumphantly, punching at the air, before turning to look at me.

Well, that's the trick, isn't it? Seeing as she can see around us and maybe the inside of a Silent Room is the only place we can be safe from her gaze.

Though I suspect that most other players haven't noticed the lie we told Pinky, or the measures we have to take now to keep our Homu-conversations hidden from Pinky and anyone who might talk to her about it.
They'll just blunder into letting Pinky find out, and we'll be out of Time Stop again, if not worse.

Fish? She means witching out? That's what Sayaka turns into when she turns into a Witch, then? Yes, you don't know, because you don't remember. And what the hell is the candle thing about?

"Well, a mermaid, I guess, but that's besides the point," Pinky snaps irritably as she steps away from a still-frowning Sayaka. "Like I said, it'd probably be much more easier if she just got it over with already. That way, Kyoko wouldn't go into the downward spiral she always falls into when she sees it coming and tries to do something about it. When she tries to HELP."

The eldritchian horror shakes her head, her eyes losing their golden sheen, turning a tarry, roiling black once more. "Some people should just know when to give up and STOP HELPING! You can't fix everything no matter how hard you try! It's like banging your head against a wall, do it enough times and you become a candle-head thing riding a two-dimensional HORSE!"

Silence, as you wait for the insane, corrupted personification of all your past mistakes catch her breath, her small chest heaving as she fumed. One clawed hand fanning her face, the other pulling at the collar of her bloodied stewardess costume.

"No, no, can't deal with it. Can't possibly deal with it. Need to get some air, need to get out of here. Whew." Pinky shakes her head, before turning to glare at you. "Remember what we talked about, Homura-chan. If I catch you talking to those idiots inside the Desert Eagle I gave you, then the next time we talk, you'd better be on all fours and BEGGING to lick the dirt off my shoes."

Just as you open your mouth to reply, it's here that she leans in close to you, going up on her tiptoes to plant a kiss on your cheek. Her lips soft, and bitingly cold. "Have a great day at work, honey!"

There's a sharp metallic clang, followed by the rasp of metal gears forcibly seperating from each other - and the world once more regains its color. Time resuming its flow.

"--we're nearly at the drop point! We don't have time for delays!" Sayaka's frown finally engages fully for only a second, before it's wiped out by an expression of pure revulsion. "W-what the hell? I..." She looks down on her arms, before hugging herself. "D-did it just get colder here all of a sudden? It feels like I just got hugged by a corpse, a-and--" It's here that she shrieks. "Kyoko! You're bleeding!"

"Huh?" You turn to look at the red-haired Eversor, who is in fact bleeding from somewhere on her scalp - thick red blood bisecting her face as it trickles from her forehead. "B-but I don't even remember getting cut...!"

Huh. That's...yeah, probably when Pinky threw that soul gem away and hit her on the head. Huh. So that can happen too?

"Fuck's sake, Murderface, get out of the way," Sayaka grumbles as she squeezes past you, and you watch as your equerry begins to fuss with her partner-in-crime. One hand pulling a white silk handkerchief from the pockets of her skirt, mopping up Kyoko's face, the other pressing against the redhead's scalp, a white glow suffusing her fingers. "Are you hurt anywhere else? Come on, tell me, don't try to hide it, I'm not going to patch you up if you complain later--"

...Well. Seems Pinky can be useful sometimes, besides...well, just freaking the shit out of you. Oh, and giving you back the ability to stop time, if on a limited basis.

Someday, someday you'll find out just what you did to make her into that kind of thing.

You just hope you'll be strong enough not to shoot your own Soul Gem when you do.

A few minutes later, all three of you are already geared up and ready for HALO jump insertion. You had Sayaka help you with the straps - you don't remember doing this kind of thing since basic training - and the Eversor seemed to enjoy making you complain when she tightened them a bit too much.

"Maybe next training we'll focus on getting you in shape, huh, Murderface?" Sayaka smirks, before slamming the heel of her hand against the plane's bay door OPEN button - the deafening whine of machinery soon overwhelmed by the howl of the completely black night sky outside. A yawning void, just waiting to devour the three of you. "Alright, everyone remember what we're aiming for?"

Strut A, yeah. The pumping station thing.

"Right! We'll probably get seperated when we land, so that's our waypoint just in case. Soon as you hit the water, cut your chutes and rig, swim towards the shell and make your way up. Try not to trip up the alarms BEFORE we join up again. Try to keep codec comms to a minimum, too, we're not operating with secure frequencies."

Alright already. You get it.

"Just making sure." Sayaka offers her hand to you, and you blink at it for a moment before taking it.

"Take care of yourself, Murderface." Sayaka grins at you, giving your hand a squeeze. "Don't make me the first Equerry in the Ninth to have her Warmaster killed on their first joint op together, alright?"

You find yourself grinning back, before nodding. You're not making any guarantees, but you'll try your best.

"Never gets easier, this, no matter how many times I do it." The red-haired Eversor swallows audibly, her face pale. "Anyway, uh...just like Sayaka-chan said, watch yourself when we get down there, alright? Switch on your codec headset once you get up somewhere dry so we can track you. Or you can track us."

Seems like Kyoko's not all that hot with skydiving. Who figured?

What, is she scared of heights or something? Aren't Eversors supposed to be the KNOW NO FEAR kind of crowd? Buncha crazies.

"W-what? Aw, of course not, Murderface! Jeez!" She digs an elbow into your side. "It's just, you know..." Her voice trails off in hesitant silence, before her one eye swivels to look at you. "Yeah, alright, fine. Everything about being an Eversor I can handle. This kind of thing, not really."

Huh. Well. There's a thing.

Does she want to jump together with you, then? Just, you know, no holding hands or everything. No homo.

"...Hah, you gettin' soft on me, Murderface?" Despite everything, Kyoko manages to crack her trademark toothy grin. "Naw, I'll be fine. Thanks for offerin', though, that helps plenty." The red-haired Eversor takes another deep breath, before bracing herself against the side of the plane as she inches forward. "Right. Just...one step more, and I'll be out. Down there." Swallowing hard, she turns to look at you again. "Maybe--"

You slam both hands into her parachute pack, shoving HARD - and Kyoko shrieks as she tumbles out of the bay doors, screaming your name the entire way down.

"GOD DAMMIT MURDERFAAACE!"

That's for setting you on fire all those times, you call after her, and move to follow suit - until something makes you turn back towards the plane's insides at the very last moment. It's here, then, that you see a vision of Pinky, still in her stewardess costume, waving at you. Much like a housewife waving goodbye to her husband just as he drives away to work.

One day. You'll learn just what you did.

And you'll make sure that you never forget it ever again.

Maybe just take a knife and carve it into your forearms, or something.

Tearing your eyes away from the apparition, you step off out of the plane - and spread your arms wide to let the yawning abyss take you.

Barely two seconds of freefall - the wind screaming in your ears as you streamline your body to allow for the least amount of wind resistance possible, letting you reach terminal velocity much more easily - and you remember just how much you hated skydiving.

Because it's fucking cold, that's why.

But you're not complaining. Far from it. For the first time in a long while, you're actually doing work - the real sort of work Magical Girls are supposed to do, nothing like the drudgery and the torture of paperwork. So what if you're risking hypoxia and hypothermia diving like this without an oxygen tank or a diving suit?

As long as you're as far away from being a watch-wearing dildo as possible, you'll dive naked into magma if you have to.

Keeping a close watch on your altimeter - the glow-in-the-dark digital display rapidly clicking down the hundreds, then thousands of feet as you continue your descent - You glance around, to see if you could spot Kyoko or Sayaka in the dark. Unfortunately, you see nothing, other than the pinprick lights of the looming structure of Big Shell below you.

A few moments more of freefall, and your altimeter beeps as it ticks down to 1000 feet. You immediately release your chute with a tug of your rip cord - and you clench your teeth as your breakneck descent jerks to a halt, and then into a smoother, slightly slower fall.

You brace yourself again as the now choppy waves of the sea rise up to meet you, and you find yourself gasping at just how fucking COLD it is when you splash finally splash down. The shock of it nearly punching the wind out of your lungs.

Despite that - and very nearly drowning as you manage to get yourself tangled in your chute's webbing - you actually manage to swim to the strut nearest you, its markings declaring itself to be that of Strut A's.

Some more swimming, and you manage to get into its deep sea dock - where, of all things, a miniature submarine is parked. The kind of submarine that those nature documentaries use to explore deep sea wrecks, or at least you think so.

There doesn't seem to be anybody around - no cameras either - so you pull yourself out of the freezing sea and up onto the boarding platform, as quietly as you could possibly manage under the circumstances. Which is not that quietly at all.

It's here, as you get your bearings and look around for your team mates - half-expecting Sayaka to melt from the shadows and berate you for not being quiet - that you see something peculiar: a discarded gas mask with a skull design printed on its face. The skull itself is printed to look as if it's wearing an eyepatch. It's floating around near the miniature submarine, as if somebody had just thrown it there like garbage.

Before you could investigate it, however, it's here that your codec headset starts to vibrate in your inventory, alerting you that either Sayaka or Kyoko was now trying to contact you. Shaking your head - and brushing the wet, matted hair away from your eyes - you pull it out and put it on. Crouching under cover as you do so.

"Murderface!" Sayaka. "The hell took you so long? I was calling you three minutes ago, and--"

Kept her waiting, huh?

There's a moment of silence, and you could swear you could hear Sayaka counting backwards from ten. "....Yes, you did, dumbass. Anyway, what's your location? And is Kyoko with you?"

You respond to the negative. Kyoko's not with you, she jumped before you did. You're in Strut A at the moment, though.

"Lucky." You could almost see Sayaka frowning. "I got a bit off-course, but I think I'm relatively close to your position. Make your way to Strut B, anyway, we'll meet up there. Meantime keep your channel open in case Kyoko checks in."

Right. Fine.

No. No, of course not. She's a fucking Eversor, she does this for a living. She'll be fine. You're just being paranoid.

But Pinky help you if she isn't.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

>>29824604 >>29824608 >>29824610

This is fucking BULLSHIT!

You are Sakura Kyoko, Magical Girl! You just got pushed out of the fucking plane by your now EX-BEST FRIEND FOREVER, Chiaki "MurderFARTS" Matsuda! And you were just about to get yourself fucking centered, too! A-and you were gonna say something cool before jumping, and everything!

...

Well, no, not really. You've always been terrified of jumps. Not heights, jumps. You've got no problem with heights, in fact you're pretty comfortable climbing up somewhere high, like at the top of a crane or a skyscraper scaffolding, and eating your lunch there while your legs dangle over a hundred-story drop. No problem there, no sir, no way, no how.

It's the FALLING that gets you. The...the terminal velocity thing, that you never really get if you're just jumping down from the top of an electricity pole to dive-kick some poor fuckface in the jaw. You can't quite place WHY - it's not like the fall will actually KILL YOU kill you - but you've always had that mortal fear of it. Like some sorta phobia, or something.

Anyway, no need to dwell on that now. You've managed to stop screaming long enough to hear your own altimeter beeping in alarm - and it's already ticking past 700 feet, which means that your landing isn't going to be the softest. Plus, there's also the fact that you're not going to hit the sea when you land. Far from it.

...Shit. Shit shit shit!

What do you do now?

[]Open your chute. You'll risk being seen, but at least you'll land safely.
[]Forget about the chute. Go for the hard landing, but try to land somewhere hidden.

Going MAXIMUM right out after a failed landing is probably not a good idea, as it's likely she'll get hurt in the fall (or possibly not if she goes MAXIMUM ATTACK THE GROUND TO AVOID FALL DAMAGE).

Fall secretly is risky as we'd likely take the most fall damage that way.

Pulling chute and getting seen will mean we'll trigger the alarm AND be a hanging target.

They're all bad options. Getting hurt a bit from the fall and not making that much of a splash is probably a better option in my view.

Alright, shit. You'll have to go for the hard landing, here - and you've been through enough of them to know that this is going to hurt like a bitch no matter what you do. All you can do is try to make your impact less of a noisier one.

As the roof of the building begins to fill your vision, hurtling towards you at pretty much breakneck speed - it's here that you tear your chute pack away from your back with one hand, while manifesting your spear again with the other. Whirling your spear once, you stab the triangular point of your signature pigsticker right into the pack - pushing it in just enough that it's stuck firmly into the thick, folded nylon material but not penetrating all the way through. Forming a sort of padding for the spearpoint.

A moment more - one moment closer to being reduced to a fine, meaty paste all over steel roofing - and you grit your teeth as you force your body into one streamlined shape, your spear forming the impact point as you point it towards the rapidly-approaching ground with both hands.

Not the smartest thing you've done, but...well. You've done worse.

THUMP. Your padded spearpoint finally hits the steel roofing - not with a crash, not with a stab, but a thump. Right at that exact moment, you force your spear to collapse, segment by segment - each chained section falling apart as the brute force of the impact itself begins to travel up your weapon.

Each segment's destruction dampening the shock, reducing it to nothing more than a numbing sting by the time it gets to you at the very end. Slowing down your own fall, too - enough that you only get a bunch of cracked ribs and a dislocated arm by the time you crash on top of your own, now-useless chute pack.

JESUS FUCK WHAT THE HELL DO YOU MEAN, JUST A BUNCH OF CRACKED RIBS AN' A DISLOCATED ARM?

IT FUCKING HURTS, GOD. YOU DON'T USE 'JUST' WHEN LISTING THAT KIND OF SHIT OFF.

Biting back your own screams, you force yourself to go completely still, hoping to hell that whoever's inside the building you've crashed onto doesn't think to check out just what landed on their roof.

You wait for a couple of moments, bracing yourself to burst into action the moment you hear something approaching you - but there's nothing, nothing except your own pounding heartbeat thundering in your ears.

...Well. Shit. Guess your luck is holding a bit, then.

Slowly, carefully, and painfully - you pick yourself back up. Taking care not to make too much noise as you cancel your spear's manifestation, making it disappear in a small flare of crimson flame. You wince as you grab your dislocated arm - looks like it's just popped out of joint on your elbow. Easily fixed.

Just as you make to force it back into the joint - placing one of your chute's straps between your teeth to help you keep quiet - it's here that you catch a conversation coming from somewhere below you. Two guys from the sound of it, middle-aged.

"Christ, did you hear that noise? Sounded like something landed up there."

"Really? It sounded kind of heavy for one."

"...What, you want me to check it out?"

"Could you? This place gives me the creeps already. Bad enough we had to call in some sparklies to help patrol the fucking place."

"Alright. Just sit tight here, and don't finish all the fucking whisky before I get back."

What do you do?

Hide! Yeah, you can probably put this guy away easily, but you'd much rather focus on not being spotted for now. Besides, Sayaka and Murderface - MurderFARTS, you correct yourself - were really into the whole sneaky attack plan, and you wouldn't want to be the one to spoil things for the two of them. Even though they can be two stupid dildoes sometimes.

Grabbing your chute pack with your good hand and slinging it over your shoulder, you look around for somewhere to hide. ...Not much luck there, unless you wanted to gamble hiding behind one of the airconditioning units chugging along on the roof.

It's here, then, that you spot what looks to be a pile of folded carboard boxes, just beside the door leading down from the roof and into the building. And they're the big, corrugated-cardboard sort, too - the ones they use for supplies and really big equipment. You'd probably fit in one if you scrunched yourself down enough--

The rattling of the door's handle alerts you to the fact that whoever's being sent to check on the roof is very, very close.

Shit! Nothing for it! You take one from the pile, assemble it as best as you could, before crouching down and pulling it over you. Just in time for the door to creak open, and a rather well-armed silhouette to step out onto the roof.

"...Well, there's nothing here. Fuckin'..." The man grumbles, before turning back towards the way he came. "There's nothing in here! Must've been the seagulls, like I told you!"

Yeah, that's right. Just the seagulls. You'd caw here, just to add to the effect, but you feel that it'd just be giving yourself away. And you're not too confident with your seagull mimicry skills, at that.

"Just give it a good check! You know we have to report that kind of thing!"

No! NO! You don't need to report that kind of thing, you dildo! Jesus! What kind of security detail are you? Just go ahead and keep boozin', there are no strange magical girls up here!

"...Fine, whatever."

NO! GOD DAMMIT!

You will yourself to stop screaming in rage and frustration as you watch the silhouette unsling the rifle from his shoulder, holding it easy between two hands. "Right, I'm gonna give this place a sweep, but I swear if I come back down an' there's no more whisky left, I'm gonna tan your damn hide for this."

Christ. Looks like he's gonna snoop around.

Fuck, Murderface probably never got into this kind of shit, did she? Ahh, you'll have to make sure no one finds out about this. EVER.

What do you do?

No! No, chill! You remind yourself to calm down as you watch the silhouette start to lazily make its way around the roof, briefly stopping to stub its booted toe on one of the airconditioning units and spit expletives. The box hides you from plain sight, it conceals you from detection! Believe in the box, and it will serve you well! Maximum believe!

You continue to repeat this mantra to yourself, willing back the impulse trained into every Eversor ever contracted to burst out of cover just go nuts on the guy. Soon enough, it actually pays off - with the security detail shaking his head, slinging his rifle back over his shoulder and making his way back down to the lower floor - slamming the door closed behind him.

"Happy now? Nothing up there. Nothing but cardboard boxes, airconditioning units and a whole lot of seagull shit. Now, where's the whisky?"

"W-what..." The second voice replies, slurring. "What whissshky?"

Silence.

"YOU FUCKER! YOU DRANK IT ALL! AND I TOLD YOU TO SAVE ME SOME, YOU DRUNK PADDY BASTARD!"

Huh! That actually worked! You carefully lift the box off of you as you stand up, ignoring the sound of frantic scuffling and muffled cursing in the floor below you. You thought that only worked in videogames and shit!

After a moment's hesitation, you fold the box back into its more compact form, before stuffing it into your inventory. Might come in handy later, you never know, right?

You dump the rest of the boxes on top of your now-useless chute pack, too, just to make sure it doesn't get found that easily. You'd throw it off the ledge and into the sea, but you think that'd cause more of a commotion than just hiding it.

It's also here that you take time to fix your arm. Nothing all that complicated - a simple twist with your other arm while pulling away with your shoulder, and you're back to a hundred percent again! Well, probably not a complete hundred percent, as you've still got those cracked ribs, but maybe you're not perfect, so that's okay.

Right. So. First order of business - to try and contact those two dildos you call your team mates. They're probably thinking that you got lost and ended up in the bottom of the sea or something.

You pull out your codec headset and put it on - but instead of the comforting static it has when it's trying to cycle through available operation channels, all you get is dead air - which means something's wrong with the headset itself. Shit. Must've been jostled too hard when you landed, or something.

Eh, nevermind. You know where you're all supposed to be meeting up in, anyway. Strut A, right? Now you just have to find out where you are at the moment, and then it's a simple matter of not being seen as you make your way towards Strut A. Easy enough!

Using another one of your collapsing spears, you rappel down the side of the building you crashed into - the closer look revealing that it's not just a building, but a warehouse. One situated behind what looks like a Helipad.

Warehouse. Helipad. That means...

...Shit, that's how far off target you were?! Strut H?!

This is not the strut you're looking for! That one is clear across the other side! Fuck!

Wait, wait. No need to panic. It's okay. You just have to be more careful, yeah? Stick to the shadows and everything. Callidus-style. Yeah, you never really paid attention to that part of basic training, but you can certainly improvise.

You let go of your spear as you reach the last few feet to solid ground - or solid gangway, at least, the ones that lead from strut to strut. One of them in particular, the one to your left, leads from the current strut you're on and bridges over to the other shell - where you believe Strut A should be. That path itself looks pretty clear of guards or staff - just a few of its areas lit by searchlights. Not a problem, you can handle that.

"Alright, asshole." A voice - rough and snarling, and digitized by a helm vox to sound all the more meaner - suddenly spits behind you. "I don't care who you are or who you're working for, but you ain't supposed to be here - and that makes you MINE."

Punctuating those words is the double-click of two guns' safeties being disengaged.

You let out a sigh, here. Fine. You tried your best. Honestly, sneaking around isn't really your style, but...well, you thought it'd actually work! And it was! Until, of course, you suddenly get found out by Big Bad Robovoice right this moment. Which is total and extreme bullshit.

Well, no real big loss. This was gonna happen, anyway. If Sayaka or Murderface chews you out of it, you'll just say that you really, really tried.

"Well, I ain't that cruel, really. Maybe I do want to know who I'm talkin' to, at least, so's we know where to send the body." Your would-be captor chuckles through his vox, the sound twisted to sound more like a tank changing gears. "Now, why don't you turn around slow-like? We don't have to make this a messy affair an' everything, just be all civilized an' shit. No sparkly shit, though, please? I'm allergic. And when I get allergic, my trigger finger gets all itchy."

...Clever. You slowly turn on your heel, keeping your face as impassive as possible. Both hands

It's here, then, that both you and your opponent get a good look at each other. And truth be told, you were expecting a Culexus to have gotten the drop on you.

Turns out you're wrong. The suit itself is similar, but it's not as...spiky or as biker-like as the Culexus suit. Rather, it's a bit more streamlined, a bit more...glossy. The helmet's in sort of a weird skull shape that reminds you oddly of a frog's, with red-tinted visor eyes. Something's up with its boots, too, which doesn't look like bots at all but really high-tech looking shoes with claws affixed on the toes. Probably for climbing or something.

Oh, and it has boobs. So she's definitely a girl.

For her part, she seems to be largely unimpressed, too. "...At least yer eyepatch looks cool," she remarks through her vox-corrupted voice. "Alright, let's hear it. What's your--"

You didn't wait for her to finish. You manifested your spear as quickly as you can, focusing it to materialize between your already gripping fingers - and as soon as it appeared, you made your first cut with your spear's blade. The slicing edge of your spear cutting right into your attacker's neck joint, between her suit and her helmet.

It's...you're not proud of that hit. You don't kill unless you have to, or ordered to. But fuck if you're going to risk jeopardizing this mission just because you balked, and--

"That's a mistake."

You blink, here, and turn back towards the armored girl you've just killed. Only you didn't really kill her - someHOW, she managed to cover her neck joint with a gauntleted hand, preventing you from making the kill right then and there. All you managed to cut into was her own hand, evidenced by the blood now dripping down your spear's triangular blade.

N-norway. NO FUCKING WAY!

"Gotta say, that was pretty fuckin' quick, though. I'd've been floatin' back to Sentosa a headless corpse if you were just a tiny bit faster." You then hear a grin in her voice, something even the vox is unable to scrub away with its corruption. "Or luckier."

You attempt to tug your spear free - to have another go at skewering this smug bitch - but for some reason, she's able to prevent you from doing so, and all by just holding the blade. "What's the rush? I asked your name, right?" You tug harder, here, but it just wouldn't budge. "Alright, givin' you ten seconds to answer. Five--"

Wait. WAIT. What the fuck happened to TEN?! She can't just cut to five--

"CAN AND WILL, BITCH! FOUR-THREE-TWO-ONE! TIME!" It's here that your captor cackles as she raises her other gun, nakedly aiming for your face. "EAT LEAD, FUCKFACE--"

You grit your teeth to brace yourself to dodge - when a deafening, blinding explosion from the other shell rocks the entire facility. Causing tremors to rattle the very structure itself, making the struts creak and groan and grind at each other. Both you and your would-be murderer stumbling, swaying, trying to regain your balance. Thanks to her armor, though, she gets her footing quicker than you. "Wait, wait, what the fuck's going on, I don't--"

Another explosion, this time louder, and brighter - and the two of you turn to see Strut B go up in flames. This is then followed by all the lights - ALL - in Big Shell shutting down, or simply switching off.

"NO! Shit, that's the Transformer Room! We've got no eyes and ears!" Your captor spits, her helm's crimson-red visor glowing in the dark. "Freon? Freon, do you copy? Freon, Strut B's fucked, we've got no power. ...Yeah, of course I fucking know! And I know who did it too, I--SHIT! HEY, GET BACK HERE!"

"WOULD YOU FUCKING REALLY, IF SOMEONE ASKED YOU TO?" You scream back into the darkness as you book it - using what little light the stars and the moon are giving you to navigate your way to the other Shell. Thanking your luck that Murderface and Sayaka went ahead and blew up Strut B without you. Of course, you're going to be pissed that they didn't let you see the fireworks from up close, but...this is good. Yeah. This is good.

Still, what the fuck was back there?! No one's been able to catch that kind of hit from you ever. Just...just what kind of sparkly was that?!

In the chaos of the blackout, you make it safely across - the darkness and the apparent commotion of the workers making good cover for you.

It's here, too, that you spot two brightly-colored dots heading towards you, from Strut B - and you grin as you recognize them. Sayaka and Murderface, pushing past the crowd. The latter stuffing something into her Shield.

"SAYAKA!" You yell, waving your hand. "SAYAKA! OVER HERE!"

"KYOKO!" The blue-haired Eversor's eyes go wide, and she frantically waves you down. "Jesus Christ, shut up and stay down! You'll--"

You never hear the rest of her sentence, as another explosion - this time, from behind you - completely drowns it in its bassy, echoing roar.

...Wait. How? How did--

You try to move, to pull yourself to an upright position - only to see your right leg gone.

Completely sheared off from the knee. The stump there smoking, cauterized, misting blood.

It's strange. It...well, your leg's been fucking shot off. First time that's ever happened.

But it doesn't hurt at all. No pain whatsoever.

"Sayaka, what happened? I was just--" You try to look for her - and you see Murderface forcing Sayaka to get behind cover, behind a particularly thick-looking gantry. "SAYAKA!"

"KYOKO! KYOKO, STAY DOWN!" It's Murderface. "There's a sniper! Just stay down! I'll get you!"

A...A sniper...? But--

It's then that you see a bright, crimson dot slowly travel from the fingertip of your outstretched hand to your elbow.

...Oh.

Another explosion. Another burst of crimson.

And this time, it really hurt.

Enough for you to scream.

Chiaki probably has more experience with snipers and how to deal with them, and if things really go bad, we have 2 unused timestops now that we could use to get Kyoko to safety in an emergency. The fact the sniper is not targeting Kyokos soul gem but shooting off limbs which can be regrown, implies that she/he is trying to lure Chiaki and Sayaka to the line of fire to be shot in turn. Chiaki has the experience to realise that as a vindicare and act right, while Sayaka probably does not.

Besides, Sayaka might be freaking out and not necessarily the best option here considering a sniper is shooting Kyoko who is her lover.

A woman in a simple, tasteful gray coat walked along the side of Paris' Champs-Elysees. She walked purposefully, piercing blue eyes scanning the midday shopping crowd around her, before stopping at the door to one of the street's many upscale cafes and looking around the seating area. The one she was looking for rarely made herself easy to find; quite the opposite, as was her habit (and her hobby, and once in a while, her greatest joy in life). But once in a while…

Once in a while she sat in a cafe, blonde hair brilliant as the sun, in fashion that may have been purchased just minutes ago. Their eyes met for a fraction of a moment, and she gave a small but enthusiastic wave.

The blue-eyed woman smiled happily and moved quickly to the table. "Salut, Monique! Comment ca va?" She spoke a bit louder than necessary. Several of the patrons at the surrounding tables glanced over disapprovingly, then paid the loud woman no further mind.

"Severine!" her partner squealed, though she forced it down just slightly lower - ever so slightly. In an instant, she stood to brush her lips to the other woman's cheeks, an age-old ritual that surely predated answering simple questions. "Tres bien, tres bien~ Et toi? Asseyez-vous, asseyez-vous~"

"Merci, merci." The other woman sat quickly, leaning to rest her elbows on the table. In a lower voice, she added, "It's good to see you again."

The blonde beamed as she settled back in. "Likewise. Thank you for doing me this little courtesy. You've been very busy, haven't you?" It was a smile that could almost be confused for fake, in its odd, grey sincerity.

'Severine' smiled wryly. "Busy is one way to put it. Jumping at shadows and skulking about behind the scenes might be more accurate. It's not the way I prefer to operate, but I didn't really have much choice."

“We do what we must. As a professional skulker, I can assure you, you get used to it.” ‘Monique’s’ smile melted, turned unquestionably kind for at least a few moments. “And if anyone can pull them through this, it’s you. Just hang in there.”

Severine snorted. “They don’t even know I’m still alive. You have any idea how that damned cat is going to react when he finds out? To say nothing of the Russian.”

Monique’s voice twisted, distorted for a moment, now high and inhuman. “I prefer my assets to be available to deploy at my convenience. It would be ill-advised to continue as you have where I cannot make proper use of your abilities.” It was only for a moment, however - after she cleared her throat, her voice returned to its purring soprano. “If he’s anything like ours, anyway.”

“Heh. More or less, yes. Just with more screenings, interrogations, and time in a Silent Room.” Severine crossed her legs. “But enough about that. What have you been up to while I’ve been playing dead? I’ve heard a few things recently.”

Monique quirked an eyebrow, a bemused expression playing its way onto her face only to be interrupted with coffee arriving, and the pleasantries involved.

“You’ve heard things? Do go on.”

Her friend accepted her cup with a word of thanks, and sipped before answering. “The unfortunate accident that befell a certain Foreign Minister recently. That nasty business in Uganda. Need I go on?”

“Now, now, isn’t it a little rude to assume we’re involved in EVERY suspicious thing that happens?” She brought her coffee to her lips, then yanked it away, scowling at the cup. Too hot. Much too hot. “Although it’s true that a certain Minister was making it a little difficult for a few of our continued operations. I would just call it...good luck? Or kismet, if I was feeling romantic. And I usually am.”

Severine spread her hands with a smile. “Of course, of course. I congratulate you on your stroke of luck. I was merely curious. Your operations do have a certain...style to them, for someone who knows where to look for it.”

The blonde giggled, flashing her friend a grin. “Well, I have never been accused of modesty. It drives the cat up the wall sometimes, though - everything needs to have a certain style. He says it isn’t clean, but I’ve always thought there was something to adding a little flavor. The most private place is a room full of people, and all that.”

“Indeed. I admit, you’ve always been better at that side of things than I. I much prefer to not be seen at all. Removes that chance of detection. And my methods are admittedly somewhat more...direct...than yours.”

“It’s just the game of it, I guess...we’re both old ladies, let’s not kid ourselves, here. We’ve been doing this for a long time. Sometimes you just need to...spice it up a little bit. Keep it fresh, keep it fun. But the way I see it, whether a man dies in an explosion, an accident, or from a shot to the head from five kilometers away, he’s dead.”

Severine let out a bark of laughter. “Don’t let the cat hear that, he’ll go on for hours about the collateral damage the last time I tried to ‘spice up’ an operation.” She paused. “Okay, in all fairness, a stolen Davy Crockett is not the most efficient way I’ve ever killed someone, but damned if it wasn’t fun. I’m told the whole town’s still uninhabitable.”

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

Kyoko's hurt.

No...no, calm down. It's...she's still okay. As long as her Soul Gem's intact, she's okay.

You're a Magical Girl, and things are going to shit. So much shit.

If you could only get to Kyoko...

No, fuck it, you have to get out there! If only Murderface would--

"Fucking shut up. Keep quiet." Murderface growls, her arm around your waist, the other pulling your arm back. "Sniper's got a clear shot on her Soul Gem. She sees either of us move, and Kyoko's gone. So stay. Fucking. Put."

You're about to hiss that you don't give a shit - that you could get to Kyoko faster than a sniper can track you - when you see the other dots of crimson emerging from the other struts, coming to life in the darkness. The sound of dozens of footsteps thundering hard on metal grating, punctuated by the heavy metallic clicks of a hundred machine guns being loaded, their safeties disengaged.

"Seventy...eighty of them out there, probably." Murderface whispers in your ear, still keeping you in an iron grip. ...Fuck, how'd she get so strong so suddenly? She doesn't have any of that Golden shit out, how the hell is she holding you back? "...Just 70 points for all of them? Breaking my balls here, Risa. ...200 for the girls? Oh, that's fucking insane."

...What? What points? What the fuck is she talking about?

You glare at your Warmaster here, and she merely blinks at you, before shaking her head. "...Nevermind. Look, I have an idea. It's...it's not the best idea I've ever come up with, but I think it'll work, and--"

"GRAAAAHHHHH!" Kyoko screams suddenly, cutting her off. You try to struggle out of Murderface's grasp again, clawing at her arm.

"Murderface, for fuck's sake! I HAVE TO--" You start to yell. "You asshole, I'll KILL you--"

"She's fine. Kyoko's fine." With another burst of sudden strength, Murderface pulls you back. "Seriously, she's okay."

OKAY?! Her fucking leg and arm--

"FUUUCK! THAT SUCKED!" Kyoko, again, this time sounding much more angry rather than hurt. No, scratch that, she's fucking mad. "MY GODDAMN ARM! MY FUCKING LEG!"

"See? She's alright." Murderface hisses. "She won't be if we make any sudden moves. I know what kind of sniper's got her, and she's probably trained to kill Eversors if I'm any judge." She looks at you pointedly. "Eversors like you."

"Alright, shut yer trap." Another voice comes on - female, obviously, but speaking through a vox-speaker, so it's all digitized and shit. "Somebody get the emergency lights on for fuck's sake! And where's the spotlights?!"

Some hurried conversation, and two spotlights erupt into life from the two nearest struts - each one focusing on your position. Lighting up the base of the gantry Murderface had pulled you behind for cover.

Some hurried conversation, and two spotlights erupt into life from the two nearest struts - each one focusing on your position. Lighting up the base of the crane grantry Murderface had pulled you behind for cover.

"Nice, thanks." The voice calls. "Now, I know this one's not alone, and someone's definitely behind there. So why don't we all just settle down and talk about this like normal folk, hmm? You know, get to apologizin' for blowin' up our transformer room." The voice pauses for a moment. "Unless, ya know, you want our sniper just givin' her the Lady's Peace and everything."

"I'm alone, ya idiot!" Kyoko snaps. "I don't need backup to get into this floating tin can!"

"Really now?" The voice sounds amused. "Then tell me, how the hell did you blow up the strut at the other fucking end of the OTHER shell, huh?"

"That's easy, I blew it up by my magical powers of FUCK YOU!" The red-haired Eversor snarls.

"...Cute." The digited vox speaker chuckles. "Anyway, whoever's behind that there gantry? Ya got 10 seconds before I put this bitch down permanent. Starting...now! TEN! NINE!"

"Okay, so here's my idea." Murderface turns to you, with that small, smug smile of hers that you wish you punched off during training. "You stay here while I turn myself in. Once they're gone, I want you to continue with our mission. Find that thing. I'll meet you back in Strut E for our evac."

What. WHAT?!

IS SHE CRAZY? That's the worst idea you've ever heard! SHE IS SHIT AT IDEAS. THE WORST.

"SIX...! FIVE! Shit, I'm gettin' bored here...!"

You have another plan. A better plan. Just get out there and START KILLING.

"That'll get us ALL killed." Murderface shakes her head. "And I'm supposed to be the unreliable one, remember?" It's here that she takes something out of her inventory and presses it into your hand. A...pocketwatch? "Only if you're really and absolutely fucked, open it and press hard on the face. Then cover your eyes or something."

This just reminded me that I meant to draw Midori in Madoka's costume a long time ago and forgot. I'll write it down this time.

Anyways, to stop derailing, no, I don't get bent out of shape over constructive criticism. The Midori "I'm an expert on this subject" got critiqued by a friend who mentioned that the face, neck and collarbones don't algun very well. I tried to fix it and still messed up. That kind of criticism, I look forward to because it helps me improve.

I like Midori's costume, and I'm really happy for all the praise it got, but If someone had said "it could have been better like this", I would have been happy to hear that too.

Anyways, I'll shut up now and go back to work...

"ONE! Alright, you asked for it--"

Fine. FINE! You'll go along with her fucking idea. THERE.

"ALRIGHT ALREADY! I'M COMING OUT!" Murderface roars back. "Remember what I said," She whispers to you. "Hide, get that thing we're supposed to recover, and then meet me with Kyoko at Strut E. You can do that, right?"

Of fucking course you can. But what about her? And seriously, this is the worst idea--

Another smirk. "I'll be fine. And you think that's bad? Stick around, I'm full of bad ideas."

It's here that Murderface lets go of you - and slowly, she stands up and out of cover, both hands up in the air. She takes a slow step forward, then another, and you watch as her entire front gets painted in red laser dots. "

"Well, now!" The voice from earlier crows. "Full of shit, just like I thought." There's the tell-tale thump of a boot toe going into some ribs, and you grit your teeth as you hear Kyouko curse in pain a moment later. "Don't like liars much, I'll tell you that. And I don't know how you idiots do things in your two-bit Officio, but we got a very special dislike for 'em in ours." Another thump, and Kyouko curses again, making you regret your decision all the more. Making your hand tighten around Blueberry Cheesecake Brownie's handle.

"...Not much of an Officio, then, if it's got fuckers like you kicking other people when they're down. And dismembered." You hear Murderface's voice then, in her usual deadpan growl.

"That a fact?" A clack of an oversized handgun's slide being racked. "I'll keep it in mind, then. Speakin' of Officios, where'd the both of you come from? Huh? Tenth or something? Figure you're Tenth, if you're as shitty as this."

"Ninth." Murderface replies after a moment, and you're surprised to hear a note of pride in her voice. "Both of us."

"Oh, that right?" The voice guffaws, then. "Hey! Hey, Zero! Pawn! Get down here! We got ourselves a couple live ones from the Murderers! Isn't this our lucky day or what?!"

Another vox-altered voice, this one sounding a bit more sedate than the first, replies, but it's too quiet for you to hear. "Well, fuck that! Who gives a shit if Freon wants to see 'em alive? I say we ventilate them here and now, then dump 'em overboard as chum for the sharks--"

The second voice replies again, much more insistent this time. There's a bit of a back and forth between it and the first - just as emergency lights begin to flare up from all around Big Shell.

"Kyoko, you okay?" Murderface's voice. "Need a hand?"

"Aw, fuck you, Murderface." Kyoko's pained own, but you don't even need to look to know that she's smiling. "...I'm okay. Hurts like a bitch, though."

"Fine, alright! GOD! The both of you can be so fucking boring sometimes!" The first voice is almost unbearbly grating in its petulance, like a spoiled brat complaining that she didn't get the right color of car on her birthday. "Fine, check 'em for weapons, lock 'em up in Strut F until Freon gets bored." The voice curses underneath its breath. "You're lucky Freon thinks you're worth keeping around for a bit longer. Up to me, I'd just leave you to the fucking sharks."

"...Good thing you're not, then--" You hear Murderface start, before the rest of her sentence gets cut off by another thump, and then what sounds like a sack of potatoes getting dumped on the floor.

"Real cute," The armored Magical Girl chuckles again, drawing back her gloved fist, her clenched fingers flecked with blood. You watch as Murderface tries to get up - but she's forced back down on the grating with a kick to her ribs. Another attempt - and this time, the armored Magical Girl unclips something long and rectangular from her belt, and presses it against the back of Murderface's neck.

What you hear, then, is something you wish you would never hear again - Murderface actually screaming in pain, before falling unconscious.

Jesus. Jesus Christ, Murderface.

"SOP with Captured Magical Girls, go." The Magical Girl claps her hands together after a very long moment. "Inventory check, confiscate any weapons an' personal effects, Soul Gem retrieval, Silent Room. Go." Another storm of footsteps, and you see the soldiers - also similarly armored, but to a lesser extent than the girl - crowd around your two colleagues. Soon they're marching out of there, with your girlfriend and your Warmaster in tow.

One of them is left behind, however - and you're surprised that you didn't notice her before. A short girl, probably a few inches taller than Misaka, with short silver hair and a sullen expression on her face.

A Magical Girl, no doubt Her costume is a strange, almost uniform-like sort that reminds you of Murderface's, oddly enough - a blouse and skirt number that could pass off as a somewhat excitedly-designed schoolgirl uniform, with long sleeves and stockings. The only thing magical about her is the black cat ears sticking out of her head and the tail swishing behind her legs.

Oh, and you suppose the huge fuckoff antimaterial rifle slung around her shoulders is sorta Magical too. In the way that only a Magical fucking Girl can fire that kind of thing with any accuracy.

"...Wait," She calls out to the main group. "There might be someone else..."

"Christ, Zero, just fucking make up your mind. Did ya see another MG there or no?"

ZERO seems to be slightly indecisive, here, before another armored Magical Girl comes in, stepping from the crowd. "Revy, we talked about not giving Zero a hard time. I'll go and check."

We have multiple inventories. We have our normal inventory, which contains mostly drugs. We have the magical inventory in our shield, which probably contains enough ordinance to sink this platform by weight alone. I think we also have a third inventory on Tiny Pete which I believe to be empty and whose mechanics I don't fully remember.

I doubt that Pinky will allow these goons access to the magical shield inventory, but they may simply deny us access to it by taking our shield off. And if the shield won't come off in the usual way...it's not like they've shown themselves to be averse to limb-severing.

We carried on a conversation with Risa while the chainaxes were embedded in the ceiling of the training room. The Shield is Homura's and Chiaki's magical weapon. Removing it means that she can simply summon it back. There's no point to trying remove a magical girl's "weapon". However, they can remove our guns from our physical inventory. Shield space is quite likely Chiaki-only

It doesn't mean that it's a trap, it could simply be a prudent security measure for a base that is protecting high value assets that may be the target of a Magical Girl raid. If the base IS targeted by Magical Girls, it gives the occupying forces the option of taking them captive and questioning them instead of forcing them to kill any girl on sight.

You grab hold of your cape with one hand - bundling it so it wouldn't flare out suddenly if a gust of wind hit it - and slowly, carefully, you retreat. Keeping the approaching armored Magical Girl in your line of sight as you do so.

Thankfully, this shithole of an offshore rig has a lot of places for you to hide and take cover in. The lack of light - a by-product of Murderface blowing up Strut B - also gave you a lot of shadowed areas to work with. Soon, you manage to sneak away and get yourself behind a safer bit of cover, a few meters away from where you began - and you watch as the one named 'Pawn' cautiously checks the spot where you and Murderface hunkered down earlier.

"...All clear." Pawn waves an armored hand back at the group - causing the one called 'Revy' to guffaw loudly. "You sure you saw a cape, Zero, or just her costume? I mean, it's your first time with the Anzio, right?"

"W-well, yes...but I'm...um..." Zero looks at Pawn, then at Revy. "...Maybe...maybe I did see something else..."

"See? Now, come on, we're wastin' time!" Revy shakes her helmeted head, before tromping off with the other armored troops. "Fuck's sake...we had to bring someone greener than Pawn to THIS op?"

The group starts to leave for real this time, but not after Zero herself giving the spot you'd just vacated one last time. She seems to want to say something, but thinks better of it and runs back towards the group, asking them to wait.

Soon enough, you're left alone, with two of your teammates carried off to Strut F, taking with them what looks like most of Big Shell's security detail. ...Kyoko always told you to look at the bright side of things, so if there's a bright side to THIS, it's made snooping around the other Shell easier.

Sticking to the shadows, you leave the security detail-infested Shell 1 for Shell 2.

Keeping the mission in mind, you have this entire shell to comb for clues as to where your main objective is. The Shell 2 Core looks pretty fucking obvious from here, but something tells you you should look around first.

Plus there's an entire squad of security detail milling about the entrance to the Shell Core itself, and you don't want to raise the alarm just yet.

In any case, you're now at Strut H, which seems to contain a large warehouse as well as a helipad hanging off its side. You can easily get to any of the other struts without being seen, but you'll have to choose carefully. Moving around unnecessarily might get you spotted.

Where do you go looking first?

You decide to search Strut H, first. You're already here, anyway - might as well start here and work your way around the other struts. Something inside the warehouse might clue you in just as to what kind of opposition you're facing here, too.

The Heliport doesn't look like it's guarded much, so you stop by there, first. There are two choppers parked - one of them looks like a bog-standard people-mover, with no armaments of any kind, while the other is completely the opposite.

Seriously, you saw this thing in an American movie once, blowing up shit like it's nobody's business. Black all over with stubby wings stuffed with missiles, rocket launchers, and even a fucking gatling gun on the nose? Yeah, definitely not just a people mover, and it's made all the more obvious by the XVI logo tampoed on its side, in golden lettering.

...No one seems to be looking around, and you can probably get away with doing something before anyone spots you.

Nnnh. Much as you'd really like how this fancy attack chopper would look like cut into two perfect halves, you decide that it's not worth the risk. It's much too flashy anyway - and there'd be no one else to see it except you.

You climb inside instead, pulling out Blueberry Cheesecake Brownie from its sheath carefully as you do so. If you're not going to cut this tin can in half, you might as well make it as useless as it would be if you did. Just that no one else would be able to find out until they tried to fly it.

Prising off one of the switches on the pilot's dashboard, you carefully slip the blade's point into the gap, pushing harder and wiggling it a bit the moment you find resistance.

A few more inches - until nearly half the entire sword is swallowed up by the electronics - and it's here that you press the trigger on Blueberry Cheesecake Brownie's handle, activating its electrified high-frequency function. Quickening the entire crimson length with killing lightning.

Predictably, sparks start to fly from the point of contact - and soon you're smelling the acrid scent of circuits and wires burning. You repeat this with the other consoles, until the stink of fried electronics is enough to make you choke. You finally step out a few moments later, shoving Blueberry Cheesecake Brownie back into its sheath and skulking back into cover.

You're no fucking chopper pilot, but even you know that no helicopter can fly with all of its electronic shit fried and melting in its consoles. A little gift for the XVI to remember you by - along with you killing every single fucking one of them in this offshore rig.

Your next stop in Strut H is the warehouse. It's a three-story warehouse, and the front door's all but open. There doesn't seem to be any guards around right at the moment, and a quick peek through it shows a relatively empty-looking first floor. You're not sure at all, though.

What do you do?

[]Work with the element of surprise. Charge in, be ready to throw a sword into the face of whoever you encounter.
[]Leave the warehouse and go for the other Struts. Probably nothing worthwhile inside it anyway.

I'm sure we'll find SOMETHING here. There's no chance that choosing to search the warehouse is going to result in Deculture going "Hahahaha! It was empty! You assholes just wasted two hours of everyone's time!" However, We'll also find SOMETHING at every one of the other struts.

What I'm trying to say is that due to the inherent time constraints of this format, we have no chance of finding EVERYTHING. Thus, being methodical and thorough is pointless because it will just cause us to miss something else at a strut we will never get a chance to visit. The best option is to spend as little time as possible at any given strut unless there is something that NEEDS to be addressed, before we decide to strike at the core and complete the mission.

You slip through the gap left by the front door being ajar as quickly and silently as you can, before immediately going into cover behind the first thing you see. Which...well, is a houseplant. A tall one, enough to at least break up your form and help you blend in with the shadows.

...Well. It doesn't look much like a warehouse at all - in fact, it looks like it's been converted into some sort of barracks, most probably for the security detail, judging by the rows upon rows of lockers on one side and double-decker beds on the other. There's also a gun rack at the very end, near the staircase leading up to the second floor, mostly emptied but still sporting a riot shotgun or two.

A quick check, and you confirm that the room is clear of any personnel. No idea yet about the second floor, but you hear a faint snoring coming from there.

What do you do, now?

[]Investigate all the floors first before doing anything.
[]Leave, go for another strut of your choice. No chance of you dressing up as a dildo, you'll leave that to Murderface.

Not so much as I care about going full dildo, but the cape has already proved to be awkward, a distraction AND highly recognisable.

Thats what I am saying.

After that it remains to be seen if we truly are the real Homura Akemi.

It may be semantics but its not like we fucked the world up. Its not that Chiaki did all those things. Homura did. And I think somwhere down the line we have to decide if we are still Homura or if we are a person who was dragged into this because her body once, long ago, belonged to a person named Akemi Homura who decided to fuck up everything forever.

Boldly said, but either choice is going to carry negative consequences. If we don't feed her, she may decide to revoke access to our time stop (and possibly even our magic inventory) entirely. She may turn from a benign albeit temperamental presence and start actively sabotaging us. And maybe the next time she comes across us holding a tasty-looking soul gem belonging to one of our subordinates, she might not ask permission before taking it for herself.

Then again, maybe she won't find these girls from the 16th appetizing, or maybe we are forced to shatter their gems in combat.

You decide to investigate first. If you're going to play dress-up, might as well do it AFTER you've made sure the entire building is clean. Otherwise you might risk being caught unaware, and you're not having that.

Holding Blueberry Cheesecake Brownie at the ready - sheathed but at your side, with your finger on the trigger - you carefully ascend the steps leading to the second floor. What you see is another room full of lockers and beds, pretty much the same as the first.

One of the beds, however, seem to be sporting a Murder Mayumi dakimakura - the usually-stoic antiheroine looking flustered and uncomfortable, her stockings torn up and her skirt hiked up to her waist.

Ugh. Absolutely disgusting.

You shake your head and continue up to the third floor, where the snoring seems to be coming from. And as you ascend - slowly, step by step, making sure that you're not being snuck up on from behind - that you see a rather miserable sight greet you at the top of the stairs: two of the armed security detail, armored from head to toe, but their helmets taken off, and bottles of cheap whiskey in their hands. From the looks of the empty crates and bottles here, the two had been sneaking drinks every so often.

...Well, that's one mystery solved. Just some drunkards snoring off the booze - a sight you're quite familiar of, seeing as your Warmaster had spent much time in the same state before she started calling herself 'Chiaki'.

Hnh. No, you're still not comfortable with the idea of her being Warmaster, but...you do have to give her credit for trying her best.

Anyway. What do you do now?

[]Kill them. Better to get rid of them now than wait for them to be a bother later.
[]Leave them be. They're just a couple of drunks. Get on with the mission.

You frown at the two snoring idiots, before shaking your head and making your way back down to the first floor. Just a couple of drunks - and you're not in the business of stabbing anyone when they're down and helpless. Besides, from how loudly and deeply they're snoring, you can probably conduct a fucking orchestra here and they wouldn't even so much as miss a beat.

Back downstairs, you begin the...altogether distasteful process of finding yourself a disguise among the uniforms stashed in the lockers. This is seriously some Callidus bullshit you're getting into, but your Warmaster gave you a plan to follow and damn if you're not going to stick to it the best you could. Even if acting like an actual Callidus makes your skin crawl, more than thinking about being a Vindicare.

Before too long, you've found a uniform that's very nearly your size, thankfully also freshly-laundered. This you slip on after taking off your own cape and dispelling it. You manage the boots and everything else, too. As for Blueberry Cheesecake Brownie, you disengage its automatic waist holster and instead attach an actual rifle's shoulder sling on it, in the hopes that it'll be mistaken as just a really fancy rifle at first glance. Anyone asks, you'll just say it's highly-customized.

Just as you're about to step out in your new getup, it's here that the first armored girl, Revy, from earlier suddenly barges in. Her helmet's off, revealing a rather sharply-featured face with brown hair tied into a ponytail - and she's looking considerably fucking angry. That and something else.

"FUCK!" The girl roars, her vox-unaltered voice giving away just a twang of a Chinese accent, heavily buried in a learned American one. "Why's she always have to be a fucking KILLJOY?! It isn't as if we get MG tangoes to fuck with us all the goddamn time - just fucking civilians who couldn't even put up much of a FIGHT!" She picks up the houseplant you've been hiding behind earlier, and smashes it into the floor with another roar. "FUCK! SHIT!"

You're silent at this, quiet and unmoving. As if you'd suddenly been trapped by the idea that if you don't move at all, she won't see you.

Not a chance. Not a fucking chance.

The hell did you think this is, that old dinosaur movie Kyoko likes to watch over and over again?

"Hey. HEY YOU! Yeah, you!" She barks at you, waving you over. You make a show of looking around, before pointing at your helmet's fortunately-tinted visor. "OF COURSE you, dumbass! Who the fuck do you think I was talking about?"

...Right. Fine. Sure. Why not.

But before you've even crossed the distance between the both of you, she'd already started moving, grabbing you by both shoulders. "Look, I don't give a shit who you are, and I don't mind if you're married or nothing. I just need a fuck right now, okay? Just let me get some steam off. Or else I'll...I'll go fucking insane. Please?" She smiles at you, a smile that's almost craven, if not for the fact that her eyes are shining like a predator's. Like Kharn's.

What. WHAT.

WHAT THE FUCK. IS SHE SERIOUS? NO. NO.

"Come on, nobody'll see us. And there's tone of beds here." It's with an unbreakable grip that she drags you along. "I'll even suck you off first if ya want. Just..." She stops in her tracks here, before turning to look at you with cold eyes. "If I hear you bragging about this to yer guys, I'm killing you and them. Understand?"

DISGUSTING. ABSOLUTELY DISGUSTING. THINGS LIKE THIS MAKE YOU SICK.

How do you react?

Both bodies will start to be controlled by the one soul gem. Usually there's a horrible disconnect, as the person's mind can't process being in two bodies at the same time, and may cause undue trauma to the girl's sanity. It could cause a witch out incident if she's not careful!

She'd have to pull out some big tricks to stand on even ground with big girl Eversors, though. But tricks she has, so she wouldn't call it bad odds. And it's probably over if she gets the jump on them and sticks a knife through their throat, which is how she'd prefer it.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 02/03/14(Mon)05:57 No.29989367

You dig your heels to the floor and pull back with the arm that Revy's dragging you with. No, just...no. And to think you were getting impressed at how disciplined and professional the Sixteenth was being - brutal, sure, but nothing you yourself would've done if you were in the same shoes.

"Eh? What?" Revy blinks at you, before grinning. "Oh...you want to do me here, then? A nughty, dirty fuck right here, where anyone can just burst in on us?" It's with a hiss of air pressure that she starts to undo the seals of her armor, starting from her gorget. "Well, not usually what I go for, but what the hell. I'm up for anything once--"

No. NO! You shake your helmeted head, growling underneath your breath - before furiously pointing towards your left gloved hand's ring finger. "Married," You explain as gruffly as you can, making sure to talk like you're in the middle of gargling ground-up glass and gravel. After a moment, you slap an index finger against the palm of your other hand, fingers also spread. "Kids."

"So you're...actually married? And you have six kids?" The redhead frowns here, one armored hand reaching up to rake fingers through her hair. "...Alright, I did say I didn't mind if yer married, but that's...that's a pretty big family, actually. Didn't think a runt like you had it in 'im!"

Runt?! Before you could protest that, she grabs your hand and drags you forward again. "But who gives a shit about that? Come on, it's not like I'm gonna chase ya if I get preggers of somethin', that's taken care of. I haven't been laid the entire fucking time we've been stuck on this damn rig, and if I don't get some I swear I'm going to go completely fucking insane--"

You stop her again, this time hauling her back, now. She looks at you with widened eyes, and you take advantage of her stunned silence by pointing towards the stairs leading to the warehouse's second floor.

"TWO," you growl, before pointing to yourself and then clasping both your hands and resting your cheek against them. Miming the universal sign for sleeping. Or being so drunk off your ass you're knocked unconscious.

"Two other guys're sleeping off booze on the second floor?" Revy grins at this. "Well, that's even better! Alright, I guess you're free to go, then! Ya won't have to tell your wife about this!"

Shaking your head, you march stiffly out of the warehouse, feeling a sudden need for a very cold shower and very robust scrub.

Urrrgh. You're not all that happy to remember that you've been through this exact situation before. The first time turned out much better than this time, though, but...

You shake your head again as you find yourself outside the Warehouse, with your new uniform. It's a bit loose around the sleeves, but not enough that you look like someone who'd stolen a uniform and wearing it as a disguise. Making you indistinguishable from the security detail roaming around Big Shell.

Anyway. Where do you go, now? Do you want to investigate the other struts, or go directly to the core of Shell 2? You'll note that the security detail in front of the entrance to the core is somewhat thinned out, but still a considerable presence.

[]Go to Shell 2 Core. You've prepared enough.

You fidget slightly in your stolen uniform as you make your way to Strut K. From what you can remember from the dossier Kyuubey's given you, it's the part of Shell 2 that houses a Biochem Lab. You're not all that sure what you'll find there, but if it helps to give you a clue as to where they're keeping your main objective, then it was a trip worth taking.

As you make your way towards the strut - keeping your pace hurried but calm, trying your best not to attract undue attention - it's here that you switch on your helmet's own comms, after making sure the one you shared with your two captured team mates are lowered enough to not carry in case they tried to reach you. Seeing if their own idle radio chatter could give away just where the item you're looking for is stored - or whatever the fuck it actually is, besides a jewelry box.

After a few moments, you irritably switch the comms off. No such luck. Whoever hired the security detail made sure that even the security detail didn't know what the hell they were supposed to be guarding. And whatever security agency they came from was smart enough to encrypt their comm-language with an unfamiliar lexicon, just in case anyone unauthorized would be listening it - making it useless for you to listen in just to keep track of what they're doing.

You let out an irritated breath into your helmet's air filter. God damn Murderface and her stupid plans - if it'd just been you working alone, or with Kyoko, this'd be a much simpler milk run.

And Kyoko herself wouldn't have been--

No. No. There's no need to think about her, not right now. Kyoko's hurt, but she's still alive - and Murderface promised you she'd take care of everything.

...Jesus. You're trusting Murderface with Kyoko now? Really?

God damn. You're much more far gone than you fucking thought.

Anyway. Strut K. There are two guards stationed outside the Biochem Lab, but they merely wave you through as soon as you come near. ...Didn't even ask for an off-helmet identity check. You bite back the temptation to lecture them about being just as bad as regular jackoffs when it comes to keeping shit secure - it'd probably fall on deaf ears and give you away anyway, so why bother?

The Biochem lab is just what you imagined: a boring biochemistry nerd's dream, filled with test tubes, microscopes, chemicals and whatever else they use to look at really small stuff with. The entire place is painted a blinding, sterile white, too - making you feel that much more out of place with your stolen black uniform. Thankfully, it's deserted, and clearly haven't been used for a while.

There's nothing really of interest here, which is also a bit disappointing. You were expecting...well, you don't really know what you were expecting. Maybe a hidden room full of human-sized test tubes, with naked Magical Girls swimming inside them? Or another room, full of deformed clones of someone, each one begging you to kill them than let them suffer another moment of their cursed existence.

That would've been really cool, anyway.

A bit more ransacking of the place nets you something you could probably go on, though - a box of printouts, freshly discarded in a bin. A lot of the printed information is blacked out with black marker, but most of it seems to describe some sort of huge battle tank or something being stored in the recently-converted Shell 2 Core, and how it's been modified to no longer require a pilot, instead operating fully on a rigidly-coded AI.

Huh. Well. That's...neat, you guess? An automated tank thing? You're not too sure why the fuck it'd be stored here, in the middle of the fucking ocean of all places. What good is a tank when you're surrounded with water?

You shake your head here, crumpling the papers and tossing them back into the bin. Just some shit about a tank, then. No clue as to where the main objective's stored, or what it is.

...That said, would they still store the item in Shell Core 2? Maybe they're using the tank itself as a sort of sentry for it, just like how Haruka's guarded by automated guns back in HQ?

Hmm. That kind of makes sense, then, if you think about it--

Your train of thought is interrupted by a small beeping sound in your ear - and your eyes go wide as you recognize the sound. It's your codec headset, calling for attention.

Looking around briefly - making sure you're clear - you crouch down behind a file cabinet before all but tearing your helmet off. Pressing the earbud tighter against your ear with your index finger to amplify the sound.

"Sayaka...?" It's Kyoko, her voice strained and weak, but otherwise fine. "Sayaka, are you there? Guh, this sucks...goddamn fuckers shot my goddamn leg AND arm off...! Sayaka, are you there?"

Well, she's complaining, so that's a good thing, at least. That means she's still kicking.

So... It's entirely possible that what they're guarding and what we're after isn't the same thing.

Or, what we're after is something which is an absolutely vital component OF the thing they're guarding.

Hmm.

The main thing is, they're probably going to assume we're after what they're guarding, so this could still work out in our favor.

There's no reason Kyoko should ever still have comms on her at this point.

In fact, if Murderface put her comms away before surrendering herself, the fact that Kyoko had a comms device and Murderface didn't more or less confirms to them 100% that there's someone else in on the operation.

Plus if they knew we were on the station and were listening in, why not just tell us to go to a specific location or they will kill Kyoko and Chiaki?

If Kyoko broke under interrogation (hard to believe she would so quickly), then they already know about Sayaka, so no reason not to answer. The headset issue is not necessarily a big deal, since if they escaped somehow, Chiaki could probably have pulled a new one from the Shield.

You bite back the instinct to start lecturing Kyoko over codec. Namely, how the fuck did she get tagged by a sniper? You know she can move much, much faster than that. Hell, she can fucking block bullets with her spear! What the hell happened there?

But yeah. that's...that's for after you all get the hell out of here with the main objective. You'll have all the time in the world to grill Kyoko about her careless mistakes once she's safe in a sickbay bed, getting ready to regenerate her lost limbs.

So instead of that, you ask her status. And how's she getting in contact with you, anyway? Didn't they take her gear, along with Murderface's?

"Not so good, but I'm not bleedin' all over the place anymore, so that's a plus." You hear her grunting in exertion, her breathing ragged. "An' Murderface palmed me hers just after they tazed her. Managed to keep it outta their reach when they started friskin' us - don't ask me how." She laughs, weakly. "Owww. It hurts to laugh, too? Goddamn bitch broke my ribs...!"

You tell her to suck it up and deal with the pain. To remember her training.

...Right. What about Murderface, then? How is she?

"They got her in the Silent Room next door. ...I think mine's sorta busted, or it's not gettin' enough juice, because I haven't even thrown up once." Another pained grunting from Kyoko, this time enough that you couldn't help but grit your teeth yourself.

"...They're workin' her over with a baseball bat, l-last I heard. I think they're tryin' to break her kneecaps or somethin'. Doesn't seem to be workin', though...all I hear is a lot of hitting, an' Murderface laughin'. Ya know, like Kharn used to? When she really got mad?"

Kyoko has some slight Culexus powers and training. She can resist their powers a little bit. So it stands to reason that silent rooms, that work like the Culexus magic nullification power, don't effect her as much as other magical girls.

Kyoko is already fucked up. So now they're trying to rattle her by letting her hear Murderface's interrogation.

...which would probably work out a lot better if it wasn't Murderface they were trying to torture, and Kyoko they were trying to rattle.

Robot thing in Shell 2 Core...? Probably the AI-controlled tank you read about, then, which pretty much confirms where you think the main objective may be stored. You scramble for the bin you just threw the printouts into and uncrumple them - looking over them once more, to see if there's anything useful about the tank you can learn about.

As you do so, you tell Kyoko that you haven't yet explored the core of Shell 2, but you're planning on doing so.

"Y-yeah? Hah, it sounds like it's gonna be really fun, though..." It's here that Kyoko's pain-wracked voice seems to grow a bit regretful. "Sorry...sorry for fuckin' up again, Sayaka. I...I don't really know what the hell happened, it's just..."

You swallow here, finding your throat painfully dry, before forcing yourself to keep the mission at the forefront. No. If Kyoko wants to apologize, she'll have to do it later, not now. Later, when you're back in Headquarters. Not during a mission.

...Christ, Miki Sayaka. Keep it the fuck together. You're Equerry AND Rank Leader. Fucking act like it.

"...Okay." Kyoko coughs this out, wetly. "Yeah. After everyone's safe, and everything."

Right. Now...besides Murderface acting like a fucking lunatic while she's being interrogated, did the idiot say anything about a plan? Did she explain anything to Kyoko?

"N-not...not really? I mean, besides....besides telling me that she'll be taking care of things, an' asking me to get some sleep?" Kyoko laughs at the last bit, before groaning in pain again. "Oh, yeah, there was somethin' about a high score, too..."

Is that right?

Murderface, what the fuck are you planning?

"I think she's gonna bust us out after her interrogation or somethin, I'm not sure," Kyoko continues. "But I don't think she's gone crazy or anything. I still trust Murderface. She's never let me down before."

>>29992119

Well. Regardless of what she feels about Murderface, you tell her to be careful. You have the suspicion that your Warmaster isn't home right now, and something else is in control of her. But that in itself may be a good thing, so...yeah. Just be careful.

"I will. I'm...always c-careful. When did I ever become careless, Sayaka?"

Oh, maybe some time earlier, when she got her arm and leg shot off--

"With the exception of recent events."

...Yeah. Well. Just be careful, like you said. And if you get the item before Murderface busts Kyoko out, you'll bust them out yourself.

"Alright, alright. Jeez. We're at Strut F, I think." A moment's silence. "...Love you, Sayaka."

You feel your cheeks heat up before murmuring it back. Adding 'you idiot' at the end of it should not have been felt so awkward, or sounded so half-assed.

A few moments later, you find it.

"...Replacing the Hydraulic Cutter with the Plasma Cannon was no easy task, as the machinery necessary for the latter is much more delicate and much more elaborate than what is essentially a super-powered watering hose. The energy required for a single discharge is also much higher - therefore, the pilot should allow for a generous cooldown period after every discharge, or it will overload the power generators and cause RAY to momentarily shut down, defenseless. A minimum discharge interval of five minutes would be sufficient."

So...you just have to make it fire its plasma whatever at you really quickly, and then you'll have enough time to kill it? That's...yeah, that's a pretty glaring weakness.

You crumple the papers back into a ball and toss it into the bin again, before making your leave of Strut K. With your helmet back on, no one seems to care that you're just walking around the fucking place.

You carefully unsling Blueberry Cheesecake Brownie from your shoulder and pressing it against your hip - the automatic straps flying out and cinching tight around your waist, securing the weapon in its most effective position for you to use. A glance towards the welcoming committee tells you that they haven't yet clued in on what you're about to do - something that will change very, very soon.

Your very first stride brings you to full speed the moment it makes contact with the ground - and even with the unfamiliar uniform, even with the annoying helmet, you couldn't help but grin at the all-too-heady sensation of speed.

A sensation made all the more sweeter by the fact that the speed is coming from you - not from some beast of metal and oil and smoke, or some crutch-device that would only make you vulnerable when it inevitably breaks down. It's all you - you pushing the boundaries of just how fast a Magical Girl, one trained as harshly and as sadistically as you have, could go. How fast she can move, how fast she can react.

How fast she can kill.

Blueberry Cheesecake Brownie's first blood is a soldier just about to unsling his rifle to fire at you. By the moment you whip past him, the crimson length of Blueberry Cheesecake Brownie had already sliced clean through his armor, then then flesh, then bone. You don't even spare him a glance as he collapses into two bisected halves, each one gouting dark arterial blood.

The second comes in the form of an enterprising young man looking to make short work of you with an oversized knife. At the speed you're going, his eager stab looks less of a killing move and more of a theatrical feint - an actor telegraphing a stage murder by overexagerrating his gesture, overextending.

You slice off his fingers with one small stroke, then his hand at the wrist, and then finally his head from his neck on the backswing.

You've already moved on by the time he started to fall apart. The execution itself taking less time than for you to actually blink.

The third, fourth and fifth die in similar ways - abandoning their post to attack you, panicked yells of rage and betrayal blaring from their vox-speakers. Each one ending up as disassembled biological wreckage by the time you've slipped past, the crimson of their blood adding to your blade's.

Sixth. Seventh. Eighth. Ninth. At the twelfth - the soldier's last breath bubbling in his helmet as you sliced him in two, from skull to groin - you move to cut off the Shell 2 Core from the rest of Big Shell. Two quick swipes with the quickened blade of Blueberry Cheesecake Brownie had each bridge collapsing under their weight, folding down and pointing downwards to the sea.

There. That should keep reinforcements busy for now.

With the Core all but clear, you slip into the entrance - leaving behind a red tide of blood and gore in your wake.

Proving once more - both to the world and to yourself - that you're not Rank Leader AND Equerry for nothing.

And from what you're seeing as you enter the Shell 2 Core proper - the 'core' isn't called that for nothing, either.

Nearly four times bigger than the struts you've been investigating so far, the second core of Big Shell is huge and vast - tall, too, probably big enough to qualify as a fucking hangar for commercial jets. You've read in the dossier that this core was supposed to house the filtration system, or something - but evidently it's been converted to house something much, much more important than machinery to scrub oil particulates from sea water.

And you're looking at it.

It's...well, it is kind of a tank? You guess?

In the sense that a giant fucking robot resembling a really angry chicken is a tank. A giant featherless chicken with its wings raised straight out into the air as if getting ready to fly or get into a slapfight. It's the sort of robot you'd think otaku would make, except a lot less gundam-like.

It IS pretty huge, you'll give it that. You don't even want to know how they got something like this made without attracting international attention - isn't this the sort of thing countries get into war with each other?

Despite what Kyoko told you, however, it doesn't seem to be activated. It's not moving at all, not even when you step forward.

It's standing there, slightly hunched, its great beaked head glaring down at you as if silently contemplating to crush you with one of its back-jointed legs.

It's also here that you see it - the main objective. Finally. The old lady jewelry box, in its full-on gaudy glory - placed in what looks to be a tough-looking display case. On the hangar floor, right in front of the giant chicken robot tank. Between its massive, stompy legs.

Well. If this isn't a trap, you don't know what is.

What do you do?

[]Take the main objective. It'll attack you no matter what, so you may as well.
[]Try and trigger the trap from afar. Maybe if you're quick enough, you can dart in and take the main objective while it's distracted.

This is a trap, and we are going in knowing its a trap. Sometimes the best choice vs setups like this is brute force.
And that is exactly what we do.

We kind of got derailed when Kyoko went missing and Decu immediately gave us the option to find out what happened to her.

Now, in a non-interactive narrative, the author probably would have held that back 'til later, but no. We jumped in there like an idiot and Kyoko's botched landing set the tone for sneaksville.

The definition of smash and grab is a Pink Panther jewlery heist, on a jewlery store or a transport that is a small target with a specifically open or weak security that can be pulled off in less than five to ten minutes, before adequate response can be mustered up.

Who the fuck thought up the grand idea of "smash and grabbing" an oil rig in the middle of the ocean? You don't smash and grab Fort Knox either, it's just not possible by design. You sneak, every single fucking time.

Wendy would do anything Murderface asked of her. She also is not Pinky i.e. does not want to kill Chiaki at all. More like sex her as hard as humanly possible. She and Midori would also probably hit off to a godly sempai / kouhai duo if they ever got into talking (and Wendy does prefer talking over stabbing to some degree ever since it worked so well with Murderface).

If Chiaki would have wanted to she could have reached Wendy very soon. She has issues to work out though and doesn't seem like she will abandon her friends she's trying to keep safe right now.

You look up at the huge metal beast guarding the small, nearly-insignificant treasure chest - and you couldn't help but feel that you've seen this somewhere. Some game that you watched Kyoko play during a vacation leave, perhaps? Or maybe in those subtitled Hollywood fantasy movies that you rented out that one time?

Well, wherever it's from, you know how this goes. The protagonist tries to get the treasure, but instead gets attacked by the giant monster statue that he thought was just a statue. It's a cheap scare, a parlor trick - and you can't believe that whoever's running this operation had the temerity of setting up his security like this.

Slamming Blueberry Cheesecake Brownie back into its sheath - after flicking the blood off of the blade, of course - it's here that you all but tear off your disguise, piece by piece, as you step forward to claim your prize. Each step echoing in the otherwise empty core, bouncing off the metal walls.

The moment you get within ten paces of the main objective is when two crimson lights suddenly flare into life on the robot's unorthodox, pinched-beak skull - and you watch with cold-eyed fascination as the thing, huge as it is, begins to move.

Calling it a robot...it's a misnomer, no. This thing looked like it had muscles under its armor, rather than pistons and machinery. As it craned its neck to look at you, you saw its articulated neck flex and grow taut, like corded muscles underneath skin. And it did so with such an economy of movement - shifting its weight here and there to keep you in its sights. Murderous intent definitely in its movements, but restrained, under the surface, waiting to be let out when necessary.

It almost makes you feel better that you'd be killing a machine instead of something that can actually bleed and die.

As your feet bring you finally face to face with the main objective - your entire disguise divested, your cape billowing in the frigid air - it's here that you look up once more at the metal beast crouched in front of you. Its beady little eyes, blazing a hellish crimson, riveted to your every move, waiting for your first ever mistake.

Immediately, crimson light floods the entire core - klaxons blaring as it announced a Shell-wide core alarm. The beast rises from its crouch, making the platform it's on shake with every stomp of its reverse-jointed feet - before spreading its wings and screaming to the heavens, portions of its skull opening up to reveal a giant maw.

You ignore this and pick out the main objective - the jewelry box - from the broken glass of the display case. It's...heavier than you expected, much too heavy for something its size, but you stuff it into your inventory all the same.

[INTRUDER ALERT, INTRUDER ALERT] You hear the biomechanical monster bellow. [ENGAGING SECURITY PROTOCOLS]

"That's fine!" You shout at it. "All night long I've been waiting for an excuse to cut loose!" You slide out Blueberry Cheesecake Brownie from its sheath - the crimson blade glowing much more brightly than usual now, as if re-energized by its most recent bathing of blood. "You'll do for a warmup, you stupid bucket of bolts and shit - and then everyone else in this fucking rig is next."

Swinging the sword once, then twice, it's here that you center yourself - both feet apart, knees slightly bent, and the handle gripped by two hands. The crimson length of the sword aimed at the thing called RAY.

For one thing, your head feels like two sizes too small for your brain--

"Murderface." A vox-ravaged voice crackles, much too loud, into your ear. "I envy your name."

You shake your head - and it's here that you realize that you've been dragged into some sort of interrogation room. Your hands are tied - securely - behind your back, lashed into the wooden chair you're now sitting on. It's with a cold start that you realize your Soul Gem is gone, along with your Shield. And your glasses.

...Funny. You feel a lot more naked without that last thing.

It's here that something else other than the cold, sterile room swims into focus - it's that armored Magical Girl from earlier, with her full-body carapace and helmet and everything. But it's not...the one who knocked you out, you think. This one is a bit more confident, more assured. And taller.

"Pleased to make your acquaintance, Murderface." The Magical Girl says. "My name is Freon."

"Freon as in you're a cold, frigid bitch?" You find yourself replying, a grin curling your lips.

There was a time, long, long ago, when Varrigan City was pure. Families arrived, bright-eyed and full of hope, their futures laid out before them. There was a time before skyscrapers blotted out the sun in the financial districts. Before hovels sprawled across every available space like a filthy calico mosaic of aluminum and steel. A time before guns and drugs flowed through the city almost as easily as the unclaimed bodies left in the sewers. There was a time, believe it or not, when the boogeyman was just a story, and children had the luxury of fearing monsters that existed only in their minds.

A time before Horzine. A time before Doctor Strauss.

The company seemed to spring up overnight; nobody could quite figure out exactly when it had arrived. They started small, a pharmaceuticals company with a handful of under-the-table deals with gangs and the odd cartel. Combat stimulants designed to unlock the hidden potential of the mind and body. Designer narcotics that hooked people with just the slightest whiff. They sold the good stuff, and soon enough, people took notice. Money rolled in, drugs rolled out, and like a hungry infant, the company grew. The city was alive and drug money was the blood pumping through its veins.

With the right people paid off, nobody noticed if a few vagrants disappeared every now and again. A few bums here and there, a hooker or two, maybe an orphan - people nobody would miss, and never enough to raise any eyebrows. It was only a matter of time before the boogeymen got bolder. Civilians disappeared. Respectable, working men and women - or at least as respectable as you could get in Varrigan. Children were snatched from school yards in broad daylight. Fed by the city, Horzine had grown into a monster.

Soon enough there were two classes of citizen in Varrigan City: those that worked for Horzine, and those that didn't. Even if you didn't work for them, chances are that you were only alive because of their money. Those that flourished lived in high-rise apartments that radiated around the Horzine HQ like a swarm of piglets suckling at their mother's teat. The city centre was a burnished metropolis of business suits, fancy cars and not a clean conscience in sight. Beyond that square mile of luxury were the concrete tenements of the not-so-lucky, who could at least thank their God of science for at least letting them keep their heads above the surface of the filth. The rest of the city was dominated by shacks and shanties on land owned by Horzine and controlled by a new batch of gangs every day.

Of course, it was only a matter of time before it all came crashing down. Like the fall of Rome, Horzine's empire was struck down in the blink of an eye. All six bridges off of Jefferson Island now only led straight into a cold, watery grave and the single tunnel out fared no better. Cell towers were destroyed, phone lines were severed. Varrigan burned and its master had fled, leaving beasts and madmen to flood the already hellish streets. The citizens would answer for what they allowed to pass.

Eliza Thorne let out a strained groan as air filtered out of her bruised lungs. It took several more moments for her the fire in her mind to finally ignite. She peeled her face off of the cold, hard ceramic floors as every stiff joint and muscle screamed in protest. A stabbing pain shot through her right ankle as she tried her best to stand - sprained, no doubt. With a sigh of defeat, she did her best to pull herself over to a wall to sit against. The grimey, green-tinged corridors of the Horzine HQ were eerily silent, she noted. Even her walkie-talkie was oddly mute, and after a few vain tries, she confirmed that it was either dead or being jammed.

Thorne took a deep breath, staring into her lap as she tried desperately to remember what had happened. The last thing she could recall was seeing her only ticket out of that hell hole go up in flames in front of her eyes. Everything seemed to get fuzzy after that. There was running, screaming and shooting. The details were all lost to an andrenaline-induced haze.

Protocol Ten had been a lie. No - not quite a lie; an ommission of fact. No one in the security team had known exactly what the protocol entailed; everyone always just guessed that the city would either be burned or blown up. The only instruction any of them had been given was to defend the building at all costs. Thorne snorted, a short chuckle born of morbid mixture of anger and amusement. Of course they would be holed up in the building. It was the most heavily defended place in the city. Of course, that meant jack shit if what they were supposed to be defending against came from within. Then it just turned the stalwart defenders into fish in a barrel.

A large clock on the wall told her that it was just about six o'clock in the evening - which meant that she had been knocked out for the better part of an hour. Even in that short span of time, Thorne could feel a prickling, tingling sensation clawing at the right side of her body like some creature trying to break free. She would need to get to her quarters soon. She couldn't go for too long without her medication or else... things she didn't like to think about would start to happen to her.

With a pained groan, Thorne pushed her injured leg outward and focused on her foot. Something inside of her twisted and churned, something not quite magical nor biological that shaped flesh and muscle like clay. A muffled scream escaped the scarred girl's lips as she tried to yank her foot free of her boot. Pain stabbed at her foot as bone began to reshape itself. Her hurried hand pulled her combat knife free of its sheath and rammed it down the boot, desperate to cut it open. A moment later, the boot came free after she had sliced through the side.

Thorne stared as flesh churned beneath her skin, knobs and spikes appearing and disappearing within moments. The girl stuffed the knife's hilt in her mouth to keep from screaming. She could either endure a minute or two of agony, or be forced to limp her way through a warzone for a week. Her soulgem had lost its spark long ago; the Doctor's experiments had rendered it little more than a fashionable accessory. It didn't accumulate grief, sure, but Thorne was also robbed of her magic in the process.

The now ex-security chief slumped back against the wall as the pain subsided and her knife tumbled into her lap. Fumbling around on her utility belt, she grasped what looked like little more than a standard insulin pen. Thorne yanked off the cap and measured the clear liquid inside. Only one dose was left. With a disappointed sigh, she jammed the needle into her neck, thumbed the top button and relaxed. Almost immediately, the tingling sensation in her right side dissipated - even the scarring seemed to fade away slightly.

Pulling herself to her feet, Thorne gave her toes an experimental flex before putting her weight on the freshly healed foot. Sure enough, the pain had vanished. She couldn't help but smile, grateful that her foot had regenerated properly; not even an extra toe or anything unusual this time. As she took a cursory glance down the halls, the security officer could already spot shards of glass from broken light fixtures and office windows littering the floor. With one last grumble, Thorne did her best to tie her boot back together and began her journey to the stairwells.

Eliza (she had always preferred the name over 'Elizabeth') Thorne had never been particularly lucky. She could barely even remember her time before the experiments. She was snatched up from one of Varrigan's over-populated, unhygenic orphanages somewhere around the age of ten, then Shanghai'd into a contract with one of the incubators - probably the Thirteenth - and finally handed over to the good Doctor herself. Thorne couldn't even remember what she wished for anymore or how long she had even been a real magical girl for. Not terribly long, at any rate.

I don't think Wendy works out very well as a pairing for Chiaki, but I do really like the character. I think she's well aware that Chiaki isn't Kong and that she still wants to try and make things work regardless.

On the one hand, I don't think it can work.

On the other hand, I'm sure anon will try anyway.

Thorne had the good fortune of being the first magical girl to survive the Maerorus procedures. With no magic left, the Doctor was generous enough to give her a job on the Horzine security team. She proved to be a good shot and a decent leader in the field, so long as someone else was telling her her objectives. Thorne had the pleasure of knowing just about every horrid abomination locked up in the deep, dark bowels of the building. Hell, she had even made friends with a few of the more recent Maerorus subjects.

As she rounded a corner, the first sounds of activity reached her. Immediately, her training kicked in and she crouched against the wall, pistol drawn. Thorne peered around the corner, forced to peek out a little more than she would have liked because of her bad eye. In the distance, she could see a figure slowly making its way further down the hall. It looked human - an adult man by the looks of him - but his movements weren't quite right. He looked ill, taking sudden, jerky steps forward with heavy footfalls.

Thorne rounded the corner silently, still crouched as she crept up to the man, her gun trained on him the whole way. He was wearing the same security uniform as her, which meant he had to be one of her subordinates. As she crept closer, Thorne couldn't help but notice a faint buzzing coming from the other security officer's direction. It wasn't until she was less than ten feet away that she called out.

"Freeze!" Thorne shouted, standing upright. "Turn around slowly and keep your hands where I can see them!"

The man froze. His head lolled to the side as he shuffled around slowly. It wasn't until she could see the man's blackened eyes that the head of security realized exactly what she was looking at.

Thorne had made a bad call.

She recognized him as an older guard by the name of Masterson. He was one of the few security officers who had actually been around longer than Thorne. Few managed to survive anywhere near that long. The front of his uniform was torn open and his entrails hung loose, covered in buzzing flies the size of a man's thumb. The insects flitted about, circling the officer before crawling back into his chest cavity, bloated on flesh and other unmentionable matter. Every now and then Thorne could see moving bumps of roughly the same size moving around just beneath his skin.

"Sssissssster," the man breathed, sounding more like a wheeze than a word.

"STAY BACK!" Thorne screamed. "Take one more step and I'll shoot!"

Masterson - or what was left of him - jerked as a sharp breath escape his nostrils. A laugh. They both knew the gun would be useless. Thorne already knew what was wrong with him. She'd seen it dozens of times before. Of all the terrible, hideous experiments she could run into, it had to be...

"Typhus," she whimpered. "Don't do this! For the love of god, PLEASE-"

The man took a jerky step forward, making the girl's breath catch in her throat.

"Wheeere... is Motherrr?" He asked. "We cannot fiiind herrr..."

"She- She's gone!" Thorne wailed in reply. She could already feel her eyes getting warm and wet. "Just don't move!"

"GONE?" 'Typhus' glanced around the hallway, as though expecting to find her there. "Wheeere... has she gooone?"

"I don't know! Just please don't... please," the security officer pleaded, trying to wipe her tears away, "not like this..."

"Whyyy do you cryyy, sisssster?" The man's brow furrowed. "Whyyy... would we hurrrt one of ourrr... BELOVED sisssterssss?"

"Then what?!" Thorne cried. It was clear from her voice that her hope had already left her. "What do you wan-"

The man stopped, and for a brief moment, even the ever present buzzing went silent, too.

"Then," he mutttered, "we mussst go afterrr herrr..."

Thorne froze, almost forgetting to breathe. She couldn't afford to let Typhus leave the island. No force - mundane or magical girl - could withstand Typhus' wrath.

"N-no, Typhus," Thorne said, trying to collect herself. "Where- Where are you? I'll come down. We'll talk! I'll explain everything! Just- Just don't do anything rash, o-okay?"

'Typhus' stopped as he absorbed the security officer's words. Finally, after what seemed an eternity to Thorne, he nodded.

"We shall take you to usss," he answered. "Thisss man will..."

"Escort?"

"Essscort," the zombified guard repeated, nodding as he tried the word out. "Yesss... Thank you, sissster. Now come..."

Thorne smiled gently, wiping the last of her tears away as the man shuffled around. She almost even giggled. It was easy to forget that Typhus, Host of the Destroyer Hive, was nothing more than a frightened little girl looking for her 'mother'.

Does she still want Chiaki? Yes, otherwise she wouldn't have been so upset over the picture. She might, however, eventually find that Chiaki has changed too much from the person she used to like (another of my misgivings about that pairing).

Both Chiaki and Midori have died too, so I don't see how that matters at all.

As for being a threat, she has no intention of killing Midori at present. She might become a threat in the future depending on how she is treated, but for know I think you're blowing things out of proportion

True to her word, the fly-ridden guard led Thorne down into the labrynthine depths of the Horzine HQ, never straying too far to scout ahead. As they made their way down, more of the shambling zombies began to follow along until it seemed a full squad of Thorne's former subordinates had joined them. Strangely, it didn't seem to bother her, seeing her former comrades as shambling, fly-ridden corpses. She had never felt entirely at home among them. Eliza Thorne was a strange existence caught between being human, magical girl and something else altogether.

When they finally reached holding cell forty-nine, the men stepped aside and stood at attention, like a band of royal guards. Thorne stopped and took a deep breath, trying to maintain her composure. As she pushed the door open - surprisingly without the need for her security card - her ears were immediately assailed with a buzzing far louder than that coming from her guide.

The room was hexagon shaped and cramped. The concrete walls and stainless steel furnishings made it look more like a prison cell than anything else. A metal bed topped with a thin mattress and sheets sat against one side, while a toilet and sink were attached to the opposite wall. The rest of the room was populated by shelves with a handful of books, toys and other knick-knacks scattered about. In the very center of the room stood the source of the god-awful, incessant buzzing noise. Typhus was at least a head shorter than Thorne and dressed in a ragged, hooded robe. Beneath her hood, what little of the girl'ss face could be seen was wrapped entirely in dirty bandages that seemed to shift and rustle every now and again. Holding herself upright with an enormous, rusted and grime-encrusted scythe, Thorne almost wanted to call her the littlest Grim Reaper.

Typhus was the most recent of the Maerorus Project's victims behind Valnikov. She was more powerful than any of them by far - almost incomparably so - but the procedures had left her body feeble and sickly. The Doctor, as any who had worked for her knew, had very little tolerance for flaws. Because of her physical condition, Typhus had been cast away and nearly forgotten in the dungeon-like depths of the building. Thorne couldn't imagine the girl was any older than fourteen, but where she came from and how the Doctor had come upon her was anyone's guess.

The smaller girl took a timid step forward as Thorne shut the door behind her.

"Sissster?" She asked, her voice strained and raspy, sounding like a much younger, more feminine version of the guard who had brought Thorne down.

"H-hello, Typhus," Thorne answered, trying her best to look friendly.

The little hooded figure took another step toward the security officer before erupting into a fit of violent coughing that would rival a chain-smoker. Thorne took the smaller girl's hand - pale and surprisingly dainty - and led her over to the bed, sitting them both down beside each other.

"E-excussse usss," Typhus muttered, letting out several more coughs. "Now... wherrre hasss Motherrr gone? Ourrr doorrr wasss unlocked today. Motherrr sssaid it shhhouldn't be unlocked unlesssss it'sss... an emergenccy."

The tiny reaper stared up at her 'older sister', bright crimson eyes shimmering with a child-like innocence. "Whyyy... hasss she gooone?"

"She, um," the security officer thought for a moment, not entirely sure of how to proceed. "Some, uh, some bad people took away her job. And they wanted to take away her company and her money, too. So- So instead of letting them do that, she let all of her experiments out so they could live in the city."

"Whyyy... diddd the peoplle do thattt to Motherrr?" Typhus asked, still starring up at her 'older sister'. "Whyy diddd theyyy want to steeeal from herrr?"

"Be- Because they didn't like what she was doing, Typhus. They didn't want her to keep doing... things to girls. Li- like she, um, did to you," Thorne hesitated, then added, "or me."

The young Maerorus was silent for some time, her gaze falling to the floor as she let out a muffled sniffle.

"Beforrre she... leffft," the hooded girl muttered, staring at the floor, "sheee came to visssit usss. She... tooold usss that she lovesss usss... She sssaid thaaat we werrre alwaysss herrr favourrrite..."

Thorne smiled gently, before wrapping an arm around the girl's shoulders and resting her cheek on her head. Somehow, the sensation of squirming and writhing under Typhus' robe didn't bother her nearly as much as she expected.

"I'm... I'm sure you were," Thorne cooed softly, rubbing the girls' shoulder. "She was so excited after the procedures were finished..."

She remembered the event so vividly. The Doctor had gathered nearly every one of Horzine's science personnel to witness the birth of her most perfect creation - which made it all the more disappointing when the girl could barely stand on her own, never mind handle a close-quarters fight.

"Whattt... nnnow, sisssster?" Typhus asked. "Do wwwe... finnnd Motherrr?"

"N-No, we need to, um," Thorne stammered as she tried to figure out an excuse. "We need to look after the city for the Do- for Mother! We have to gather supplies and- and- and make a plan!"

"I- Maybe? Maybe... she'll come back if you're good."

"Th-thennn... weee shalll be gooood," Typhus answered, nodding. Thorne couldn't help but smile after seeing the look of sincerity in her eyes.

"Good. Now get some rest, you," the security officer muttered, giving the girl's head a good pat. "I'll go find what we need. Can your, erm, men help me secure the building?"

Typhus nodded vigorously - or as much as she could in her condition. "Theyyy willll fffollow orrrdersss anddd keep you sssafe."

"Great. I'll be sure to look for a nicer room for you, too," Thorne said as she took a glance around the prison cell of a room. "I'll be back later. Take care, sis."

Making her way to the door, Thorne couldn't help but smile as she looked back and watched the tiny reaper tuck herself in. Somehow, despite everything, she felt as though things would start to get better. She had finally caught the lucky break that had eluded her for all twenty-one years of her life. It would take a lot of work and a lot of patience, but for the first time, Eliza Thorne had a home and a small, loving family.

[And that's it! This is the first of a new series that I've been working on for a few months now as a bit of a pet project. Since it won't be tying into the events of Prose Magica (aside from a certain predictable mini-arc) I figured it deserves its own title. Kingdom of Flies will be a lot more episodic and disconnected, so each mini-arc will have its own title, with the odd one-shot here and there. I hope you enjoy it!]

Fire. Fire and smoke, all around you. The light seemingly strobing in and out, with brightness flooding your vision every few seconds. You close your eyes, trying to shut out the visual confusion, but it only makes the piercing ringing in your ears worse. After about fifteen seconds, the ringing starts to fade, but just subsides into a blaring siren. Your head is killing you, and you gingerly reach up to touch your temple, and your hand comes away wet and sticky. You open your eyes, trying to make sense of the scene in front of you. You're inside the cabin of an airplane, spinning rapidly, the strobing coming from the windows as the cabin rotates through the sunlight. There is a fire further up in the cabin, and the smoke is rapidly filling the cabin. You try to struggle free of your seatbelt, but it's wrapped around you tightly. You scream for help, but the woman to your right is seemingly unconscious, or worse.

The fire is slowly creeping upwards through the cabin, and there's a horrible, metallic rending noise as one of the wings shears away from the plane's hull, spinning off through the air. It's at this point that the emergency oxygen masks deploy from the ceiling, dropping down, but falling out of reach as the cabin rolls upside-down once again. Your arms, however, are too short to reach the mask on your own anyway, but it doesn't look like many other people are reaching for them either, whether they're unconscious, dead, or merely too shocked to think straight, you don't know.

You try once more to untangle yourself from the webbing of your seatbelt, but only succeed in tightening the restraint around yourself, dangerously so. As you begin to lose consciousness due to a combination of the tightness of your seatbelt and the smoke in the cabin, you see a strange, grey cat walking down the centre aisle of the cabin, seemingly ignoring the effects of the cabin's rotation, and gravity. The creature stops outside your row, and looks directly into your eyes as you struggle with your seatbelt. Its mouth doesn't move as it asks you a single question:

"Would you like to live?"

Your eyes fly open, you let out a ragged, hurried breath, and you release your white-knuckle grip on the arms of your chair as the back wheels of the plane hit the ground with a solid, resounding “thud”. Your name is Kaitlyn Kilburn, and you are deathly afraid of riding in planes. You’re also a magical girl, although you’re not completely convinced that would save you from slamming into the ground inside of a metal coffin at 400 miles-per-hour. At least, not again.

As the plane begins its slow taxi to the gate and people around you begin to undo their seatbelts in order to mill around and get their luggage, you take the small, crumpled sheet of paper from the pocket of your shorts and re-read it once more. You frown; the contents haven't changed since the last time you read it. There will be a contact waiting for you once you get past security. It doesn't mention anything other than that. No description, no name, nothing. And just when you were starting to look forward to being able to finally work alone again, too.

You groan and stretch your arms and legs, before stuffing the piece of paper back into your shorts. As the plane finally arrives at the gate, you let the majority of the plane's passengers filter out before grabbing your backpack from underneath the seat in front of you and moving from the plane's cabin into the airport terminal proper. While you may hate riding in airplanes, you love walking through airports. All the people, going about their business, it's lifting to see people just living their lives.

You take your time walking through the terminal, and as you step through the final exit of the terminal to the passenger pick-up zone, you lazily take a bite out of your airport cinnamon roll. Scanning the crowd of people waiting for family, friends, and clients, you easily spot who you think your "contact" is. She's standing alone in a small void of people, with a gap of about a yard between her and the nearest people. She's short, Asian -- Japanese, probably, and wearing a strange, black, sleeveless hoodie and holding a small sign that reads "Kilburn". You hitch your bag up on your shoulder and toss your cinnamon roll into the nearest trashcan before making your way over to the girl, stopping just in front her.

"K-Kaitlyn Kilburn?" She manages to stutter out. It seems she's not necessarily the bravest apple in the basket, but you can deal with that. As long as she doesn't run away from a fight, like the last useless piece-of-shit partner you were assigned, back in Europe.

"Yeah, that's me." I pulled out the piece of paper from my pocket, and handed it to her. "Are you my 'contact'? Since they so graciously decided to give me next-to-no details about what the Hell I'm supposed to be doing back here in the U.S.? I was in the middle of a witch hunt in Spain when I got a message telling me to go straight to the airport, saying there was a flight I needed to catch, and I ain't one to argue with the higher-ups."

"N-no, I don't know anything about what they want you to do here. I would assume the same things you were doing over there... I just requested a partner, and then they told me to show up here at the airport..." She shakes her head and wrings her hands, like she doesn't know what to say, before finally managing to spit something else out. "I'm Kotarou Yuu! I'm sorry if I've caused you trouble!"

"Is it really that obvious...?" She says, blushing.

"The first thing we're going to have to do with you is go out and get you some decent clothes, so you aren't running around in your magical girl outfit all the time, no offence, but you stick out like a sore thumb." You wave your hand at the people around you, some of whom are beginning to stare. "But for now, let's just start moving. I, for one, am starving."

Roughly two hours later, after a fight with a rental car clerk and some tense highway driving into the city to get Yuu some clothes that didn't look like they were out of a third-rate shounen anime; you and Yuu are sitting in a small burger joint eating breakfast. The only clothes she wanted to buy were too-big hoodies and track shorts, so she has to keep rolling her sleeves back up. ...It's kind of cute, actually.

"So what are you doin' in the States, anyway? You're obviously foreign. You get sent over here for some kinda' secret mission or something?" You waggle your fork in the air, before spearing a pancake and shoving a piece of it into your mouth, deliciously moist and buttery after a 6 hour overnight flight's pre-packaged food.

"Not exactly..." Yuu murmurs, before speaking up a little bit. "I'm travelling all around the world, actually! I want to fight the strongest people wherever I go, and become strong enough to make my master proud!" Her eyes shine here, like a little kid talking about becoming the president, or an astronaut.

"So... You're doin' the Ryu thing? Like, from Street Fighter?" You flag down the waitress to refill your drink, before letting her continue.

"Huh? I'm sorry, Kilburn-san, I don't know what those are! I'm sure that you're right, though!" She looks into her drink, embarrassed, and you laugh.

"So how long have you been in the U.S., and uh, when is your next fight?" Her eyes light up, and when she starts to speak again, she seems like she's filled with energy.

"Actually, Kilburn-san, I have a fight scheduled for later today!" She looks at a clock on the wall, here. "In about an hour, actually! It's with a magical girl from the Eighth Officio who's here on the East Coast for a mission! I always try to catch them when they come out here, as it's not very often! It's pretty close by too, we were supposed to meet at an old junkyard outside the city, near the airport, actually!" You stand up here, already moving towards the door of the diner.

Looking over at Yuu, you'd think she was in her own personal heaven. Standing in the middle of a dusty lot, transformed, swinging her fists around, practicing different moves and styles. It was pretty impressive, really. Just as you're about to call out to Yuu that maybe, just maybe this girl isn't going to show up, a silhouette appears in the gateway to the small junkyard.

"Oi, you Yuu Kotarou? Didn't you want to fight or something?" She practically strolls her way into the middle of the lot, standing across the centre from Yuu, obviously not taking the challenge seriously. Putting on a smug grin, she shrugs. "Are you even going to draw your weapon?"

"Thank you for coming! Yes! I'm Kotarou Yuu, fifteen years old!" She puts on a wide smile and bows deeply, before straightening. "And I don't need any weapon, I have these!" Yuu raises her fists into the air in front of her and throws a few mock jabs before throwing a question right back at the challenger. "And how about you? What's your name?"

"Huh? Well, my name's Sabrina Cosworth, uh, seventeen years old?" The opposing magical girl, Sabrina, seems caught off guard by Yuu's unexpected friendliness, but she manages to regain her composure before continuing. "Well, I'd heard a couple other girls talking about you back in Santa Destroy I had thought you might be a challenge, but then I show up and you're a preschooler? I guess I expected too much! Any girl worth her salt in Destroy should have eaten someone like you for breakfast." The girl transforms here, her costume a short black dinner dress with an overabundance of ribbons and black-and-purple stockings, and draws her weapon, a double-ended spear. She spins it around her head a couple times before noticing you, and jerking a thumb in your direction. "What about her? Your friend just going to watch, or what?"

"I'm just here for the good show, don't you worry your little head about it." You wink at the girl.

"Fuckin' weirdo." You hear the girl mutter under her breath. "Whatever. Let's just get this shit over with." Yuu nods and the two girls begin circling each other, examining each other's defenses for the perfect time to strike. After about 45 seconds, even though your Vindicare eyes don't notice anything, the girl with the spear charges at Yuu, going straight for stab into her midriff. Yuu lets the girl get close to connecting with the stab before sidestepping almost faster than you could follow, and then launching her own brutal attack into the now defenseless Sabrina. Yuu does something you can't exactly make out, moving too fast for you to follow. From the sound of it, it was rather painful, and whatever it was, it was enough to send Sabrina flying through the air, hurtling through a stack of old tires and slamming into a pile of rusting cars on the other side powerful enough to leave a rather large dent in the door of one of them.

"Damn! That fuckin' hurt, you're stronger than you look." Says Sabrina as she stands up, rubbing her jaw. "Don't get cocky, though, this fight is far from over!" She charges at Yuu again, with seemingly the exact same maneuver as before. Yuu goes on the defensive, attempting to sidestep the blow again the same way, but this time Sabrina was ready for her dodge. She does some kind of... spin move, bringing the other end of the spear around so fast it cracks like a whip and slams into Yuu, who gasps as the breath is knocked out of her. Sabrina jerks the spear back, and catches Yuu's costume on the end of it, keeping her trapped.

"Nice try, Yuu, but I've got you no-" She's interrupted as Yuu does a spin similar to her own, ripping the spear clean out of her grip. Yuu keeps spinning, though, and slams her elbow into Sabrina with an audible crunch of ribs cracking. Taking a few steps back, it looks like Yuu rips the spear out of her costume - making you wince at the sound of cloth tearing - before digging the soles of her feet deep into the ground and rushing at Sabrina, who regains her composure just in time to see Yuu coming at her. Even from this distance, you can see the fear and panic in Sabrina's eyes as she tries to summon another spear to pike Yuu with, but it just simply isn't happening. Yuu's on top of her before she can even react. Yuu's a blur, moving faster than you can comprehend as she rockets towards Sabrina. As she comes into contact with Sabrina, her fists turn into a mass of grey, with Sabrina wincing at every impact, doubling over when Yuu's assault relents.

It isn't over though, as Yuu digs her feet in again, but this time she launches upwards and into Sabrina. Her extended right fist catches Sabrina in the jaw, carrying her upwards with Yuu's momentum. The pair continue into the air for almost two yards before they come crashing back down to Earth. Sabrina on her ass, and Yuu landing gracefully on her feet. Sabrina merely lays on the ground, moaning and rolling a little bit, before Yuu drops her guard and speaks.

"A-Are you alright, Cosworth-san? I can contact someone if you feel as though that would be beneficial to yo-" Yuu seems honestly worried about her opponent, but Sabrina interrupts her.

"No, God dammit! I'm fine, I'm fine, but I concede the fight, you win." She rolls over onto her stomach and lifts herself out of the dirt, coughing up a few specks of blood.

"Wow! You moved so fast, a-and your spearwork was incredible! That was fantastic! Thank you so much for the match!" Yuu says, again bowing deeply, before straightening and extending her hand to her fallen opponent. Sabrina still seems shocked from the fight and weakly grabs Yuu's hand, grunting as she's hauled to her feet. "Thank you again! It was very enjoyable!"

"Eh, I guess it was alright, nothin' special..." She coughs into her elbow before transforming back into her normal outfit. "I guess I can see why those girls back in California talk like you're so much hot shit, 'cause you are, haha-!" She interrupts herself, bending over to cough, before standing back up. "Sorry about that, you just hit me a little harder than I was expecting!" She grins and shakes Yuu's hand. "If you're ever in California, come find me, I'll want a rematch!" She shakes her head and retreats from the impromptu arena, exiting the same way she came in.

"I guess I'd say she's more like a Ken." You whisper to yourself, before turning to look at Yuu, whistling and grinning. "I'd give that fight a six out of ten, but mostly for the way you crushed that ego she had when she came in." You hop down from the pile of cars and junk you had been sitting on and walk over to Yuu, greeting her with a heavy slap on the back. "You know, Yuu, I think I'm going to enjoy my time with you after all."

[And that's it! I apologize for any flaws or anything that it may have had, first tries are never perfect! I hope you enjoyed it!]

It was pretty good, but second person is really obnoxious to read unless it's a quest or CYOA. Would have been better in first if you want the character's inner-thoughts.

The story and MC seem fine, writing could be improved though. In addition to the second person stuff, the fights are described very clinically and it makes them kind of boring to read.

That's sort of a mean call to make there isn't it. It's not like any citizen can do jack shit against a meguca-funded, meguca-backed organization that's basically built on enforcing it's will over everyone else. I can bet there's a whole library of books to be filled on the tragic stories of those who tried to prevent this from happening.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

You are a Magical Girl, and you're on your second mission after becoming Warmaster of your Officio - and of course, getting back from Siberia.

This was supposed to be just a simple smash and grab deal. Drop in unannounced, kill enough to send the entire place into panic, grab the main objective and get out. And the client was kind enough to mention that it wasn't really an issue if you left the entire place in ruins or not - just that you got what they wanted.

It was one of those kind of missions where you could really expect to just cut loose, in a way. No principals to babysit, no civilians to avoid 'accidentally' maiming - just you, the objective, and the extraction point.

As the armored Magical Girl in front of you laughs, before taking a firmer grip on her bloodied baseball bat and winds up for another swing - you grudgingly admit to yourself that maybe this mission could've gone much better than it was currently going.

You close your eyes just in time to feel the impact of a wooden baseball bat being smashed against the side of your skull.

You open your eyes again after the third swing - and blink as you find yourself staring up at your captor from your floor, through a sheen of sticky red. ...Ah. Blood. Probably busted you open earlier. She reaches down, her helmet's emotionless faceplate with the red eyeslits coming mere inches from yours, and it's with a purr of servos that she hauls you back up, chair and all, with one hand.

"Nothing wrong with a little laugh now and then." Your armored interrogator chuckles, leaning the bat against the wall of your room before reaching forward and smoothening your costume's blood-spattered collar. "I have to admit, that's the first time I've heard that. Everyone else usually resorts to the usual puns."

...You did use a pun, though.

"Oh, of course. But it was the first time I heard it with such conviction. It's all in the delivery." Even with her helmet's faceplate masking her features, you could tell she's smiling. "I wouldn't have expected anything less from the Warmaster of the Ninth."

Heh. So she knows?

Freon scoffs, here. "Please. We at the Sixteenth Officio pride ourselves on knowing everything there is to know about all of our..." The armored girl seems to hesitate here. "...competitors? I'm not sure if that's the right word to use. But yes, we do consider ourselves very informed about our fellow agents, no matter which Incubator they contracted with." Another smile. "You may be sick of hearing this by now, Miss Chiaki Matsuda, but your reputation precedes you."

Well, she's right. You're already sick of it.

"Then you have my apologies, to be sure." The smile in her voice is maddening. "But please allow me to indulge myself. Your...performance, with Kirishima Ruri. At the stadium in Japan." She shakes her head. "That was masterful. Utterly masterful. Merciless, direct, brutal. You have your share of admirers in the Sixteenth, Miss Matsuda."

"A bit confusing, though. You had their Leader's Soul Gem in your hand, correct? Why didn't you just crush it?" She tilts her helmeted face to one side. "From what we've heard and seen from you, you're not the sort to...look upon hostiles with such mercy, such levity. Why take her and her co-conspirators prisoner, instead of executing them right where they stood?"

"Is it true, then?" The eyeslits on her helmet's faceplate seem to glow. "Is the famous Murderface, the prodigy of the Betrayer herself, finally going soft?"

How do you react?

Woke up a bit too late.

It's nice to see MGNQ back!

Death's a release, not a punishment. You murmur this after turning to the side and spitting what feels like an entire mouthful of your own blood onto the floor.

Besides, you're not done with them yet, you add as you lick your teeth, before allowing yourself to smile. Not by a long shot.

A moment of silence, before a short laugh barks out from Freon's vox-speakers. "Hah! I suppose that answers my question, then!" She leans forward, nodding in seeming appreciation. "That's the Murderface we know and admire. Logical, cold, unrelenting - having no qualms about what needs to be done. The very stuff Warmasters are made of."

It's here that she gestures towards the baseball bat she'd been using to knock you around with. "Having said that, I don't think I need to explain why this rough treatment, yes? Our credo at the Sixteenth is professionalism, no matter the cost. We admire you, Chiaki Matsuda, but at the same time, please don't expect us to roll out the red carpet for you when you try and assault a target we've been tasked to defend." Her voice carries with it a note of apologetic amusement. "From a professional to another."

...Yeah. Fine. Professional. Right.

Another tilt of her head, before Freon picks up the bat again. "I think you'll be pleased to know that we actually named this Interrogation Procedure after you. The Matsuda Protocol." Another laugh. "Preserve the captive's Soul Gem, and subject them to multiple instances of physical torture, using blunt force trauma. Always allow the captive to see their own blood, and the tools you use to make them bleed. If the captive does not sufficiently respond, switch to bladed implements after twenty-four hours."

Heh. Cute.

"I knew you'd find it amusing." It's here that she taps the bloodied business end of the bat against your right kneecap. "Right, well...I suppose we should start. Get this business over with."

Kneecaps, huh. After your skull, she goes after your kneecaps? Bit of a strange order, doesn't she think?

"Oh, I suppose so. But I rather like to save the joints for last." She clears her throat, here

"Why are you here, Chiaki Matsuda? What is your main objective?"

How do you respond?

We should definitely not reveal what we are here to steal since that would screw Sayaka, who is the only one free at the moment. And I doubt lying would work since Chiaki does not know enough to come up with a convincing lie. Odds are the interrogator would just figure out our real objective if we tried to fake it.

By the way. The interrogator has Chiakis soul gem right? Its a bit odd there were no comments on the fact that Chiakis soul gem is a very bizarre soul gem/grief seed hybrid now.

Actually, since we don't know the time-frame, Sayaka could be done, or still working her way down to the robot.

At this point we still don't even know where the box is.

We'll know when to act. Until then, we need only not tip our hand that there was another one of us. The easiest way to do that is to maintain control of the conversation by keeping her off balance.

So, to change to topic from pasta underwear,

Who else saw this weeks Kill La Kill. Ryuko didn't really seem to fit with the insanely high standards of the first before what was revealed.

She might have the combat prowess of Kharn but barely the hearth of Mami. She is good to her friends and all, but not quite on Mamis level. Being infused on a genetic level with what would be equivalent to incubator tech would certainly put her head and shoulders above the rest.

You murmur out your reply with the small smile still fixed on your face. Including the last bit. You made sure to say that a little bit louder than you usually do.

Freon nods here, before raising the bat in a double-handed grip - and then bringing it down on your right kneecap. Once. Twice. Three times in sharp, brutal succession.

The third busts your knee right open with a wet, juicy crunch. The yellowish, pink-smeared bone gleaming sickly through your torn stockings and the beaten, bruised flesh around it.

It's here - strangely enough - that you find yourself laughing. Not an out-and-out laugh, just a silent giggling that shakes your shoulders, pulling at your own strained breathing.

Freon starts, here, and even with her face masked by her helmet, you could tell she's a bit taken aback by this. "...I've heard that you're no stranger to pain, Miss Matsuda, but I didn't think it'd be something you find amusing." A note of grudging respect finds its way into her voice. "Well, no matter. Let's change topics, here - I think I can easily surmise what you're after. And I assure you that we've spared no expense to secure it."

If...if she knew what it is, t-then...why the fuck did she ask in the first place?

The armored Magical Girl makes a tsk-ing sound through her helmet. "Standard interrogation procedure, of course. Always ask, even if you have an idea what the answer is. Chances are what's said - or what isn't - could surprise you." She taps the damnable bat again, this time on your other kneecap. "Another question, then. Is there another one of you lurking about in Big Shell? Or is it just the two of you?"

How do you respond?

[]Clam up. You're done talking.

This time, it takes Freon two swings to bust your other kneecap open. In fact, you're pretty sure she stove it in, by the way her own helmet got flecked with your blood at the point of impact. She doesn't stop there, though, oh no - in fact, she gives you two more swings before finally letting the wooden bat drop to the floor in a solid clatter, a clumsy punctuation to your own gasping, wheezing laughter.

"...You're not making this easy, are you? I expected as much, but..." Freon's voice trails off, a note of frustration coloring her once-smooth voice. "Hmph. Your reputation is well-earned, I'll admit, but there's always a certain degree of...embellishment with every story."

Freon reaches for something clipped onto her belt, pulling it loose and holding it up to her face. An amethyst, cut into the shape of a flat diamond, gilded in black metal. Your Soul Gem, in its active form.

"Let's take a small break, here." The armored Magical Girl states coolly, her hidden smile once more creeping into her voice. "I'll see what the Ninth is willing to barter for your safety, if they are at all open to negotations for the return of their Warmaster." She turns her back on you, making for the heavy steel door leading out of the room.

"And I believe I'll deviate from the Matsuda Protocol when I return. Twenty-four hours seems too long to wait to switch to much more effective tools, wouldn't you say?"

A click, a creaking of rusty hinges, and you're left alone once more. Alone in your own thoughts. In your own, breath-starved amusement.

When she thought she could only save Madoka ~~by letting herself be killed in a loop for eternity~~, she was immediately willing to do that. And when she thought ~~Madoka was suffering as a result of her wish~~ she had no compunctions about ~~giving up any chance of them truly being together so that Madoka could live together with everyone else one last time~~.

~~>Fixed it, from what I can understand so far. Love is a scary, scary thing.~~

~~See, the reason I view it as a selfless sacrifice is because she genuinely believes she's doing what's best for Madoka; Homura isn't aware of the differences between what she proposed to barrier-brainwashed!Madoka and the actual existence of Madokami. As far as Homura understood, Madoka was eternally separated from everyone by being the personification of the Law of the Cycles, and when she asked barrier!Madoka about that, Madoka broke down sobbing at the thought. So to Homura, letting Madoka stay as the metaphysical concept of the law was consigning her to an eternity of self-inflicted torture.~~

~~Now, we the audience know that's not actually the case, given that Sayaka and Nagisa were both entirely cognizant and had their memories, and the exchange between Sayaka and Kyoko in the fight scene heavily implies that's the case for ALL magical girls after they die. But Homura doesn't know that, all she has to go on is the belief that Madoka sacrificed herself for everyone else, and the belief that it's the one thing Madoka would find most agonising over anything else.~~

~~Homura thinks this outcome is the best possible ending for Madoka, even if it consigns Homura to never actually be with her; she'd rather sacrifice her own happiness for Madoka's sake, just as Madoka sacrificed her happiness for everyone else's sake. The only difference is, Homura's decision was based off a fundamental misunderstanding of what Madoka had done to herself.~~

~~>Hence my very violent reaction to Homura's actions.~~

~~Well, Homura does say to Sayaka in the epilogue that she only stole the part that was Madoka as a person. The Law of the Cycles still functions, it just no longer has the human aspect of Madokami overseeing everything. Which might be worse for people, but that seems akin to "You arrive in an office with a bunch of coworkers and no management in sight, with nothing in particular to do". I figure all it means is there's no longer anybody particularly directing the Magical Witch Brigade, but then, that shouldn't be necessary anymore with the Incubators bound to Homucifer's will so that they won't interfere with things.~~

~~I'd say selfless and selfish both applies. She could just leave with Madoka at the end. That'd be her happy end period. But then who'll do anything about the Incubators ? They learned plenty this time around and they'll just work out more ways to get to Madokami. They have a lot of time and a lot of magical girls to exploit. Can Madoka do anything against the Incubators ? It's outside her domain. She's a universal law now. It's like telling Electromagnetism to stop humanity from figuring ways to exploit. Homura did a 180 right after her reunion with Madoka because she had figured out she -could- do something to flip~~

~~the status quo of the universe like Madoka herself did. It's easy to be dissatisfied because it portrayed Homura as evil and everything seemed off, but she practically put the Incubators down and gave magical girls normal happy lives. Sure, no one asked for it, but no one sure asked Madoka to do what she did and no one save Homura remembered. We're in end of series Homura's shoes now, dissatisfied with the existing world despite it being mostly better.~~

She's just doing her job. Badly, but she's actually being professional. ...You're still going to rip her arms off and beat her to death with them, though.

"Yeah, okay, yer being really intense right now, I'm going to have to ask ya to take it down a couple of notches, right?" Risa steps forward - gaining more of a shape now rather than actually being a shadow - and you see her shake her head as she looks you over. "Cripes, both knees, even. That's something else."

...What's she so bothered about? You know Kharn wasn't much into torture herself - not that you know of, anyway - but surely Risa's seen worse than just a couple of broken knees and some blood?

"'Course I have. Doesn't mean I have to like seeing it. 'Specially not on my current owner, yeah? You spend enough time as a fucking soul inside a weapon and you kinda get attached, you know."

Ah. Right. Well.

...How many points is that girl now, anyway? Hopefully worth something huge, yeah?

"...You're askin' that now, when I'm practically holdin' back enough pain to kill five grown men? Or like, maybe twenty kids, give or take two." Risa's golden, black-pinned eyes go wide at you, before swiveling to look at the ceiling in contemplation. "...Well, she's an officer, so that adds a bit...plus the 'gibbing a pal' multiplier...an' then there's the torture to account for..."

The spirit looks down at her hands and starts counting off her fingers, her toothy grin clacking voicelessly every now and then. "Comes to 1000 points flat, all in all, an' I'm bein' generous."

1000 points. Right. You'll remember that.

"S'not a lot, I know, but it's a nice amount if you want to get started on the high score." Risa shrugs. "Not that I'm itchin' for us to get going on it or anythin'."

Yeah, alright. Fine. You pull at your restraints, wincing slightly as you feel them cut into your wrists. Is it okay if she cuts you loose, now? You're getting a bit tired playing the fucking M in this party.

"Yeah, yeah. Right. Lemme try." Risa sidles up behind you, and it's here that you feel the cold bite of a chainaxe blade press against your wrists. "Ya know, I thought you were goin' crazy when you let yourself get captured, but..."

But what?

"Well, nuthin', really. Just...how did you know I'd be able to cut you loose?

You didn't actually. You just guessed.

Kind of. But it was basically Yuu being able to appear to you outside of her Golden Weapon from time to time, and...Risa being able to talk to you even when you're not holding the chainaxes. You figured there was a chance this kind of thing could work.

Risa lets out a short bark of laughter, here. "Hah! Pretty clever, I'll give ya that. But what if you were wrong, huh? If I wasn't able to do this kind of thing, you'd really be in the shit, yeah?"

Yeah. But you'd find your way out of it nonetheless.

"Heh. Alright, then." A sudden tearing sound, and you feel your restraints slacken quite considerably. Just enough for you to pull them apart on your own if you wanted to. Of course, this also had the nasty side effect of your injuries suddenly feeling as if they'd just been inflicted again twice over. Making you grit your teeth again.

"Sorry. Kind of...lost focus there." The wolf-eared ghost murmurs, sounding embarrassed. "But yeah, that's as much as I can do right now. Is that okay?"

Yeah. Yeah, this should be enough. She can focus on making things hurt less again now.

"Getting back on that." And true enough, it does start to hurt less. Not as much as earlier, but...less. "Think I need to go now, though. But, uh, you know that friend of yours? The blue one ya fought with me the last time?"

Sayaka? What about her?

Risa looks at you with both golden eyes. "I ain't supposed to be yakkin' on about this, but...she's worth ten thousand points now, but that's gonna double in the future. The near future, is what I'm gettin' at."

How do you respond?

You blink at Risa, your surprise enough to stun you into immobility.

...The hell's that supposed to mean? Is...is this about the fish mode thing she was talking about?

Risa shakes her head. "No, no. Well...yes, but...I'm not sure if it's now or later, but definitely close. It's kind of that thing where you think it's your safe day or not, and you want to tell your boyfriend but he's just wailin' on top of yer and you can't think straight, and--"

"...I'm tryin'! Look, if you were someone halfway normal and ya didn't have so much...freakin' baggage loadin' you down, I could at least pin it down definite-like, yeah? But you ain't halfway normal!"

...Look, just...is Kyoko safe? That's what matters at the moment.

"I took a peek earlier. She's okay, just...you know, doin' the one-eyed, one-armed, one-legged bandit deal. Otherwise she's fine." Risa glares at you. "Might want to keep it that way. That's all I know, and all I can tell you."

Right. Fine. You were planning on doing that anyway.

"Good to know. Just...I didn't want to make you panic, I just needed to say it--"

Fine. You understand. And you appreciate her telling you about hte points, too.

But if she implies that you're going to murder a friend of yours for points ever again, you'll stick her in a rack for the next fifteen missions.

"Please yerself, ya buggering git," Risa snaps. "Try and be a decent person for a change, an' ya get this kind of treatment! Yer lucky I ain't the Laughin' Genocide anymore, otherwise I'll show ya some manners!"

She'll have to take a number, then.

Yeah. You have to give the Sixteenth that, at least.

"What're you gonna do now, then? That's a thousand points walkin' in." Risa points towards the baseball bat Freon left, the wooden implement sticky with your own blood. "You can make do with that, right?"

The biggest advantage to pretending to be tied is we don't have to walk on smashed knees over to the door.

"Oh, yeeeeeeeeaah!! It's Crunch time!"

Ha! As if a bunch of heavy boxes would slow me down. Clever girl... BUT NOT CLEVER ENOUGH! And so I meet her dull amber gaze before I make my BOLD DECLARATION!

"Vanus Eleanor A. Slam! I am Heather Crunch, Eversor rank leader! And I have come here to test your mettle in battle!"

"...What?"

So she's going to be like that, eh? Fine, I'll play her game.

"I have come to see if the pen truly is mightier than the sword!"

Oh yeah. That sounded really cool.

"I am but a simple office worker, and I have never-"

"Hah! Nice try, but my -unparalleled observational abilities are informing- me that YYYYYOU..." Dramatic pause! Finger point! "are -hiding- something from me!"

And I -clasp- my hand over my chest, undoubtedly drawing her attention to the brilliant FIERY red of my soul gem.

"For beneath your humble appearance I can hear the heartbeat of a warrior THUNDERING in your chest, crying out for the thrill of combat!" As helpfully illustrated by my hand clenching and unclenching, with added "Thump thump, thump thump, thump thump..."

"Miss Crunch, you are mistaken, I am only a-"

"THUMP THUMP, THUMP THUMP..."

"-office worker who has never fought anyone."

She's definitely lying. Time to shake things up.

I extend my hand back, pointed out toward the opening I created kicking through the window. My weapon, my extension of the -burning resolve of my SOUL-, manifests piece by piece. A huuuuuuuuge sword that easily clips the ceiling, made up of glowy blue lines. Like in that one movie - GRON? - but just the lines. It has her totally in awe.

I should give it a name someday so I can call it out when summoning it. Named weapons are cool.

"Come on, then! I've shown you mine, now you show me yours!"

"...Sorry?"

Still playing ignorant, huh?

"You know... Your weapon!"

"I do not have a weapon."

"Getting REEEEEAL tired of your lies. Where is your weapon?"

"I am not lying, I do not have a weapon. That is why I am an office worker."

"DESK CLEAVE! SMASH!" Wood shatters and splinters fly as my faithful sword is brought down upon it in a swift two-handed swing. Supposedly it weighs a great deal, but I don't even notice. It feels like a natural extension of my arm, like it -belongs- there.

And now there is no more desk. There is only a hole and floating motes of dust where the desk used to be.

And no more magical girl. Where did she-

SLAM goes the door as footsteps hurry off into the distance. I can't help but grin. It's been quite some time since I've actually had to chase someone down like this.

And SO, I THROW the door open. And I purSUE HER, letting my colossal blade drag behind, accompanied by the sound of the floor - stone and some rebar, I think? - being ploughed right through. It slows me down a little, but I don't mind. It makes for an interesting handicap.

At the end of a long hallway, I see her lavender hair through a crack in the elevator doors, just before they shut. I guess I -could- just run over, kick the door down, cut the cable, and ride the cab crashing into the ground. That'd be great, but it'd get me in trouble and I'd be lectured again, possibly have sanctions imposed... I -did- promise to stop doing that, after all.

Instead, I move up toward the entrance to the stairwell door. From here I can just make out the LED display above the elevator door, surrounded by the stuffed heads of a few toothy, parrot-like familiars mounted on wall plaques. The readout says "G" in red lights. So she stopped at the ground floor, most likely. Didn't look like she was planning any sort of bait-and-switch trick.

I throw the door open and leap over the railing, plummeting from the top floor to the bottom. My descent barely slows as my blade cleaves through the stairs. I feel lightheaded as the adrenaline kicks in, just before I land. Big chunks of rubble RAIN from above upon my head, like little water droplets. Shake it off, Heather, shake it off. Can't run around covered in debris. Not after becoming rank leader. After becoming tidy, the plain white door ahead opens easily enough - gotta walk a ways out to make room for my weapon - and I switch to a one-handed grip. Have to flip the stairs sign around, which informs everyone that the stairs are wrecked again. I mean, -I- can clear a jump to the top floor easy enough, but it's for the benefit of the masses I suppose.

So! Here I stand in the lobby, the lobby of the Sixth Officio! It's pretty big as far as lobbies go, about two or three stories high and mostly glass. The sun shines brightly overhead, BUT IT WILL NEVER BURN AS INTENSELY AS MY ZEAL! Typical lobby stuff here, some chairs, desks, receptionist's desk, magazines - Magical Girl Monthly, maybe, I don't bother with such garbage. But BEHOLD, the MASSIVE SKULLS of the witches that our own Leman Russ took down ON HER OWN and repurposed as hallway entrances after she became warmaster! The one on the right still has the bite marks from when she tore its head off with just her teeth! The TOWERING structures -finally- got those windows installed in the eye sockets and nasal cavities, I see!

And I see my target almost to the front door! Not so fast, Slam! I EXTEND my free arm, letting my sleeve hang free, and through FORCE of WILL, manifest my masterful magic! Strips of something silver and sticky shoot swiftly from my sleeves, seeking my sought-after target, like snakes about to strike! I CUT OFF her escape with my trap, but she is able to ESCAPE back through the hall of the bitten skull before I can CATCH her!

She's quick, and I can't catch up to her easily from this distance. I retract my ribbons and try to keep up - but there's only one room that's open at this time today, and that's the gymnasium. Taking care to -not- drag my weapon around the lobby - look nice to the visitors, smile and wave for the clients, just doing rank leader things - I give chase, making damn sure to not leave a single scratch on the trophy ON PAIN OF DEATH and keep going through the mouth until the walls and floor are no longer bone white! I turn the corner just in time to see her go to the right, which means she's headed to the gymnasium. Fortunately for ME, I know a SHORTCUT!

I take a swipe at the ceiling, a loud crashing sound made as the reinforced structure is RENT ASUNDER! Then I LEAP through the gap, entering the mostly barren training hall. Barren but for the scars it has, and the people using it. Seems I interrupted the two rookies who booked this one, since they're staring at me. No time for sitting around, though, gotta keep moving.

It's about... This many paces away. It's easy to cut open the floor the same way, though it puts most of the mess in the hallway, which visitors might see. Which is bad, I think? Rank leading is hard, things were more fun when I didn't have these -responsibilities-. But I digress.

After yelling at the girls for their form, I PLUNGE INTO THE HOLE and land on the ground with all the grace of a ballerina with a giant sword. Now I can return to my normal, two-handed grip - it feels so much more natural - and KICK OPEN the gym doors! The doors FLY off the handles after detaching from the wall, and CRASH into the far side of the gym, and would have hit my prey if she hadn't stopped. She is AWE-STRUCK by my abilities, no doubt!

And she probably just realized that the only other way out is locked, which means she has to go through ME!

"Come on! Let me see your fighting spirit!"

And I shake my fist. You may cast your eyes away but I know you've got something in you, Eleanor! This empty gymnasium shall be our arena! There may be no lines of bleachers, but in my mind I can hear the ROAR of the crowd as they cheer us on! They want to see BLOOD!

"I would if I could, but I cannot."

Okay, I gotta give her props for staying cool under pressure. I guess some people like that kind of thing? But this is dragging on too long.

"Enough screwing around! As rank leader, I order you to fight me! Make your first strike!"

NOW we're getting somewhere. I can see her reaching into her pocket, no doubt to pull out a concealed weapon. I -knew- she had something on her! And I'm right, for she clutches several thin, black objects in her hands, one between each knuckle, disguised innocuously as pens! Unorthodox, but interesting! And now she HURLS all of them with pinpoint accuracy as I stand strong to take the brunt of the attack! Let's see what you've got, newbie!

"Eleanor?"

"Yes?"

"These are pens."

They're not even the sharp, pointy kind of pens. They're the kind with a plastic cap that dry out too quickly. I barely felt that at all.

"I am sorry. That is all I can make."

"Just pens."

"Just pens. No weapons." Damn. She looks every bit as uncomfortable as I am with this whole kerfuffle.

"You're sure?"

"Positive. Can I concede to you in this duel? I have work to finish and papers to haul away."

I APPLY my palm to my face, and rub my temples in irritation. "Sure," says I. She -does- look pretty upset behind her blank-faced facade. Best let her get back to her job.

My intuition wasn't wrong, though. I'm -positive- that she has potential, but apparently she doesn't even realize that herself...

Question:
Is the "Transcendent One" the Homuras in the Deagle spoke of fully separate from Chiaki (another Homura from totally different dimension), or is it somekind of split aspect/fragment of Chiaki similar to say the TNO from Planescape:Torment? Basically, are Chiaki and Transcendent One somehow connected and the same person (in some crazy way)? I was left a bit confused about this whole thing.

Fully separate, but at the same time a split aspect of Chiaki, same as TNO. Think of Homura as a single being, and then broken to a thousand pieces. Those are all the Homuras because of the loops. Chiaki is the one piece that was thrown away, never to be reunited but still a part of the mirror (i.e. her Shield being broken.)

Oh, music does inspire a lot of the scenes here, yes! And certain songs do give me ideas about characters and situations. Not just Dethklok and Bolt Thrower!

For example, Lord Money, by Mouthgrind, is definitely Kyuubey's song. Detroit Metal City's SLASH KILLER is a song I think describes Wendy's and Nicole's relationship to a T. That kind of thing.

That's a bit broad, but I guess I can disclose this much:

Well, the Sixth is located in Sydney, Australia. They're the Monster Hunters: they specialize in anti-Officio and Witch hunting tactics. They're very quick, very savage guerilla killers, the pinnacle of the Eversor rank. Or as Decu put it, they're the Space Wolves of MGNQ (their warmaster IS named Leman Russ, after all).

They number at about 300 members, 90% of them Eversors, very few Vindicares/Callidus. As a whole, they're normally pretty mellow, but very serious about work and training. They're like cheerful, affable barbarians. They're also surprisingly humanitarian and rather beloved by Australia.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

You slouch against the back of your chair just as Freon strides back into the room - making sure to look like every bit the injured, defeated Magical Girl that your captor had been bashing around with a baseball bat.

Not that that's any challenge at all, of course - looking like an utterly unreliable piece of shit had been one of your charm points ever since Malal introduced you to whiskey, and a brief shootout with a gang of crazed Magical Girls in a closed-down pharmacy introduced you to painkillers.

Lowering your head, you give your restraints another small stretch - it's that tough, bendy plastic cord shit combined with some sort of wire, AND handcuffs. Risa had been kind enough to do away with the last two, leaving you with only a thin length of plastic cord to pull apart once you finally decide to get off your ass and bust yourself out of this shithole.

Hopefully, the opportunity to do that comes sooner than later.

"What're ya doin'? Aren't you gonna--" Risa blinks from her corner, her golden black-pinned eyes wide with confusion - before being narrowed by her wide, toothy grin. "Oh, I get what yer doin'. Gonna try and catch her unaware, eh? That's pretty clever, too. I like that. Love it."

You make to look up and glare at her - to signal for the ghost to just shut up and let you concentrate - but Freon makes such a gesture unnecessary, stopping right in front of you and bringing up the power drill that Risa had predicted that she'd be bringing into the room. She guns the trigger a couple of times, making the attached drill bit spin with terrifying, blurring velocity - the roar of its industrial-strength motor filling the room with a sharp, mechanical growl loud enough to leave its whining afterscream in your ears.

Jesus. A fucking power drill. Yeah, alright, you DO have to give the Sixteenth a bit of credit. You weren't expecting that.

You must have been playing the part of the utterly-fucked Warmaster a bit too well- for Freon actually laughed as she switched the power drill off, before pulling up a chair similar to yours to sit down directly in front of you.

"Well. I didn't take the infamous Murderface to be frightened so easily by something she'd probably used on a few prisoners every now and then." She taps the stilled drill bit against your leg. "That said, you probably never took the time to let them savor the fear, did you? You just went ahead and used it on them, no questions asked, no quarter given. You probably never cared what they could tell you - you just wanted to see them suffer, did you? Just wanted to see them die."

...Listen to this bitch, talking like she actually knows you.

Nevermind the fact that she's getting it mostly right, but--

"In any case, shall we proceed with the questioning?" The crimson eyeslits of Freon's helmet seem to glow as she nods towards you. "I'm sure you're more than ready to cooperate now, yes?"

[1/2]

>>30388432

"Very well." If Freon was at all bothered by how you're shutting up now, she doesn't show it, amusement still coloring her voice. "Answer this question truthfully, Miss Matsuda, and I will have my staff heal your squadmate in the next room. Enough that she has a leg to stand on. If you refuse or lie outright, then...." She holds up the power drill again. "And I take out your eyes."

...Heh. You were wondering when she'd get serious.

"Tell us, Miss Matsuda," Freon begins, her words slow and deliberate. "About the weapons that the Ninth are gathering in secret. The weapons that, with only just one of them, can turn a Magical Girl into an unstoppable killing machine."

"Tell us about the Golden Weapons." Freon smiles behind her helmet's faceplate. Your Soul Gem, in its purple amethyst form, hangs from a hook on her belt. "Everything that you know."

How do you respond?

[]You don't know shit. In fact, she sounds like she knows more about them than you do.
[]Tell her about the Golden Weapons.

Don't forget (or be taught, since it seems like nobody reads the fucking writeups):

This girl is wearing something called "Cadre Armor". It's like duper duper fucking spess muhreen armor downsized and made more sleek and fast. It's one of oonly a handful, I think four or five, suits remaining from "the before time", before the 16th sent it's meguca on an op that had about fucking everyone but that handful of meguca fucking nuked to death by Nanoha pulling a Divine Buster on them.

These suits of armor enhance the usual shit like any power armor does but also bring another advantage: it's a drug called The Tick and makes time slow down for the user, effectively giving them Clock Up. They can take all their damn time picking out how to shoot you where and in close combat it becomes laughably easy to outmaneuver your thrusts and feints.

The Tick is one of the most jealously-kept secrets of the 16th and stealing one unit for reverse-engineering might yield absolutely infinite amounts of lulz to me milked out of the impotent rage of their incubator. The fuck crazy power armor would probably pale next to it.

Try to keep the torso and head unit in one piece, yeah? It'd be a boon at least as valuable as the original little box objective.

And in any case it sounds like an imperfect version of our own time-stop. In the same way that their armor is an inferior version of Pete.

~~(that said, MECHANICALLY it might make an interesting replacement for the overpowered shield time-stop that we can't rely on without exposing ourselves to Pinky).~~

I'm not too concerned about the 16th, but don't get your hopes up about what we'll be able to do with that armor (other than turn it over to Kyuubey for ~1,000,000 Kyuubey points). Our time stop ability is restricted largely for balance reasons. If we get something that mimics that effect, we will find that it, too, will have issues that severely limit its use.

That would be a fairly decent jump in logic to make the connection. Magical girls are fast, empowered, professionals. Especially ones from the 16th. It's not outside the realm of possibility that Kyoko would just assume she was that fast.

Stealing the armor is fine by me, using it is not. The Tick is a form of combat drug that falls into the category of "Better off not knowing what it actually is" and that isn't something I want Chiaki or the ninth getting into. Taking it apart for research? Sure. Selling it for monies? Sure. Giving it back to the 16th after we jack it in a bid to relieve inter-officio enmity? Also fine by me, I just don't want us hooked on some mystery chemical that could turn out to be Pinky's menstrual fluid for all we know.

You can't help but chuckle a bit at the question. That's it? That's what she's threatening to drill your eyes out for?

"I fail to see what's really so amusing about such a question, but sure." For the first time, you hear just a bit of frustration creeping into Freon's vox-corrupted voice. "Are all the girls from the Ninth like you, I wonder? To be able to laugh at a time like this. Or is it just confined to the higher ranks?"

You ignore her as you allow yourself a few moments more to collect yourself enough to reply. When you do so, you stretch the plastic cutting into your wrists just a bit more - and smile as you feel the restraints come within a hair's breadth of snapping.

"Wnever you're ready." Freon reminds you, gunning the power drill's motor for a few seconds. Making you wince at the noise.

Fine. Fine, she wants to know about them that badly?

She's got it all wrong. The Ninth isn't stockpiling them or anything, not how it looks like - it's containment. Pure and simple.

"Containment?" Freon echoes, leaning back and placing the stilled boring tool on her lap. "How noble of the Ninth, to shoulder the burden of having such powerful weapons all by itself." It's here that a bark of laughter issues from her helm's speakers, the sound turned ugly and spiteful by the vox-corruption. "Please. The Ninth can dress itself up to be as noble as the Second, but we all know where its interests lie--"

Is she going to be like this? Aren't you the one being interrogated? Does she even know how to fucking listen to the goddamn interrogatee when she's talking?

"..." Freon falls silent at this, before nodding. "My apologies. Please, continue."

Right. Well. You close your eyes momentarily in a long, forced blink. For some reason, your eyes hurt.

The weapons, you continue to explain, are dangerous. Magical Girls who use them are turned into killing machines, yes, but reduced to nothing but. They go fucking insane, bit by bit, until they lose the ability to distinguish hostiles from friendly.

Freon is silent at this. You've got her attention, now. She's still got her hand on the power drill, but she's not making any move to use it.

You forge onward, here. She's seen your Soul Gem, right?

"...Yes. It is...strange. Nothing like I've ever seen before." Freon unhooks it from her belt, holding it up with her other hand. "It's dark enough for us to declare it sufficiently compromised, warranting a termination order, but..." She looks back at you. "All our readings state that it is perfectly functional and intact. Despite having enough Grief in it to trigger a Witch event twice over."

Really? You blink at this. Well, anyway. It's not normal, is what you're trying to say. Something caused by the Golden Weapons themselves. In fact, you got off lucky, with Kyuubey being able to do something about it before you completely went team-killing psychopath.

Your advice? When she sees a Golden Weapon anywhere, she should just leave it well enough alone. Don't try to take it or fuck with it - just leave it where she found it. Or something.

"But it seems like such a waste to leave something like that without...at least trying to know more about it." Freon murmurs here, seemingly contemplative. "Maybe if studied enough, we can find some way to use them safely, without fear of the corruption you're so afraid of..."

How do you respond?

It's hit and miss. Some of the weapons are fairly tame. You saw me wreck shit at the stadium. Well there is one other aspect of the Weapons I know about. They are possessed, kind of like soul gems but not really. I was using the Golden Gauntlets at the time. Possessed by a girl named Yuu, sweet girl. I would have brought her, but she was injured in the fight so I'm letting her recover.

But the other three I know about, those girls are batshit insane and can take control of the user. I brought one of the more insane but not unreasonable one with me, Kharns axes. Because I assumed I wasn't going to be stepping on anyone's dick when we wrecked the place.

Becoming a Warmaster has had me buried in paperwork for the last few days and I just wanted a simple mission where I could destroy some valuable property and maybe PMC mooks.

You blink at her, incredulous, before shaking your head again. No. NO. That's fucking stupid. The Golden Weapons can't be controlled - they fuck you up, period. End of story.

Any fucking upside to using them is automatically negated by the fact that you turn into an insane, gibbering, soulless monster. It's a one-way thing. No detours. Turn immediately into a complete, team-killing psycopath, do not pass go, do not collect two hundred thousand yen.

"..." Freon falls silent for a few moments, before speaking up again. "I must say, despite my initial skepticism with the information you're giving me - you make quite a convincing case." It's here that she nods. "If your intention was to impress upon me that these weapons are indeed dangerous, then you have succeeded."

That's...well, it went better than you expected. You weren't sure if she was going to believe you, or even listen to you at all.

"However, if it was your intention to dissuade me from obtaining one for my Officio - then I'm afraid you've failed to convince me." Freon's voice, vox-corrupted as it is, gets that all-too-familiar edge of someone who's suddenly decided upon a course of action. A stupid one.

"Thank you for your cooperation, Miss Matsuda. As agreed upon, I will let you and your squadmate enjoy our hospitality, until your Incubator pays our ransom."

It's here that Freon stands up, the power drill held loosely in one gauntleted fist. "And for your reference, I am setting your ransom for...hmm." She pats the power drill against her palm contemplatively. "Ten million US dollars, I suppose? That's always customary."

...You have a bad feeling about this--

Kharn was brutal but she had a sort of honour to how she killed and she as much as possible just tried to end her opponents as quickly as possible her opponents knew that and that is the difference between the two because Murderface was quite happy to leave someone dying painfully if they were incapacitated somehow instead of outright dead

You sigh inwardly as you realize that you've not only just wasted time trying to talk some sense into her, but also a few choice opportunities to take her out quickly and quietly. She wouldn't have listened anyway. People like her, who obviously have no idea what Golden Weapons could do - they only hear what the things can do FOR them, and not TO them. You've seen it with Kirika, you've seen it with Kilgore - and you heard it in Freon's voice.

Last time you try and be an upstanding model of the Magical Girl community, you growl to yourself.

"I'll take your silence as agreement, then." It's here that Freon turns her back on you, making to leave the room. "Rest well, Miss Matsuda, and try not to do anything stupid while we wait for the Ninth to secure your release. We wouldn't want to hand over a damaged Warmaster." She turns back slightly to glance at your knees. "Well, more damaged than that, at least."

The moment when she takes a step towards the door - her armor's servo joints purring with her movement - is when you finally spring into action, your restraints snapping apart and trailing from your bloody wrists as you reach for her. Freon turns at this, her reflexes proving quick, Eversor-quick, her entire body shifting immediately into a defensive stance to meet you. The power drill comes alive in her hand as she punches forward, aiming to arrest your assault with a puncturing stab.

And it probably would've worked. If you didn't have the insane spirit of two fuckoff chainaxes blunting the worst of the pain from your injuries.

You grit your teeth as you bodily throw yourself into a fully-armored body - the impact eerily similar to running full-tilt into a brick wall. Stars - bright pinpricks of white light - dance at the edge of your vision as your forehead painfully cracks against Freon's emotionless faceplate, in a headbutt that's more accidental than anything else.

Trying for the soul gem might just give her breathing space. And sure, the power drill isn't exactly a good weapon, but if we're going to get in close, we can't take any chances.

LIVE IN THE DANGER ZONE.

Grabbing the gem now doesn't really protect it any more. Taking the drill away and using it like a club to smash up her visor might tilt the fight in our favor.

We could probably pull something better from our shield if we can access it. Can we?

Also, can we manifest the axes even if the silent room is working? Risa seemed to have no trouble moving, but can she only act in "spirit" and not actually turn into the full weapons?

In the melee you've thrown yourself into - something you're not supposed to even be doing, considering you're still mainly a member of the rank that favored killing things from afar rather than getting up close and personal - it's here that you make a grab for your Soul Gem.

A Magical Girl's Soul Gem. As ridiculous as they've always looked to you - glowy, egg-shaped pieces of shit with brass gilding all over them - you can't deny that they're as important as their name implies. The crystallized form of a Magical Girl's very soul, torn from her body and solidified into a choking hazard by pure Incubator magic.

Take it away from a Magical Girl, and you take their ability to transform.

Take it away from her far enough, and you sever the connection between it and her body - effectively turning her into a lifeless corpse until you bring her Soul Gem back in range again.

Break the damn thing, and you kill the Magical Girl, whoever she is, and even if she's got her Magical Weapon shoved so far up your ass you're spitting sparkles.

But...even before your procedure, you've always felt that something off about yours. Yes, of course you know that its passive form looks much more different now than it was before, with all the gold and the spikes and the VIII emblem embossed on it, and not to mention the fact that it's apparently dark as shit now, like you haven't been recharging with a Grief Seed for quite some time (and Mami had all three of you, before your mission, do so). But you've always felt that it belonged to someone else. Not entirely yours.

Of course, you weren't thinking about this when you made a grab for it. No, you were thinking about how stupid you'd look like if you actually missed, your fingers grasping at nothing but air.

Thankfully, you don't - your Soul Gem comes away in your fist, just in time for an armored knee to crunch right into your stomach. Your breath is forced out from your lungs in a hot, dry wheeze, and stars erupt in your vision again - but you manage to force your tired, injured frame to backpedal and duck away from a combat knife slashing towards your neck.

"...Well met, Miss Matsuda." Freon's vox-corrupted voice sounds strained, but calm. "If not for the fact that you obviously forgot that you were in a Silent Room - a fully-functioning one - then your plan certainly would've worked. As it is, though..." It's here that she reaches behind her, unclipping what looks like the non-golden equivalent of your own Golden Desert Eagle from her back. She aims this at your face, one-handedly. "...it appears that you're fucked."

You'd have agreed, of course, if not for the fact that Risa is bouncing up and down on the balls of her feet again, like a kid just raring to run downstairs and completely spaz out after unwrapping the Nintendo 64 his parents got for him.

"This is it, right?" The Laughing Genocide giggles, giddy and completely ecstatic. "This is where I get to have fun again?"

...Well. That entirely depends on what her idea of fun is. But yeah, it's possible.

"FUCKIN' YEAH!" The wolf-eared girl whoops in celebration. Meanwhile, Freon tilts her head to the side, clearly confused. Her aim is steady and accurate, however, despite this.

"Who are you talking to, Miss Matsuda? Are you--"

"Jeez, this broad likes hearin' herself gab, doesn't she?" Risa all but growls towards Freon. "Oh, speakin' of which. I'm s'posed to ask just how much go juice I give you, this time. Not my plan, comes from the Pink Lady herself. Want the entire thing, or just enough to earn those thousand points without breakin' a sweat?"

How do you respond?

She has that modifier because it's part of her character. She has only ONE motivation if life(and death) that is to avoid boredom. In the quest she is from she committed suicide because she felt like she had done everything she could while alive, and wanted to give death a try. Betrayal creates drama.

She is the embodiment of a batshit insane /tg/ tier murderhobo with nothing better to do and a ton of power.

From a distance, Chiaki's soulgem appears dark, but functional. As long as it's in its diamond form and not in egg form it looks just like a normal soul gem, except extra dark.

There ARE people who could instantly tell. Sensitives like Haruka, or especially-trained Culexus. People who make it their business to suss out Witches may find something strange about Chiaki too, but can't pinpoint it.

Just enough," You say loudly, clearly, allowing the Magical Girl currently pointing her huge-caliber handcannon at your face to hear. Allowing the small smile on your lips to widen ever so slightly. "Just enough to show this bitch what she's dealing with."

+ Was hopin' you'd cut loose a little bit, go full throttle an' everything, but this is fine too. + The wolf-eared girl's voice whispers in your mind.

+Let's get those fucking points. Let's take her fucking skull. +

It's here that the growl gets louder, nearer, filling your eardrums as well as the very room itself - and your vision, already tinted red with your own blood from the various wounds on your scalp and forehead, fills with crimson mist.

Two loud clangs - each loud enough to cut through the bestial growling coming from all directions - and you look down to see both Gorechild and Gorefather on the floor on either side of you, their toothed smiles buried deep into the steel grating.

"...Those...!" You dimly hear Freon's vox-corrupted voice bark at you as you yourself step forward, bending down to grip both chainaxes' handles to tug them free. "Stop! Matsuda, let go of those things and step back! Step away or I will shoot!"

Your only answer is a laugh as you wrench both Gorechild and Gorefather from their confines - their teeth whirring into hungry, frenzied life the moment they come free. Their twinned roars curiously matching the bestial growl in your ears perfectly, adding a strange echo to the entire thing.

At the corner of your crimson-tinged vision, you spot Freon adjusting her aim - and you realize with a cold certainty that she's drawn a bead at your Soul Gem, now. A kill-shot. "T-This is your last warning, Matsuda! Drop the Golden Weapons or I will kill you!"

[]Charge. Kill her before she can shoot.

The problem with the evil laughter and the throwing is that it it doesn't shift our body in any way. She could still shoot our soul gem

Risa, before everything else, just wants to be entertained. It's the very core of her character(at least in her source material it is) I bet she would love to watch us carry Kyobro through a fully alerted military installation. We just need to convince Risa that helping us do it will be entertaining and climactic.

Besides, it's going to be cut to pieces, and we'd have to look around for them in order to stuff them into our Shield, when Freon is right here, about to become two or three easily picked up pieces, and can fit inside of our Inventory.

You charge. No more replies, then. No more laughing, no more taunting, no more glib responses spat from smiling lips. Just murder - or your best attempt, at least, with two roaring chainaxes gripped in both fists.

Freon immediately curses as you move - the vox-speaker on her faceplate turning the epithet into a waspish shriek - and it's then that she starts shooting.

You feel the first shot as nothing more than a weak kick against your shoulder - an odd, almost pleasant warmth blossoming there. The second grazes against your thigh, leaving a mildly-itching furrow in the flesh. The third, the fourth, the fifth - all of them find their marks somewhere on your body, but they don't even come close to stopping you. Or even slowing you down.

+ LET'S START OUR OWN INTERROGATION! NOW, AXE HER A QUESTION! AHAHAHAHA! +

It's with a sharp, almost startling clarity that you hear Freon scream as you bury both chainaxes' smiles into her own shoulders. The teeth readily, easily, chewing through her armor before biting deep into her flesh. Sparks and disintegrated meat spraying into the air in equal measure.

Freon screams again as you pull both axes back in one savage, downward jerk - and both her severed arms fall to the floor in two soft, fleshy thumps. Her handcannon clattering uselessly from the slack gauntleted hand that had earlier wielded it with admirable accuracy.

+ WHOOPS! TALK ABOUT BEING CUT OFF AT THE KNEES, HERE! OR AT THE SHOULDERS, I GUESS! IT'S STILL FUNNY! +

The dismembered girl joins her severed limbs on the floor a moment later, still screaming inside her helmet, the vox speakers twisting her ragged cries into something almost demonic. She tries to futilely kick away from you, booted feet pushing and slipping on the now blood-slick floor - but you thwart her efforts by stepping forward and planting a heeled foot on her chestplate.

For all those people saying to wait for Freon to stop screaming; don't those suits have built-in radios?
Won't giving her more time give her a chance to call for help?

And for those saying to finish the job, don't the suits have built-in heart monitors, that will send out an alert as soon as her body dies? And that could mean bad things for Kyouko.

I disagree.

Torture is just something she does because it's part of the job. Which is why she goes brutal and effective, so she doesn't have to do it any longer than necessecary. It's a waste of time she could be drunk or devouring pancakes.

"I warned you, didn't I?" You murmur down at the still-screaming Freon. "I told you these things were fucking dangerous. I told you they were crazy."

You swing both chainaxes downward, planting them blade-first into the floor, before letting go and picking up the arms you've just cut off their screaming owner. Grasping them by their gauntleted hands, their pauldron-covered shoulders still dripping blood.

"Y-you're...you..." Freon finally manages. "How...how could--"

"I hate people," You cut her stammerings off with another snarl. "...that don't listen to me. I hate it when they don't take me seriously."

You press down harder with your foot on her chestplate, making the hardened metal creak and dent and buckle.

"So take this as the fucking warning that it is. Stay away from Golden Weapons. Do you understand?"

"I--"

"DO. YOU. UNDERSTAND." You don't shout - never willingly, anyway - but the sentence leaves your lips in a growled yell, a verbal punch that rocks Freon's helmeted head back.

"Y-yes! Yes! I understand--"

"Good." It's here that you raise her severed arms. "Now I'm going to beat you to death with your own arms. Just like I promised."

No, you actually don't. You just beat her into unconsciousness with them, swinging each arm wide and hard, alternating between the left and the right. Smashing the pauldroned shoulders against her helmet's faceplate again and again and again, gory makeshift mauls that sprayed even more blood with every impact.

+STOP HITTING YOURSELF! STOP HITTING YOURSELF!+ Risa had started giggling at the fourth hit, and hasn't stopped since. +HAHAHAHA! THIS IS JUST LIKE THE TIME I BEAT THAT GUY TO DEATH WITH HIS FRIEND'S SPINE!+

At the twentieth swing - with her helmet all but reduced to ruin, the faceplate broken right through and revealing a bloodied, bruised face - Freon lies still, motionless and silent. Another swing smashes the rest of her helmet away, revealing her eyes rolled up at the back of her head.

Still breathing, but unconscious. That's what you wanted, right?

Yeah. Yeah, that's what you wanted.

+ Hee hee...aw, man, I haven't laughed like that for the longest while! + Risa sighs happily as she manifests beside you. + Let's stop playing around though, yeah? Pick one of me up and let's collect that skull, and that thousand points! Hell, that was so funny I'm doubling it! Two thousand once we put her down for good! +

...No. You're not doing that, you murmur as you let Freon's severed arms flop down onto her chestplate - the crimson mist in your vision fading bit by bit. Knocking her out cold was enough.

+ What?! + Risa's black-pinned golden eyes widen at you. + You're not serious, are you? You're lettin' two thousand points go just like that? +

How do you respond?

This time it's not about the points, you murmur as you tug the chainaxes free from the floor where you'd planted them. It's about making A point. And it'll be for naught making it if you killed the one you went through all this trouble making the point to.

+ I get that, but...+ Risa seems to be quite disappointed with you, here. + It's two thousand points! Kharn'd be salivating for a point bounty less than half of that, ya know! +

You finally turn here to glare at Risa. You're sick of telling people you're not Kharn - do you have to repeat yourself to HER, too?

+ Of course you're not Kharn, anyone can see that, + The wolf-eared girl scoffs here. + Not tall enough, not choppy enough, not well-endowed enough, not FUN enough...I could go on forever if you like. But I'm not doin' it just to make you feel bad, ya know. I'm just sayin' that SHE would've jumped at the opportunity! +

Of course she would. But Kharn never really turned down a fight, no matter who it was. Knowing her, it was less about the points and more about...well, just jumping at the chance for any action, really. She was hungry like that.

You don't tell Risa this, though. Instead, you tell her that you're simply going about this the smart way: by leaving someone alive to talk about you, letting other people with potentially higher point counts know about what you just did.

Risa blinks at you, her bony jaw working up and down in silence, before finally speaking a few moments later. Realization dawning upon her. + O-oh! This is...that thing with fishing! Letting the small fry go to get the bigger ones later! Right?! +

+ Oh, then that's okay then! + The usual cheer returns to the wolf-eared ghost's face. + I can totally get behind that, no problem! +

Well. You're glad you cleared that up.

+ I'm glad so too! Good talk! + Risa gives your shoulder a comradely slap. + Now let's go get your friend next door, I think she'll be wonderin' what the hell's going on here! +

You do just that - but not before frisking Freon's armless, unconscious corpse, checking to see if she had Kyoko's Soul Gem on her person. You breathe a sigh of relief as you find the crimson jewel, stored in an inner compartment in the girl's armor.

Storing it and the chainaxes in your proper Inventory once you step out of your own Silent Room - your Shield manifesting in its rightful place on your left arm - you make a beeline for Kyoko's Silent Room next door, taking care not to get spotted by anyone. You were expecting some sort of alarm to sound once you've all but knocked Freon unconscious, but it seems no one knows what you did just yet. That suits you just fine.

You step into Kyoko's Silent Room - switching off the dampening mechanism yourself as you step in - and you barely avoid getting impaled by the biggest and arguably the sharpest spear you've ever seen, the blade crimson and triangular and blazing with fire.

"YOU'RE FUCKING DEAD!" You hear Kyoko screech from the far side of the room, and it's here that you spot her propped up against the wall, a spear manifested in her hands and extended ALL THE FUCKING WAY to the entrance. "I'LL TEACH YOU SIXTEENTH BITCHES TO TURN ME INTO A FUCKING GIMP!"

How do you react?

[]It's me, Kyoko. No need to set me on fire.

If we can all agree to use Yuu and Risa at the same time, or just more than a single weapon at a time in general. I'm fine with the idea. Otherwise, no, it probably won't happen. People like Yuu too much to just leave her while we dick around trying to appease Risa.

I think it would be badass to hold the golden axes in Yuu massive fists.

We should just turn this into a running gag. Store an extra limb or two (whether real or mannequin) in our shield and then just take them out and use them as props.

Kharn kept skulls? We'll keep limbs. So that the next time we meet an enemy, we can punch them in the face with their own arm, or kick them in the ass with their own foot.

You blink at the burning spear, and then back at Kyoko, who seems to finally realize just who she tried to skewer. "O-oh, shit, is that you, Murderface? Aw, jeez, I thought you'd be one of those armored bitches come to gloat again, and--wait, where are you goin'? HEY! MURDERFACE!"

It only takes you a moment to go back to your own Silent Room, take one of Freon's severed arms, go back to Kyoko's - and then toss it from your end of the room to hers. The armored limb flopping onto her lap like a big, dead fish.

Kyoko blinks her one good eye at the arm, and then at you. The both of you staring at each other in silence.

"...Okay. Don't say it." The red-haired Eversor grunts as she retracts her spear, the chain-linked implement disappearing in a puff of crimson flame, before pushing the severed arm off of her lap. "I get it. Yeah. Really funny."

You didn't even get to say it, though, you murmur finally as you move towards her. Seeking to help her up onto her one good leg, her one good arm wrapped around your neck.

"Nah, I get it. Don't worry." Kyoko finally grins as you get her up. "Pretty good, though. I'll have to get back at you for that." She squeezes your shoulder, here. "Where's...where's Sayaka-chan? Is she okay? They didn't get her or anything, did they? I talked to her earlier, and--"

It's here that the both of you hear something roar. Something from across the other Shell. Something big enough to project sound sufficiently loud to make even a Silent Room's walls vibrate, and big enough for its footsteps to make the floor of the super-stable Big Shell tremble.

"...The fuck was that?" Kyoko says for the both of you. You have no answer, other than to help her limp out of the Silent Room. The moment you do so, of course, is when the sirens start to scream - deafening, wailing ululations that, despite their volume, are still overwhelmed by yet another earth-shaking, ungodly roar.

The both of you look up - and finally see it.

You have no idea. Some...some sort of giant robot monster? You're not too sure.

"...W-well, whatever it is, we gotta help her!" Kyoko tugs at your costume with her one remaining hand. "That thing's gonna eat her, or something!"

What? Is she serious? Look at Sayaka, she's having the time of her life--

"Let's go, Murderface! GO!" It's here that Kyoko latches onto your back, one arm around your neck, her leg around your waist. "GO!"

...Alright, you'll go, but you're both going to look ridiculous with her hanging on your back like some kinda monkey.

"I DON'T CARE! GO! WE HAVE TO SAVE SAYAKA-CHAN!"

Alright, alright. Sheesh.

You make to move, heading directly for one of the Shell-to-Shell bridges - when a gunshot from behind you makes you stop in your tracks.

You turn around, and see another armored Magical Girl pointing what looks like a suppressed M-416 rifle at you and Kyoko.

"I don't know how the two of you got past Freon," She barks from her helmet's vox-speakers, "But you're not getting past me."

"Or me." Another voice growls, from behind you again - and turn to see the bitch who knocked you out with her taser tear her helmet off. Revealing a brown-haired with pure hate contorting her features. "I am going to SKULLFUCK the both of you after I smash both your Soul Gems into fucking NOTHING." She seethes, clearly beside herself with rage.

"How's Freon, Two-Hands?" The first girl asks, keeping her rifle trained at you.

I think at this point killing them is more than justified, and is not some "edgy" thing but a clearcut case of choosing between their lives and Chiakis.

Its one thing to leave Freon alive once she was harmless. Its another to not go full out against multiple people who have made it clear they intend our utter annihilation while Sayaka is in danger, just so we don't accidentally kill one of them. That would be sheer stupidity.

Au contraire, we have everything to gain from letting them live.

Those known as barbarians are treated as barbarians. An Officio known for murderous treatment of rival magical girls will find little mercy from others. An Officio which extends the professional courtesy of simply capturing any opposing magical girls will likely be extended the same courtesy when its own agents are defeated.

Plus, ransom money and intel. Risa can get her points in situations where killing is unavoidable or preferable.

It's not choosing between their lives and Chiaki's (at least if the timestop won). We possess the upper hand. Besides, given the small size of soul gems as targets, it's rather difficult to truly kill a magical girl without first incapacitating her.

If it were difficult to subdue without killing, and we were at risk, then I would approve of going for the kill.

Its not edgy. Its the sane reaction to someone trying to kill you and your friends. Sometimes I wonder if people have gotten complacent and think Deculture won't kill anyone we like no matter what, so it won't matter how we act. Maybe Sayaka or Kyoko SHOULD die here, because Chiaki (in other words, tg) does not take things seriously anymore and thinks more about PR rather than survival, so convinced that no one important will ever die. All it would take is one bullet to Kyokos soulgem.

I did say timestop would be the smartest thing if not for Kyoko and the very real risk the reason Sayaka is going to turn into a witch soon, is because when we come out of timestop near her, Kyoko is a dead corpse with her soulgem eaten by Pinky.

If we had been alone, going timestop and ignoring the mooks would have been smarter. But if timestop is not available, you won't show mercy to enemies who are fully armed and in full health and doing their best to kill you.

Mercy is something you show once the enemy is down and managed to survive with luck, despite you going all out. In this case its even easier, since it just means not bothering to crush their soulgems afterwards so its not like killing them would be a big deal.

If you're comparing it to reality, the problem with reality is that it is kinda hard to stop people with guns without using guns yourself, and it's kinda hard to not kill people when you use guns.

In this situation, however, a permanent kill is actually rather difficult to get, as it would usually entail deliberately smashing a soul gem. It isn't self-defense, it's a deliberate act of murder.

Fine, then lets do our best to "incapacitate" them as quickly as possible, with no regard on whether or not we accidentally hit their soulgem or not.

Thats the point I am trying to make.

Attack with full intent to take them out, but don't waste time and effort deliberately avoiding their soulgems. If their soulgem happens to be where our axe hits and they die permanently, too bad. If not, we can leave it alone.

But no "attack to incapacitate" bullshit. Attack to neutralise, and once they are out, leave the lucky survivors intact. If that means we have the DEagle and leave all "alive" by sharpshooting them all in the head, fine.

If that means, blowing them all, and their soulgems all up with a rocket launcher. Equally fine. Whatever option gets them out of the fight fastest and safest.

"Oh." Another moment of silence, before Kyoko grins. "Can I join? It's just that, you know, I got stuck in that Silent Room for a long while, an' it was really boring, and--"

Why not? You could always use an extra hand.

"Couldn't resist it, could ya?"

It's huge. Probably more than ten, fifteen stories tall. It's not the kind of robot you'd see punching out monsters in TV - it's bestial, with two wing-like appendages sprouting from its shoulders, and a lashing tail as long as it's tall.

And it's got a fucking jaw. Four, actually. All of them unfolding to amplify what sounds like its own challenging roar, which reminds you more of a truck blaring its horn interlaced with a dying cow.

Looks like it took me this long, three whole months, to write a damn letter to my best friend. That's pretty pathetic, I know.

Only a Callidus can fully appreciate having postal service in our age. If this was an e-mail, or some kind of a magical message, or pretty much anything else, me taking a flight back to you and talking this problem out included, it would get picked up by someone.
Now, I've actually been reclassed to a Vanus in here, but I still know that sending it in an envelope is a beautiful, clean way to do things, perfectly hidden in plain sight. You could send anthrax to a Warmaster, have her open it like the gas bill, maybe even really waste her Officio's time and money by killing herbody, and get away with it.
Well, it's time to get started with explaining why and how my contract came to be changed, so that I work for the Twelfth now. There's a good bunch of reasons for it, some just, and some petty. To be completely honest, I don't even have any idea how did everyone in the Tenth take it, my work since then had required full attention. Too bad I couldn't see Juubey's face when he found out that I really am gone.Did he lose his smug expression for even a split second? I may never know. Let me try justifying myself to you, Kaoru. Not asking for forgiveness or anything, but it would be great, if at least you, of all the people, would listen to what I have to say.

Its not soft or retarded to show mercy to an enemy thats helpless and not a threat to you and who you think won't come after you later (professional like Freon).

It IS soft to show mercy to someone with a gun who is actively doing their best to kill you, or someone who has for example just sworn an oath to hunt you and everyone you love down if you do show mercy (like say the crazy person here who is ignoring her orders in her bloodthirst).

People who matter are going to get killed either way.

The problem most people refuse to understand is that either way we do things we create situations and enemies who want to kill us. By walking the tightwire between murdering unnecessarily and allowing the enemy to survive, we actually create less chaos for ourselves than doing either one full bore.

The compromise is the only way we survive this with minimal losses as opposed to unacceptable losses, which either direction takes us in.

That's what Noire is about - it's a world where there is no GOOD choice, only less bad options.

The motives I had are a combination of some personal feelings regarding stuff that was building up ever since my contract, and the more obvious part, business practice of the Tenth. Maybe you have never noticed this, but it's pretty unique how the personal feelings of individuals, and the Officio methodology, which should be two different things, end up meshing together when the Saints are in charge. I am pretty much complaining here, that generally, way too much of what we would do on the field was done on a whim or a hunch. This is already a pretty terrible approach, and lately, the whole resulting bundle just wasn't worth it anymore.

Cooperating with the yaks also has a part in it all. It's both a immoral and dumb thing to do. And I've got a personal problem tied to it, too - it being all about money had made me feel really useless. Remember, my wish was pretty much for money and fame, in a roundabout way. Should have asked for that outright, but I'd wager the vanity of it all would end up being much the same.

It's great, being able to make money like an adult at the age of fifteen, from writing even, and provide for yourself, to live on your own, and still have so much time and money left over. The problem, obviously, is that I became a magical girl in order to accomplish it, and it had changed the world for me. You know that's what Faustian deals tend to do, make you feel like you have never needed that wish. Dreams are meant to be had, they are different from goals, and all that jazz. On the other hand, getting what you want instead of what you need puts everything into perspective, and from there, you can do more than only understand the full scope of this horrible mistake you have made. You also get to develop as a person according to your new values, now closer to reality.

Or, without all the preachy diarrhea, we have started earning so much dosh that I didn't have to act like a hypocrite anymore, aim for the big sellers, and write the lies that fourteen year olds want to read. I've gotten space to think about the purpose of it more. And then, to earn even more money that there wasn't any apparent use for, except maybe for that plasma you'd watch soccer on getting ridiculously big, we had to start doing all that nasty stuff.

It's not like Juubey is paranoid, you know. Not in the sense that he feels the fear from the unknown or anything. It's more like he's a control freak and wants to eliminate all possible dangers, and gain everything he can get away with grabbing, and has no idea about how it all makes him look.The thing is, I doubt even the pet projects and all those skeletons in the closet will need that much money to keep going. Maybe he just wants to have that huge surplus as insurance to throw at problems and people who wouldn't be loyal, like me.

Art must be a true nightmare for an Incubator, and, unfortunately for him, it's also a big chunk of my life. And there is definitely something such as too much money in it. I'd hate to corrupt myself with power any further. It really hurts creativity.

Chiaki will never be a pacifist, or a good person, because the instant we do, someone we should have killed will axe someone important. That's how her world words for her, above and beyond the world in general.

>> ☐ Ratmie 02/23/14(Sun)14:26 No.30435403

And then, the other part of what's wrong with the Tenth: Consider how we are being elitist to the other girls, but our individual competence isn't too special. Really, we are the last people who should scold anyone. Even Saki, though I really value her as a person, seems to be letting the Warmastering get too deep into her head lately, and don't get me even started on Kazumi. Power establishment based on pals watching each other's back, that's a gang. Calling it a company is a running joke in every mafia in the world, and it's no less of a joke in the Tenth. Just like calling ourselves Saints is.

I guess this all goes for me as well,so, I am not going to be playing holier-than-thou here, since I've participated in all that for long enough before the straw that broke the camel's back.

You see, I've seen an underling of mine being forced to witch out against her will, pretty much as a tactical nuke, and it made me wonder it could happen to me too, if I started being too vocal about what I've thought. That kind of a thing always makes you reconsider your life. Death never seems to run out of ways to impress. Ever since that time, I knew that if I ever got a chance to get away from this, I would take it.

I'd definitely say that beyond selling ourselves out, and giving hell to our kin, the loaded Soul Gem clause in the contract is the sickest thing about the Tenth. It's also why I've had to do it the way I did, in secrecy, by pretty much completely cheating the Incubator. One day, mark my words, Juubey will do that to one of the Saints, and when you start crying over it then, it will be too late.

Killing unconscious and helpless Freon? Unnecessary murder.

Killing someone with a gun who has just openly, and in blind rage declared their intention to destroy our soulgems in direct violation of their orders? Very necessary combat in self defense.

This makes me realize, I guess Juubey is also looking for a replacement for me now. Doubt he's got one. Since I've arrived, people keep accusing me of being a special snowflake, it turns out that psychometry is really rare, and proper telepathy basically nonexistent. Damned cat never bothered to tell me. You absolutely should work on your potentials, you live in the present too much. Way too many girls that could be amazing, like Hanegawa, work with what they have, but have no work put into them. I can imagine that someone like Satomi might be afraid of getting replaced. It's my fault, too, since I've used the Callidus trainees for capturing Familiars and strapping them on an operating table, rather than anything resembling lessons and passing my skills on.

But, keep in mind as well, that all of my documents, reports, and archives, up until the moment I've left, are still there in the Librarium. These also include a record of every spell I've stolen. That’s kind of a big deal. Really damn valuable. They aren't hard to work with, just make sure that they are being stored properly. Like any other room, a Silent Room can still be a wet and moldy place if you don't care for it. I hope these prove that I still have some shred of loyalty to the Tenth left.

My own records are a lot bigger now, though, through my work here, and a whole Officio's worth of new spells. It feels kind of strange. One day, I will die, and the Librarian who will replace me will get access to all of my books, and will shit bricks over all the spells I have stolen from people's minds, and never even bothered to learn to use. Granted, almost all of them are useless to me, or require a deep understanding of certain esoterics and ability with given kinds of magic, usually achieved through a matching wish. I have only learned a few of them properly myself.

Pretty much.

All the people going
>"NOOOOO DON'T KILL ANYONE EVER THAT WOULD BE BAAAAAAD!"
regardless of the specific circumstances are just completely idiotic. If a squad of enemy combatants is literally saying to your face "I am going to kill you", then all bets are off. You murder the shit out of them unless you specifically want to interrogate them later - In which case, you murder the shit out of everyone around them and heavily incapacitate them. What you don't do, however, is treat them like they are fragile snowflakes. People die in battle. That's just a fact.

But we seem to have a ton of pacifist crusaders who are trying their hardest to turn the character into a completely sterile dildo, as opposed to just a mostly sterile dildo who is, on occasion, able to cut loose and have some fun. I'm fine with the second one. Professional and pragmatic for the most part, but when shit hits the fan, able to actually kill the shit out of people without bending over backwards to make sure there is no permanent damage.

You really think Freon is going to be happy that she got beaten unconscious with her own arms instead of 'just killed'? You really think she's not going to return later, with a vengeance? Killing her was the smart play. Not the edgy play, not the flesh of fallen angels play, the smart play.

That's not what I'm getting at. I'm saying Chiaki is too high profile and her reputation already too tarnished. We would have to actively make her work on being a non-violent person for her image to change. But that would go against her character and sounds boring as fuck.

Mercs might not want to kill, but they might have to. They need to be OK with that fact or they do not have a job. Chiaki is a character that has already taken that step.

A more flexible Magical Girl, though - imagine if it was someone like the former Warmaster of Third, Ahriman - could learn all of these from the books. And, you know, even if she can't learn the greatest ones that are completely tied to personal affinity and years of development and use, all the smaller but dedicated tricks are enough. Versatile power tends to kind of even itself out in the end. It's scary to think about a girl who could use both the Litany of Sight Beyond Sight and Limiti Esterni, makes me want to just burn the books, but that would be hard to do where I am now, without anyone noticing. Here's hoping it all gets locked down in the vault, classified A or S.

I've given power a lot of thought in here, even if leaving the Tenth would seem like giving up on it. This Officio has contracted a lot of new recruits lately, mostly because of Big Fish really plowing through their ranks, from what I gather. They often don't hold up on the battlefield. It's a part of my job now, since I am an experienced Witch hunter and one of the Librarians at once, to make sure they get it together fast, and know enough that they don't die on their first assignment. The Eversor rank leader, Jarmila, is then the one who gets them through the real thing. She comes across as, by far, the most trustworthy person around. A big sister kind of a character.

Anyway, even the older squaddies in here are somewhat weak compared to what I am used to - and they say that the Tenth sucks at combat. Then there is a huge power gap between the new and old, especially when you consider the shifted requirements for a Squad Leader, and compare them to what the rank leaders can do. The higher-ups are all strong, but there are no replacements. Actually, I hear the current Warmaster became what she is from just a Squad Leader, and that it isn't exactly uncommon around here, people you wouldn't expect that from being declared talents, and made important.

Thank you for being a smart guy in a thread full of idiot murderboners who think "Enemy rawr smash!" and refuse to think things through at multiple steps.

Step #1: They are trying to kill us. Hack and slash. If one of them dies, well so be it. Hopefully it will be understood that shit happens in combat.

Step #2: They are defeated enemy combatants, and you are entirely capable of safely capturing and transporting them home without significant risk to yourself. Take prisoner. There is no question on this: otherwise you are a murderer.

Step #3: They are prisoners. If they aren't liable to go trying to kill us in revenge (something I find unlikely, given the whole did-not-kill-them thing), ransom is a good option, else just keep them in the slammer. Keeping them alive might cost a little money, but it'll result in less hard feelings.

Step #4: Go and have a drink, while not having their friends try to go after us in revenge, and having our own agents treated more mercifully as a result.

After being asked to help them with fixing their problem with newbies, I've asked myself, what makes a magical girl strong? What makes a person strong, developed to the furthest reaches of their potential?

In my opinion, though nobody is ever going to actually implement that, training magical girls as soldiers, and shutting their personal values off, is cutting the branch we sit on. For one, magic is tied to emotion. This makes jaded magical girls a lot weaker than they could potentially be. Balance of passion and order needs to be reached. That's why the Second is strong. Mirai has the right idea.

I've been told as a kid, that you can tell someone is an adult because he keeps selectively doing things that he hates. At face value, that's obviously pretty insane, but the meaning behind it is, that the person has something he believes in, that surpasses him, and overrules what he wants or doesn't want to do. Obviously, the strongest and most fulfilled people are those who manage to tie this and their childish dream they have followed and were called immature for, into the exact same thing. I may also have betrayed you to make sure that's the case with me, too.

But in order to do that, first, I had needed an opportunity.That opportunity might have been a resounding of my wish. I hear this occasionally happens, that a wish is persistent and tries to fulfill itself again, if it had failed once. Or maybe it's just a prank of fate, I have no way to know. My wish was for a person that would recognize my skills, in order to set my life straight. I got that publisher to help me with writing inane bullshit. And I've met another person appreciative of my work, three months ago.

On that day, walking back home from work, I've sensed a Witch in the park near our house. You weren't home yet, either. Now, you know that stronger Witches get scryed upon and that I get to see all those data, so I could tell that she either was so weak she was not even worth attention, or it must have been a new one. There was a good bunch of her Familiars near by, burning straw balls with doggy features, and seeing an entrance to the Barrier wide open, with her name even on top of it, it was obvious that this Witch meant business.

A few swings with my staff and a couple piles of burnt straw later, the familiars have turned out to be complete pushovers. I've thought I would clean it up, since it looked like an opportunity to do the right thing for once, and went inside her Barrier, reminiscent of a mine.

The place was littered with gems and gold veins, too. Didn't really bother with picking any of that up, since I knew it would definitely turn out to be fairy gold.

Deeper down, the pattern had started changing, and rather than a proper mine, it started looking more like a rabbit hole, the supports also began resembling root patterns. Rather then monetary value, I've started seeing more works of art. There were torn paintings and broken sculptures, the floor was littered with old music sheets. It was the first Barrier I've seen in a long time that had impacted me. She was obviously a kindred spirit to myself. It really made me wish I could have met her while she was alive. The least I could do was to end it for her.

When I've finally arrived to where the Witch should have been, the gate was blocked by roots, which is uncommon - the entrance to the center tends to be welcoming. There, I've met the Warmaster's Aide of the Twelfth.

Panna Vászon is a somewhat tall and pale gypsy woman, with a face wrinkled like an old tree. You don't meet old magical girls often, and she's the oldest looking one I've ever met. Not only did she stand in the Barrier untransformed, she even wore a goddamned business suit, though wearing a gemmed crown with it marked her as a sparkly. Thinking back on it now, circumstances seem to point to the idea that meeting me was a setup, that she had scouted me out. I'm curious about if she could have even made the Witch appear there, somehow. It did turn out to be pretty strong, too, enough that I doubt it was created on spot.

She'd say that she was looking for this Witch, apparently she was a stray from her Officio, a loose end she wanted to tie up personally, and that she has permission from Juubey to hunt on his grounds. I said, why not, I'd save on energy. To that she had transformed, and prompted me to help her breaking open the door.

Fortunately though, I didn't have to expend juice to blast it with attack spells. She had pulled out a flagon of some gray liquid, and sprinkled it under the gate. “The Barrier should now be a bit more jumpy in there" she said, "just make a few cuts on the roots with that polearm of yours, and they should be trying to get away. It will also alert her of our presence, but I can only do so much. I am just an alchemist, not a wizard.”

And so I did. Not only did the roots come apart like possessed, the gate in had opened on its own, and both sides had left the door frame, pressing themselves to the walls of the corridor, shaking, and visibly as frightened as door can be. In this job, you really do see something new every day.

From there, the way led straight to the center, and the Witch herself.

She was in that uncanny valley of looking both silly and menacing. I keep running into animal motives in Witch research, psychology has a lot to say about that, but this girl, she was the real cream of the anthropomorphous personification crop. Only the razor sharp spikes on her back and scissor blades for arms have betrayed her cute visage.

Panna asked me to help her kill it, but now I was curious. A badger with arms made for cutting instead of digging almost makes sense. I've wanted to know more about this girl. Digging into her mind revealed a stream of literary titles, and her strongly dismissive opinions about all of them. Well, I remember she had liked Joyce. There may have been more, but she jumped at me too soon, apparently sensing that something fishy was going on.

Thus I had to transform the book back into a staff, and my fun time was over. That initial onslaught was pretty fast, it's still a good thing it was me investigating this, and not somebody green. For you, though, she would have been nothing. It barely took a minute. Her biggest advantage was the cramped space, rare in a Barrier, that made it hard to dodge her swings. Probably should have played smart instead, use those spikes, roll up in a ball or shoot them, I don't know. Panna's whip also seemed to hurt her an awful lot, so overall, it was pretty disappointing.

As she was breathing her last, I took out the X-File again, and tried to salvage her thoughts. She wanted everyone to know that Hospice is really a great album, and how much she wishes that everyone would understand that.

Telling that to Panna got me the driest of laughs from her, and the question how do I know.

Do you remember the thing I wear on my forehead? That's called a Bindi. It's commonly assumed that it signifies the Third Eye and marks the person as smart, but that's pretty much completely wrong. It's a sign of focus, and marks the person as a worshipper of wisdom, as someone who really cares about his decisions being right, and leading to enlightenment. There is a big disclaimer here, and I trust you do understand that I am not a perfect or even very wise person in the least. But in this way, I want the world to know that I am at least trying to get it all right. Panna wears a Bindi as well, so I've thought we might be a bit alike.

And that we were. As rash and uncomfortable a person as she is, like old workaholic people tend to be, she is also quite the well of knowledge. We've talked about Witches for a hour or so in that park, before she went back to my skills. Apparently, it's some sort of a win on the Incubator roulette, compared to the others. She offered me a position within the Twelfth, where I would have peace for work. That I should visit there and think things through first, definitely - but she had already had me in her net.

If you are curious, the thing Panna said about having permission from Juubey was bullshit - I've asked. And while I was there, I've reported that a Witch had popped out near my house and that I've killed it and went on to take a shower, and that it dropped no Seed. Then, I've asked for a holiday - you know, so I wouldn't have unfinished or waiting assignments - and took the flight to Prague during it. Sure enough, Juubey must have gotten some kind of a hunch, but it seems he's at least discreet enough not to stalk his operatives in case they were going to betray him. Which I subsequently did, so if he's breathing down your necks even more now, blame me for that.

I'm sorry, you're wrong. I understand you'd like to go full Buddhist redemption, but Chaiki isn't going to be Buddha. She'll never be that redeemed. Good and evil mean very little to her, but there is okay and not okay.

It is perfectly acceptable for a Taoist to kill when the world has arranged it so that it becomes necessary. The Tao of Chiaki may not be complete or very in tune yet, but we're getting to the point where we need to be able to kill and show mercy in equal measures.

And right now, these two need to be dead for a while to realize that taking on a Warmaster means taking on a WAR MASTER.

I can't tell whether Prague is a blessed city, like the Twelfth claims, or damned, like the Fourteenth would like everyone to think. But I can tell that it's a damn spiritually rich land. There's something ominous in the air here, like the sky crackles with power you can just hold on, like there is potential free for grabs, waiting to be used by everyone who enters. Getting addicted to Prague is easy, and happens a lot. There are heaps of foreign hobos who come here to die in a gutter, ground by the city's wheels. Drugs, gambling, cheap prostitution from great-looking girls, and yet, there is something very unique, very special, and even noble about it all. The subtle but lethal temptations weed out the weak, and only the strong survive. Many of the mankind's advancements originate here, and many brand new chapters of history began with someone getting an idea into his head in Prague. Contact Lens! Firearms in open warfare! Crystal meth for everyone! Also, defenestrating corrupt bureaucrats. As a visual metaphor, that might have really set up the idea of mob really revolting from ground up.

This place is surreal and wild in a way no Barrier will ever be. You leave the well-oiled machine of a bank, and right outside, the teenage toothless beggars would blabber incoherent stuff as you pass them by, and with each step on the ancient pavement, you become more assured that somewhere down below, crazy cultists must be planning the end of the world, opposed only by a knight order that had been around for centuries, and only plays a tiny role in it all, just like the Free Masons, Illuminati, and, yes, even the Incubators. That there had been a huge battle of good and evil happening here, for more than a thousand years, the scope of which you cannot hope to possibly understand, and that what you should do is just be yourself in the best way you can, and hope that you are one of the good guys.

An obvious retort is, that these are all just the common feelings that a villager has when he enters a city, and it really is the same thing, but I feel it as well. Prague is the city of cities. Every night, it feels as if just in the next moment, the merry-go-round Witch must show up high above the Astronomical Orrery, and turn everything upside down, the way it was always meant to be, smashing down the props and painted backdrops of civilization, and revealing the elaborate mechanism underneath.

Well, I've digressed. The cultists and knights part is true, though - after all, most of the Officio is located underground. The Vanus who work with me most of the time are way into mysticism, too.

Remember the Fourteenth? The girls that made you laugh with "Even if there is no God or Buddha, there is the First Knight?" Well, they are feuding with the Twelfth. While they seem to worship the Blessed Lady here, they do it somehow wrong for the Fourteenth's tastes. The Twelfth claims that the blessed lady is misunderstood, and also refuse the whole knight part. Apparently they are willing to defend their beliefs, too, and sometimes do skirmishes on smaller scale. The Twelfth can’t really afford it, but it seems to be a tradition in these parts. Militant Protestantism at its finest.

This is a funny thing. Religion becomes so much simpler once you actually see a saint doing a miracle. Early Christians have used to die in roman arenas by scores for a long time, never altering their beliefs, even when tortured. This is not because they would be unable to change their standpoint, even if it would save their works and families. According to their own words, they simply did see someone performing a miracle, were thoroughly convinced by it, and weren't able to deny it.

If, at that point, you doubt it anyway, if you yell "It's a trick!" here, what you get is someone called a Gnostic. Such a person believes that the divine is something to be figured out. Most Vanus working in the archive occasionally see funny things, after all, and if they do that job for a long time, they start getting funny ideas too. So, in a sense, this means that they do believe in the Blessed Lady here, like you would believe that the sun will rise tomorrow.The divinations occasionally show her, she is evidently important, and the people with access to the Librarium would even be able to make an educated guess on what she is. They regard her as an important figure in the afterlife, but reject some of the assertions that the Fourteenth would make, as ungrounded and unnecessary.

In the same breath I must say, that they are a lot less happy for it.

Now, I am not going to tell you all about how I've been led underground by a little gypsy girl courier, and gifted Panna some of our tea to go with her cookies, and then got a lesson on the history of Borgias. But, just so you know, the grass on the other side of the fence is just as puke green as the weeds under your feet.

I've been played for a fool in coming here, Kaoru. This place is a bad spot to be if you are replaceable, and, much like Panna, the Incubator is an old school type. I hear that Ye Mutant Cats of Olde would supposedly omit the part of the contract regarding witching out, but this guy goes beyond stating it in red letters, and adds that Witches are one part of the company end product, and that becoming a Witch is one of the two ways to fulfill your side of the contract, an alternative to serving until retirement.

If you ever meet Panna, watch out. Nobody in here remembers her young. Not even the Rank Leaders, who are the longest serving people around. Hardly the Warmasters, who the Incubator changes like socks, after they inevitably witch out. Once you really dive into the backgrounds in exceptional Witch profiles, it turns out that a good portion of them were formerly girls of the Twelfth.

I've got my theories and clues, too, but suffice to say: even if Juubey is a dick, be glad for what you have.

With love, Umika

A golden Weapon removes the option of talkign them down. Before the process, we nearly killed several of our own people. Kirika DID kill several of her own people. No one who has used a Golden Weapon has ever been able to compromise, control themselves, or keep from doing horrible things to people.

The ONLY reason we can be reasonable when using a Golden Weapon (and we sometimes FAIL to be so) is because of the process.

If you think talking anyone with a Golden Weapon down is even remotely possible, you're operating under a delusion.

I think that may acutally be the one justifiable thing he is saying - if we incapacitate them but leave them alive then okay, they may not appreciate getting completely fucked up but if we start gem-killing them, then yeah that's the point where the revenge issue becomes and actual problem, at which point killing everyone saves the most trouble later.

Definately a tricky one.

On the other hand, if we turn them all into quadroplegics and then the sixteenth blow up the oil rig they'll die just as completely as if we gem-kill them.

Like I say, tricky. At the end of the day, I don't think we should nessicarily feel compelled to hold back just because we fear consequences.

As Neco said, there are consequences in either direction. And as Decu said, Chiaki is usually at her best when she acts definitively.

Humans are creatures of revenge but when you break the cycle by not perpetuating needless violence, then that nature starts to question itself and you gain a potential ally at maybe best and only at worst will they decide to just leave you alone.

Through continuing the violence and killing you ensure that the cycle continues and their friends will try to kill us. Mercy is the only way for Chiaki to find the redemption she wants. Even if it will be a struggle, she has to try. Allowing Chiaki to surrender to the murderboners is not an option.

Mercy, not murder, is the only way to save the world. First we can save the 9th by getting them known as the Merciful instead of the Murderers, and then we can break the cycle just like we can break the cycle of human nature.

Death is not mercy because life is sacred. It is always mercy to allow life to flourish even if it is harder to do so.

We should choose to do the right things not because they are easy, for the right things are never easy. We must choose to do the right things because they are hard.

This is what Chiaki -needs- to do.

We still kind of are addicts to the alcohol and narcotics, the most we've done so far is quit smoking. We've just not had any pain killers on us to take, and barely any time to drink booze recently.

Also we still have very large urges to kill people, which usually is barely avoided due to our professionalism. However at the few moments we cut loose, we do so for good reasons.

For example, we cut loose against Kirika, still got our ass handed to us, and won just barely. That was a good time to cut loose and let out our inner Murderface.

We can never be fully redeemed, you need to understand Chiaki's limits.

Mercy is cruel and forgiveness can cause more pain than you can imagine. Wrath can sustain one in the face of death, and vengeance must be taken when the innocent and the weak have no recourse.

Tao does not care about your feelings or the feelings of those caught in it. One moves with tao or be shattered against it. Chiaki's tao does not include mercy and kindness for all and everyone. To do so will bring suffering and pain, for those around her, and she knows this.

Oh you misunderstand, I am very open to the idea of a good ending. However the pacifism route is going to end in us dead, and everyone we know and love dead.

You need to understand that there is a time to kill, Kirika was an example of this, there have been many examples of when to kill in this quest.

To kill to defend our loved ones and ourselves, is what Chiaki tends to do. She has recently been threatened with said things, death to herself and her friends.

So to end this argument, lets kill some Magical Girls, get drunk later, then make sweet romance with Midori by holding hands.

Of the people voting to cut apart the two 16th girls in front of us, by "kill" do you mean mission-kill or Soul Gem-destruction kill?
Because destroying their bodies will not kill Magical Girls, but will neutralize them for the duration of the mission.
I'd like to believe that the moderates want to go with simple mission-kills because they're faster to ensure that a body is unable to continue fighting than it is to find and confirm destruction of a Soul Gem, especially when it's hidden somewhere under that powered armor.

MAGICAL
GIRL NOIR

This isn't the first time you've faced down monsters on your own before. In the years that you've toiled underneath Kirika's sadistic, unforgiving tutelage - as well as spending half a year of your life directly serving under Kharn, before Murderface came around and ruined EVERYTHING - you've lost count on how many times you've been thrown into Witch Barriers, without any assistance or even the flimsiest shred of hope for backup.

And these Witch Barriers were...serious. Witch Barriers that housed monstrosities bigger, taller, and decidedly more deadly than the iron giant smelling of fire and steel and hate standing in front of you. Each Witch not only seeking to devour you as its prey, hell-bent on consuming you for the temerity of intruding in its abode, as a Magical Girl yet to suffer the same fate as it did - but also swarming with its own host of familiars.

Fledgling Witches, enslaved to the corrupted Magical Girl that birthed them, twisted things that would metamorphose into Witches of their own if left to escape the Nightmare they were imprisoned in and allowed to taste human flesh.

But you killed. Each and every single one of them.

You're not going to say they were easy kills - that would be a disservice to the opponents that they had been, even if they were at that point mindless and only driven with their basic primal drives to feed and survive. No, each kill, each victory, you had to slash and tear and rip and gouge with nothing else but your blades and a single-minded fury that made your vision bleed red.

And when those broke or faded, as they are wont to in long, drawn-out encounters were either party is doing their best NOT to die - you used your bare hands, your teeth, and your desperation to see Kyoko again.

So yes, you're confident. Confident of your chances to see this thing dead, even if your Warmaster and your fellow Eversor are not around to provide support. You're already wondering if it's at all possible to have the thing's head - once you've cut it off - to be shipped back to Mitakihara, as a monument not only to prove that an Eversor of the Ninth destroyed such a thing, but to also ensure that all other Officios who have the temerity of challenging the Officio is sufficiently warned.

...Maybe that was why Kharn collected skulls? It makes sense, after all. Surely it wasn't for some idiotic reason, akin to how a nerd collects action figures or stamps. Something of a hobby, to show off.

Wait, no, that's probably it. You wouldn't even put it past Kharn. Even before her exile, the former Warmaster had had her share of...eccentricities. Even before becoming the Betrayer, she made for a fearsome, if slightly off-kilter Warmaster.

At least she was reliable, though. Not like--

The beast roars its challenge again, snapping you out of your thoughts and back into the present. It stomps both its feet into the plate metal floor, dimpling the steel with dents the size of craters. Even with such a gigantic display of robotic rage, the Shell itself doesn't so much as creak, a testament to the strength of the pillars holding the damn thing over the sea.

At least you won't have to worry about the damn place coming to pieces as you're killing, you think as you beckon the monstrous iron form closer with one hand. Drowning would be a singularly ignoble way to die, especially for an Eversor.

The beast shrieks at your taunt, and with a thunderous approach, starts to charge at you, its arrowhead-like skull held low. Seeking to crush you in the momentous impact of its staggering charge. At the same time, gun turrets on its shoulders and knees start to cycle up and spit fire at you - rounds that you easily bat away with a flick of Blueberry Cheesecake Brownie's blade.

So, how do you do this? How do you go about turning this machine of the Sixteenth into nothing more than component parts?

[]Do it defensively. Evasive maneuvers to every offensive move it makes, while flinging blades at its gun emplacements and crucial machinery.
[]Do it aggressively. Match this metal monster's moves, strike by strike, blow by blow. No one sends a giant walking fax machine at the Ninth and expect it to survive the hour.

You decide to be aggressive. No one sends a giant walking fax machine at the Ninth - at YOU - and expect it to survive the hour. Frankly, you're insulted that the Sixteenth thought that a Magical Girl - a properly-trained one, at least - would be taken out by something that has more in common with a coffee maker than an actual security measure. And you will pay them back for that insult.

Leaning forward, one foot in front and the other stretched out behind you - both your hands briefly touching the cold, metal floor - you briefly tense your entire frame into a runner's stance, preparing to send yourself hurtling towards the approaching beast. Its gun turrets continue to clatter loudly, spitting fire and brimstone at your direction, and you pay them no heed as they spark and crash all around you. Some of these shots are lucky enough to graze, causing minor flesh wounds and rents that close themselves almost as fast as they're inflicted. Barely even worth your notice, or even a reaction.

The moment that the metal monster takes another step towards you is the moment that you move. You grit your teeth against the momentary burst of pain as you kick off of the floor in a burst of raw magic and strength, sending yourself not only hurtling towards the creature but also right into a collision course with its pronged maw.

And at the very last split-second before you meet - before you end up as an unsightly, bloody smear up on the thing's facial armor - you slam Blueberry Cheesecake Brownie back into its sheath, tense your entire frame for the oncoming impact, and then you pull the trigger.

It's always an...ordeal, whenever you used Amber Nakajima's gift to you in conjunction with the firing mechanism welded onto its sheath.

Not only do you have to worry about keeping the timing absolutely perfect - a solitary moment's distraction could tear your arm off or, in the worst case scenario, send the blade itself rocketing towards God knows where - you also had to worry about the fact that an unsurpressed, point-blank muzzle flash was exploding right in your face. You had to either look away or blink at the very moment it turned the entire world into a explosion of heat and light. Do it too early and you risked missing your target entirely, and doing it too late would blind you long enough for your enemy - if they survived - to cut apart the bumbling idiot in front of them.

This time, however, against a monster as tall as a fucking building - you execute it flawlessly. Impeccably. A perfect execution of the attack that, when you heard of it the first time, you considered completely and utterly fucking insane. Par for the course with American inventions, sure, but still really mad.

The explosion-propelled sword strike cutting - no, SMASHING against its face rocks the beast where it stands. Its charge cut off as its massive, streamlined skull lolls on its corded neck, drunkenly, before shaking briefly as if to clear the cobwebs. You fall to the ground before it, landing upright on both feet as it screams again - the monster now sporting a large, sparking gash where its eye and half of its face had been. Haemolubricant and oil sparking from its wound.

"Boring." You drawl this out, inadvertently borrowing your former tutor's expression when she found sparring to not be as exciting as she was expecting. "Come on - show me a good time, you walking piece of shit!"

The monster roars again, louder, harsher, angrier, as if having comprehended your adding insult to its injury - and one of its wings unfold to reveal what looks like a blade. A tempered blade as long as its muscular tail slashing from behind it, crackling with the same killing energy that your own crimson sword would once you primed it.

Its guns continuing to spit rounds at your direction - shots you continue to almost lazily deflect away with your own sword, or simply step aside to avoid - the beast twists its torso to smash its blade down at you, in a massive overhead cleave. The oncoming blade large enough to block out all light from the overhead fluorescent lighting, like a building toppling over to crush you.

Bracing yourself with both feet, you swing Blueberry Cheesecake Brownie in the very same moment - and the crash of your own sword clashing with a gigantic one is loud enough to smash all the glass windows in the entire strut. You feel something in your knees click as the robot leans its entire weight into the blow - but you grit your teeth as you refuse, absolutely refuse to give even an inch of ground. The contact between your blades sparking with killing electricity and grinding friction, the overlapping power fields protesting.

Just as you make to power through the stalemate and push back against the blade - it's hear that you see a hatch open from the machine's skull. You narrow your eyes as four feline forms, black and spiked and armored, sprout from the hatch before leaping down onto the floor. Their leonine heads glowing with a single crimson eye each.

They stalk closer, and it's here that you see their size - easily bigger than a jungle cat, their synthetic muscles bulging underneath armor plating. Their tales, mere prehensile cabling with tendrils at the tip, unfurl and grasp at what looks like wide-bladed chainsaws attached to their backs. Pulling them free and waving them about, the chainsaw teeth sparking as they whir into angry life.

[GREETINGS, MAGICAL GIRL.] One of them barks in a digitized voice. [WE ARE HERE IN SUPPORT OF RAY. SURRENDER OR BE DESTROYED.]

You glare at the pack of newcomers slinking towards you, their chainblades roaring into life, a curious mechanical equivalent of a predatory snarl - and it's here that you break from your stalemate with RAY, pushing back and then kicking off from the floor to land a few meters away. Giving yourself a bit of breathing space not only from the tall, gigantic monster but also from its pet robot cats closing in.

"Figured there was a catch like this somewhere." You grumble as you shove the crimson length of Blueberry Cheesecake Brownie back into its sheath, your off-hand stroking the trigger while your free hand dives into your Inventory. You glance back at RAY as the beast seems to step back as well, the ruined half of its face still sparking. "It's really not my style to do something like this, but hey - if you've got friends of your own, I've got mine, too."

With a bit more rummaging, you manage to fish out the watch that Chiaki gave you, just before this entire operation went ass-upwards. You know that this is supposed to be the thing that calls in Misaka's huge robot thing - Tiny Pete, or whatever its stupid name is - but just HOW it did it, you're not too sure. You only remember Chiaki telling you how to use it - and she wasn't really all that specific with that kind of thing.

Eh, well. You're not REALLY well and truly fucked, not right now - but you do know a dangerous situation when you're in one.

You press down hard on the watch's face, hard enough to nearly break the fiberglass - and something clicks and beeps inside the device. You blink as you watch the timepiece's face disappear in a smattering of static, replaced with a superdeformed graphic of Misaka's beaming face, both hands punching the air and flashing thumbs-ups in looping, jerky encouragement.

...Is that it? That can't possibly be--

...Oh.

An explosion of white light - and a blast of flattening, concussive sound - and you cover both your ears as SOMETHING happens in front of you, something that the stalking hostiles and even RAY flinches visibly from. Once the light itself had faded and your ears had stopped ringing, you blink to look at...well, yet another robot monstrosity in front of you. But this time, it's YOUR robot monstrosity, arriving in all of its spiked, menacing, towering glory. A blocky, double-barreled firearm in one of its armored fists, the other occupied by a tall warhammer with its rectangular maul-end sparking with killing energy.

Tiny Pete. Misaka's ill-named robot pal. You made her a stuffed version of him months earlier. It was easy enough to make, what with his chunky armor and all, but embroidering every single bronze detail on his armor was just pure frustration.

[REPORTING FOR REINFORCEMENTS, SEARGENT BLUEBERRY.] The giant intones from the speakers within its tusked helm as it turns to face you. [AWAITING ORDERS.]

Orders? You blink up at it, briefly frowning at the nickname that Misaka's apparently made it call you.

[NEW TARGET IDENTIFIED] The robot cats chirp and screech as they stalk forward again, their attention now centered on Tiny Pete. One of them, looking for a quick kill, lunges forward with its claws out - but your new friend isn't taking it, apparently.

With a startling speed that should have been impossible for someone so encumbered with so much armor, the terminator smashes the robot cat back with an almost casual swing of its hammer. The head crunches into the robot predator's midsection, and there's a loud snap-release of energy as the lightning wrapping the hammer bursts out, flinging the attacker away and smashing it against a far wall. It gets up a few moments later, one of its legs limping slightly, but still capable of hunting.

[AWAITING ORDERS] Tiny Pete intones again, turning back to you as if nothing had happened. As if it hadn't just slapped down a giant robot cat with the effortlessness of someone slapping down an insect.

What are your orders for Tiny Pete?

[]Keep them off my back while I kill the big one.
[]Other.

You tell Tiny Pete his orders - which, of course, is to keep off the robot cats off your back while you kill RAY, the big one with half a face left. Tiny Pete nods at this, reaching down to mag-lock his gun onto his thigh armor before taking up his hammer in both hands. Turning back to face the squad of growling, skulking robotic predators.

He lowers his massively-pauldroned shoulder as he charges into the group, bashing his way into the melee and laying about with his hammer, each impact a bassy, crackling explosion of light and pressure that spoke of breaking armor and tearing synthetic muscle.

...Well. Loathe as you were to call on backup so early, he's actually doing a pretty good job.

You move to re-engage RAY, making to leave the four drones behind in Tiny Pete's care - when one of them tries to lunge at you, to stop you in your tracks. The summoned Terminator seems to have other plans, however, as it grabs your would-be attacker by its chainsaw-tipped tail and whips it hard into the floor, before stomping on its spine with a massive boot.

Very good. Maybe...maybe you should ask Misaka if she could make you one, too? Not that you really needed one, of course, but it'd be convenient, at least.

You shake your head free of distractions and continue moving, back towards Ray - the monster stepping forward once more to rise to your challenge. Its halved face seems to have stopped sparking and leaking fluid, instead harboring what appears to be small, ball-like shapes crawling on its revealed skeleton and...fixing it? It's trying to fix itself?

That's new, at least, you think to yourself as you start to dodge the hail of bullets once more raining down on you from RAY's shoulder turrets. One of the rounds spat towards you gets a lucky hit, burying itself into your shoulder and then tearing its way out with a liquid crack of flesh and bone and blood.

You don't even so much as look as the grievous wound - which would have reduced anyone non-magical into a curling, sobbing wreck - start to close and heal, your regeneration abilities kicking into gear automatically. A more perfect, efficient mimicry of the clumsy repair process RAY is doing to its face that you ruined.

Hnh. Might as well get rid of those gun turrets first, right? They're going to be much more annoying if you let this drag on any further. Then again, that sword-wing thing it has isn't something to sneeze at, either...

You hop lightly out of the way as RAY once more smashes its sword-wing down on the spot where you'd just been a few heartbeats ago, caving in that part of the floor where its wing-blade crashed right into.

What do you do, now?

[]Go for its turrets. Reduce its long-range capability.
[]Go for its legs. Something that big will be a sitting duck if you take away its mobility.

According to experience, the turrets can't reach you when hacking away at the legs, and it opens up chances to stun the thing and slice the turrets off, amongst other pieces of armor.

The turrets, you decide. The turrets have to die first.

Slapping away three rounds that would've blown your brain out the back of your skull with Blueberry Cheesecake Brownie's crimson length, you dash and slide underneath another one of RAY's massive, clumsy swings with its gigantic blade.

As soon as you clear the blade itself, you twist, switching your hold on your blade to a reverse stabbing grip before driving it completely into the beast's appendage. RAY shrieks at this, seemingly in pain - as if machines could feel pain - and it flails its pierced wing, with you still holding on to your sword. A moment more, and Blueberry Cheesecake Brownie dislodges from its reluctant sheathe, the momentum sending you hurtling up to the ceiling.

You take the moment before freefall to enjoy a moment's worth of tranquility - before shoving Blueberry Cheesecake Brownie back into its sheath, priming the trigger, and then adjusting your angle of fall just enough so that--

BANG.

Another blinding flash, another concussive explosion - and the gun turret on RAY's right shoulder EXPLODES into razor-sharp ribbons, each one still glowing white-hot from the flash-friction of being cut so quickly and so deeply. You immediately resheathe your sword and fling yourself towards the other one, murdering that one too in a thunderclap of deafening gunfire and destroyed machinery. The wreckage of both turrets pathetically crash to the floor in a defeated heap, a stark contrast to your own silent descent.

The destruction of its turrets seem to stagger RAY, but only for a brief moment - you turn around, sword held en garde, as you watch its other eye blaze a hellish crimson before it rears its head back and SCREAMS. This time loud enough to make even the allies it vomited out of its skull whine and cower. Another scream, before it charges you again - a faster, more frenzied berserker charge. Faster than it has ever moved the entire time.

Faster than - and you realize this with a cold, sudden clarity - you.

With the pain-maddened, half-ruined monster bearing down on you to crush you where you stand, you only have a few options to work with.

And in this deafening din, of the symphony of your own approaching death - you hear what sounds like a soft violin, playing a mournful, twisting tune. Each chord riddled with jarring transitions made to resemble the sound of someone tearfully sobbing in rage, in fear, and in resigned hollow regret.

Why would she willingly witch out?

For that matter, why is she so close to witching out anyway? Presumably her soulgem was purified before she left, and its not like she has yet to use huge amounts of power or anything. Nor is she in despair.

I guess if she got really brutally injured (think sliced in two pieces or something, her healing factor would go to overdrive trying to fix it, and would drain her soulgem dry).

Pity Chiaki is not here. Maybe her soulgem CAN work as a griefseed now and that could have saved Sayaka.

Because Urobutchi explained that the rate at which Grief accumulates is not constant, and a clean Soul Gem can instantly Witch out if the Magical Girl experiences something traumatic OR uses up a lot of magic very quickly.

I dunno. She might try to find a way to bring Sayaka back. I mean we know that Kharn went witch and came back.

Actually, did Chiaki not sorta witch out too? That whole fragment thing was a bit confusing so I am unsure if Chiaki went full 100% witch and back? Was that ever confirmed/denied?

I could see Kyoko hanging on a while in hopes of saving her, and only then giving into despair.

Magical girls can retire in this world, because for some unknown (and probably mindcrushingly horrible) reason there is a significant surplus of grief seeds.

I may remember wrong, but Kharn spoke of retiring after Malal died and claimed he would be getting 1 grief seed a month for the rest of his life, free of charge.

The incubators are probably doing what canon Kyoko did, on a large scale. Feeding homeless and sick and such to familiars, then killing the witch for the seed.

No! No...no fucking violin music! You don't hear anything!

You grit your teeth, shaking your head as you give voice to that denial - before tearing out Blueberry Cheesecake Brownie from its sheath and propping it across your body with both hands. Bracing yourself from the monstrous, organ-liquefying impact of a giant robot monster barreling down at you at full, suicidal speed.

YOU QUIT VIOLIN A LONG FUCKING TIME AGO! YOU'RE INTO IDOLS NOW!

And in the space of two heartbeats - your quickened own - RAY finally slams into you, into your guard, its massive yet ruined skull forming the very tip of the titanic battering ram that it's forced itself to be. The entire strut - no, the shell itself - doesn't just shake, it literally quakes with the force of the collision, threatening to rip apart.

The impact itself almost knocks you out cold - but for some reason, you stay conscious. Conscious, and fucking angry. Angry enough that your fingers are digging into the blade you're holding back a twenty-ton monster with. Angry enough that your heels are digging into the metal plated floor, creating jagged furrows with every inch you get pushed back. Angry enough to continue screaming your hate through blood-pinked teeth.

RAY, however, is not so lucky. Already punch-drunk from the abuse you've heaped into it, your parrying of its berserker charge has the effect of it running full-speed, face-first, into a blue-haired immovable object - and its other eye explodes in the ruinous impact, the front of its saurian skull caving in. The giant machine teeters, tottering on unsteady legs - before finally pitching backwards in an almost exaggerated fall.

Despite yourself - despite your entire body screaming for rest - you couldn't help but blink at this. Did you just...did you just kill something by parrying it?

Before you can ponder on this any longer, however, the section of the Core's floor that RAY collapses into seems unable to bear its weight any longer, giving way in a sudden and startling screech of tortured steel. The limp, lifeless RAY slides off of the collapsed core section, plummetting downwards before crashing into the waves. It sinks all too quickly, the blackness taking it.

...Well. You guess you did. That's...that's something.

You glance towards Tiny Pete, tiredly sheathing your sword. He's actually making sport of the last one now, its squadmates lying in assorted states of disassembly around it, some torn apart, others crushed into mangled ruin. The third one only has a broken hind leg - broken by way of Tiny Pete taking hold of it and tearing it off - but even then, it's still trying to kill the Terminator gamely, like a frustrated, pissed-off cat with its claws out.

You shake your head at this, and make to shout at Tiny Pete to stop fucking around - when an all-too-familiar voice, yet one you had hoped never to hear again, whispers in your ear. The sickeningly-sweet smell of corruption filling your nostrils, overpowering the briny scent of the sea.

"Why didn't you listen to the music, Sayaka-chan?" The pink-haired girl with the sharklike black eyes giggles at you. "Don't you just want to finally get it over with?"

How do you respond?

Good day everyone!
Sometime in the future I will be starting a spinoff quest featuring a retiring Culexus of The Eighth. It will be a tale of violence and horror! And maybe redemption but probably not!

The protagonist is CAVEFISH, a magic-hunter formerly tasked with the extermination of runaways and the witches they turned into. After two brutal years of fighting for her Officio, she's about to learn that "retirement" can be an ominous euphamism!

~~I apologize for how vague that sounds. Everything else is first-thread spoilers. Please positively anticipate!~~

With adrenalin still singing in your blood, combat still sharpening your already razor-edged reflexes into something almost monomolecular - you very nearly lashed out with your still-sparking sword the moment you heard the hallucination whisper in your ear. A beheading cut at your current state would've been lightning-quick, rattlesnake-fast and just as fatal. It would've also made you look completely stupid, trying to behead something that's not really there.

"Get fucked." You snarl instead, shoving the crimson length of Blueberry Cheesecake Brownie back into its sheath without turning to look at the ghost. The thick plate metal guard sparking as it slaps sharply with metal. "Whatever cryptic bullshit you're trying to sell me this time, I'm not buying. And besides," you add, turning slightly to glare at the pink-haired menace from the corner of your vision, "...I'm not done. Not yet."

Fucking hallucinations. You keep seeing them more and more now, not just in your dreams. All of them mocking you, insisting that you 'listen to the music' and 'just give up and be a fucking mermaid already'.

And this particular one - the one that had offered you help a few years back, during that debacle in Santa Destroy with the Eighth, whose offer you turned down - was starting to worry you. Mostly because...well, even despite her ridiculous bullshit about mermaids, sounded like she knew too much about you.

Too fucking much.

You had yourself checked out, of course. Getting back from America, you immediately had a full workup on your Soul Gem. For purity, for hidden defects, for everything. Nothing. It was, as it always have been, one of the purest in the Officio. You even had it purged of grief twice, even though the Venenums had insisted that it was as pure as it can possibly be. So this hallucination - whatever it was - wasn't some sort of symptom of inevitable Witchout.

It wasn't your brain, either. A complete physical workup granted you a completely immaculate bill of health, with the Venenums remarking that you're 'ferociously in the pink of health'. Body chemistry, brain chemistry, nerves - nothing out of the ordinary, nothing even remotely suggesting that you were sick enough to get this kind of hallucination.

And yet, here she was. Grinning, her eyes unfathomable pools of the darkest black, her teeth pinked with bloody saliva. Her hair a shade of pink you've only seen once before - but to even think of her being as that same person was hilarious. They couldn't have been more different.

It's just stress, you tell yourself. Stress, and probably something the Sixteenth is doing. Some sort of Callidus trick, trying to freak enemy Magical Girls out with illusions.

Yes. Yes, that's it.

Murderface doesn't need to know.

No one needs to know.

"Ooh! Careful with that edge, Sayaka-chan, someone might get hurt from that!" The hallucination giggles again, shaking its head, its short sidetails moving with the motion. "But really, you know, it's going to happen eventually! Soon you'll be just as big as that monster you just killed, and you'll have an entire orchestra playing behind you while you move around like a shadow puppet, but illustrated by hipsters!"

Just stress, you repeat to yourself. Just stress.

You turn your back on the illusion, before walking towards Tiny Pete. The walking armored behemoth now had the remaining robotic tiger by the neck, lifting it off the floor and seemingly...well, slowly strangling it to death, as ridiculous as that sounds. Robots don't need to breathe, do they?

[REQUESTING PERMISSION TO DESTROY REMAINING HOSTILE, SERGEANT.] The giant intones, turning to look at you, the eyeslits of its tusked helm glowing red.

[X] Disable but keep fully intact (just harmless), then teleport home and deliver the "hostile" to Misaka for study. Maybe tell her to stand guard long enough for Misaka to turn it off (don't want it accidentally hurting Misaka).

So, Sayaka thinks Pinky is a hallucination. Has Chiaki really never mentioned Pinky to Sayaka? The name alone should be a clue.

And even if not, QB would certainly have recognized it right? I mean I presume somewhere during her total medical checkout, she would have mentioned that she hallucinated a pink-girl. QB should have recognized it as faust?

The QB of this timeline is pretty nice overall when it really comes down to it, so its a bit strange he has not warned Sayaka of Faust.

Correct me if I am wrong, but I am pretty sure Chiaki told QB in the earlier stages of the quest.

That was the scene where Sayaka had reported the golden weapon incident and asked if Chiaki would be "retiring soon".

So QB atleast knows. So either Sayaka never mentioned the hallucination (which would be odd, since how would you explain her desire to have a full checkout otherwise), the medical personnel did not report anything to QB or QB is keeping it quiet and not revealing to Sayaka that what she is seeing is a real godlike witch called Faust (though QB told Chiaki easily, so why not Sayaka?).

Oh, you're right, this did happen.

So QB knows and Midori knows too. Hmm...

As for your questions concerning Sayaka, those could simply be written off as concern on her part and QB does seem to play great importance in keeping his "investments" in tip-top shape, so it's probably not out of the ordinary for the girls to take advantage of the medical benefits.

On the other hand, Sayaka does sound like the type to keep her problems private, so it's not a big stretch to think that she lied about the reasons for the checkup or something

She probably asked that he not tell people about her hallucinations.

As Warmaster we could probably get her medical records, but why would Chiaki ever think to do that? I bet we will get a chance to talk to her about it as Chiaki during the church cult arc coming up.

I wonder how having Sayaka around would effect Pinky. Would Sayaka reign in Pinky and stop her from eating magical girls?

We also were already suspecting back then that Sayaka`s calm reaction to this was because she saw Pinky herself. What on the other hand was confirmed in one of the flashbacks.

You shake your head at the armored Terminator. "Just knock it out and take it back to Misaka as salvage. She'll like taking it apart." It's here that you look around at the broken corpses of the struggling robot panther's brethren, each of them torn apart in some way or simply crushed into wreckage. "See if you can salvage anything from the other ones, too."

If there's anything that can make Misaka's day, it's salvage AND spare parts. She was that kind of kid, sweet and notoriously easy to please. She could also fix anything - including that one time when you got too mad at a videogame and smashed the console in two (which Kyoko endlessly lectured you on, and teased you about afterwards).

In response to your command, Tiny Pete growls out an acknowledgment, before hauling the squirming, struggling robot creature in his grasp forward - smashing its visored head into his own tusked helm. There's a sound not unlike the gonging of some huge iron bell, punctuated with the sound of glass breaking - and with a squeak and a fizzle, the robot tiger falls limp and slack in the armored giant's grasp.

A moment later - and with another of the more intact corpses in his other hand, the warhammer slung on his back - Tiny Pete leaves the same way he came, in a blinding blast of white light coupled with an explosive sonic boom. Leaving nothing more than a set of still-burning footprints as evidence of him ever being there - well, that and the things you had him take care of for you.

Well, that's that, you think. You should make your way back to where the Sixteenth is holding

"Do you still think I'm just an illusion, Sayaka-chan?" The thing pops up in front of you again. "Didn't Homura-chan warn you about me, already? She did, didn't she?"

What? Who the fuck's Homura? You don't know anyone with that name.

"Glasses, talks like she's been gargling gravel or trying to be an overrated modern rendition of a guy who thinks he's some sort of nocturnal flying mammal, and is a bigger bitch than you!"

...Murderface? She's talking about Murderface? You shake your head at this. Yes, she did warn you about...some pink-haired demon appearing to her, even calling her Pinky, but...you've never really taken stock with that. You just thought she was crazy, period.

No one can abuse alcohol and drugs as much as her and not go legitimately batshit insane - which is why you're still sore about her being Warmaster, and not Mami. You also thought Kyuubey was just humoring her, too, just to make sure she shut the fuck up about her problems.

"Well, she wasn't making it up! She MAY be a little crazy, but don't quote me on that." This 'Pinky' giggles. "But yep, she was talking about yours truly~"

How do you respond?

And they in no way negate the fact that the QB flashback was likely designed specifically to show that the QB here is indeed different from the show/rebellion!QB.

Ask Deculture at the end about it if you wish, but until Deculture officially says that the POV of QB is not canon, thats how he is, which means he is nowhere near as bad as show!QB.

If there are things that contradict each other it is because he made a mistake somewhere or it is simply characters opinions / POV being different

Pinky DOES know about Kaneda Madoka, and presumably her BFF Sayaka. And then Kaneda dropped entirely off the grid.

It's more to needle her than anything else.

...Homura, huh. Funny how she has her own nickname for Murderface, instead of the many other ones you have for her.

Fine, you'll humor her. What the fuck is her game, then, if she isn't an hallucination? What's her connection with the bumbling idiot you have to call Warmaster?

"Guh, you really don't let up with the name-calling, huh, Sayaka-chan?" The poofy-dressed phantasm giggles again. "Well, if you must ask, we're really very close! She's my hero and savior and prince all in one, with a red thread tying our fates together~! And soon, we'll be together forever, just like we were meant to be!" It's here that she frowns. "She's still working on that, although a bit slower than I'd like. Keeps getting distracted by every little thing, I wish she'd get to it faster...I mean, how hard could it be, really, getting all twenty weapons? She's already got four of them..."

Twenty weapons? Is she talking about the Golden Weapons? The ones that Murderface went through the procedure to use safely, or what?

"Yup!" Pinky nods, grinning even wider. "Once Homura-chan has all of them again, we'll be able to finally be together! Oooh, I can't wait for that day, it's just like getting married!" She claps her hands, bouncing on the balls of her feet, giddy like a schoolgirl. "And I have the dress for it already made, it's got a butt window because I know Homura-chan is into butts right now and angel wings and--"

You growl at this before turning away. Christ, what are you doing? Are you actually LISTENING to a hallucination? That's all this is. That's all SHE is. Whatever she's saying, she's just drawing from your memory, or what. It doesn't really prove anything.

...Then again, didn't she warn you about...well, someone trying to kill Kyoko? And Kirika did try.

That doesn't prove anything. You've always been paranoid of something bad happening to Kyoko. Anyone who's concerned about anyone would. Anyone who loves someone more than life itself would.

"--and we'll have a great and beautiful ceremony, and when the priest finally asks us to kiss it's when I'll tear her heart out and--" The hallucination frowns as she flits back in front of you. "Wah, rude! You're not supposed to turn away when someone's talking to you!"

You open your mouth to spit out a reply, but whatever you had planned would've been drowned out by the horrendous sound of something huge - and monstrous - blasting itself out of the water below and clawing its way back up the Shell Core platform. Its clawed feet digging hard into the metal, briny seawater falling off of it in a cascading waterfall.

Fucking machines, you growl. That was the thing you hated most about them. They never knew when to give up.

Roaring again - its caved-in face making the roar more of a shrill shrieking noise, no less loud but ten times more irritating - RAY opens its jaw wide, as wide as it possibly can go, before hunkering down low on its legs. As if bracing itself for something huge, something massive.

And then, with a sharp whine, something in its mouth starts to glow a hot, burning red. Then orange. Then yellow. Jagged arcs crackling around its ruined face, as if charging up for something.

[]Dodge the moment it fires.
[]Rush to attack it before it can finish charging.
[]Other.

You hunker down as well, tensing your legs, preparing to dodge the very moment it fires. If you're reading it right, it should be vulnerable for a few moments after it takes its shot - and that's more than enough for you to finally finish the fucking thing off.

The hulking, sealogged RAY charges for a few more seconds - the inferno raging in its ragged mouth glowing brighter and brighter until it's almost blinding, the heat coming off from it hot enough to cook the very air around it - and it's then that it fires. Vomiting a thick pillar of supercharged, killing plasma at you with a shell-shaking explosion of light, heat and ozone. Any other Eversor would have been hit - and reduced to ashes - right at the spot.

Even before the beam had crossed the halfway point of the distance between you and RAY - and it was startlingly, horrifically quick - you'd already stepped aside and started moving, your hand poised over Blueberry Cheesecake Brownie's handle as you dash towards the iron giant.

Hitting full speed at the very first step you took, pushing your body harder than you've ever pushed it before. Going fast enough that the very world is blurring around you, the resulting turbulence threatening to rip your cape free from your shoulders. Ignoring the floor-shaking explosion as the death meant for you smashes into empty floor, blowing a ragged, melting hole in the strut you're fighting in.

You kick off the ground again as you close in on the monster - the energy it'd just spat only just now starting to dissipate - and it's here that you pull Blueberry Cheesecake Brownie's trigger again.

Good-fucking-BYE, FUCKFACE.

The explosion-propelled slash - combined with all the strength you can put into one single blow - not only slices off HALF of RAY's skull but also sends the monster flying, as if it'd just been hit with a fucking train. It has time to spit out a pitiful-sounding shriek - like a giant mouse being stepped on - before it crashes right through the Shell Core wall and landing in a heap outside. Letting in the night sky pierced with alarms, floodlights and people screaming.

You jump after it, Blueberry Cheescake Brownie's crimson length sparking in your grasp - and it's here that you spot the ragged, yet upright form of Chiaki running towards you, from half a Shell away. She's carrying someone on her back - and you let out a sigh of relief as you spot that it's Kyoko, her remaining arm and leg clamping around your Warmaster's body.

Despite everything, you feel an almost irrational jealousy at that, one that you immediately dismiss. It's not like Kyoko has any choice, for fuck's sake. At least she's okay.

You land on the connecting bridge between Strut K and L - only a handful of feet from RAY, the giant beast staggering as it tries to get back up on both feet. Around you, the mundane staff of Big Shell are panicking at the sight of the monster, as well as the destruction you've caused - some of them even diving into the sea to escape.

The ruined, nearly decapitated head of RAY continues to spark and bleed oil - its hesitant, almost drunken wobbling signifying that it's near death. Good - you were starting to get sick of it.

[]Leave RAY to fall into the ocean. Get to Kyoko and Chiaki quick so you can blow this shithole.

You glare irritably at the hulking, staggering mech in front of you as it finally gets back to a vertical base. Looking at it, you're amazed it's still moving, with the grievous wounds you've inflicted upon it continuing to bleed...well, whatever they fuel robots of that kind of size, now. Motor oil, right? Or something? Whatever. The fact is, it's near death, and you're going to make sure it stays down permanently.

It roars yet again - or at least tries to, the cry coming out a pitiful, amplified squeak of something near destruction - and slots on its wings begin to open, crimson-painted missile heads sprouting from them like incendiary mushrooms. At the same time, it hunkers down low once more, seemingly intent on charging up again for another shot. You'll be fucked if you give it another chance to fire its cannon, however.

Even before it could fire one of its missiles - even before it could even THINK of discharging its plasma cannon - you've already darted between its legs, slashing at its inner knee joint with the charged blade in your hands. Sparks fly as the crimson length of Blueberry Cheescake Brownie bites right into armor, through synthetic muscle, wire, and reinforced skeleton - and the metal monster above you shrieks as its right leg buckles. You do the same to its other knee, making that buckle as well, the beast know crying pitifully as you begin to murder it.

RAY's prehensile tail makes its presence felt here, by very nearly running you through with its spiked tip - but instead of you simply sidestepping its stab, you grasp one of its plates with your free hand, hitching a ride with it as it pulls back and up. You fling yourself up into the air - breathing in the fresh, salty air of the sea - before angling yourself downward, preparing to end one of the Sixteenth's battle machines once and for all.

EXPLAIN FURTHER

>>30609338

>>30609423

Your finishing strike - once more enhanced by Blueberry Cheesecake Brownie's explosive firing mechanism - CLEAVES RAY from the tip of what remains of its halved, shattered skull to its groin. You land, and manage to sheathe the now-smoking, heavily-abused blade back into its sheath before the two halves slide apart and fall in opposite directions - the portions still glowing amber-hot from where you'd chopped RAY in two.

Rules of nature, bitch, you think just as you hear the double splash of RAY's fragments crashing into the sea, into its final resting place. You then start running towards Chiaki and Kyoko, the two idiots now fending off a double-sided attack by two of the armored Sixteenth.

Chiaki using her golden chainaxes, and Kyoko...well, Kyoko using her one remaining arm to swing her chain-spear around, while using her remaining leg and her teeth to hold on to Murderface.

It's...it's a hilarious sight, to be sure, but with one of the two hostile Magical Girls already headless - its neck now a bleeding stump, with its still-occupied helmet rolling off of the strut catwalk and spinning into the sea - it's proving to be an effective one. The remaining Magical Girl, now clearly incensed to the point of berserker rage - is trying to hack her way into Chiaki, with two black-bladed machetes in either hand, each one charged with the same killing lightning that Blueberry Cheesecake Brownie has.

What do you do?

[]Let the two idiots finish the remaining Magical Girl off on their own. Keep watch for any additional threats trying to join in instead.

You let the two idiots have their fun - well, they look like they're having fun anyway, by the look on their faces. Chiaki seems to be focusing on negating the armored Magical Girl's wild strikes and slashes with the chainaxes, leaving Kyoko to use the spear as a sort of combination whip and spear. It's a strange combination for sure, but it seems to be working. It reminds you a little of how well you work in sync together, you and Kyoko. Of course, it's loads better when the both of you do it, instead of this haphazard team-up - but at least it works.

The Magical Girl falls only a few moments later, bisected messily at the waist, with Kyoko having knocked away her machetes long enough for Chiaki to deliver the killing blow, both chainaxes slicing inward for a disemboweling cut. It predictably makes a gory mess of things, splattering Chiaki's already bloodstained costume with even more viscera and blood - but if there's anything to give your Warmaster credit for, it's not being squeamish when the going gets tough.

"'AYAKA!" Kyoko calls from her mouthful of Chiaki's costume, her spear disappearing as she unsummons it. Chiaki also looks towards you, something unreadable in her eyes as she puts the chainaxes away - and you suddenly remember how the illusion named 'Pinky' talked about her earlier. Was...was it really telling the truth? Or was it just jerking you around, like all hallucinations are wont to do?

You shake your head at this, before making your way towards them finally, giving them a slow clap. "Not the way I would've done it," you allow yourself a smile as you reunite with your squad, "...but under the circumstances, that's pretty good."

For a wonder, Chiaki almost looks bashful here. "...Thanks. You...you too." She gestures with her Shield arm towards the ruined Shell 2 Core. "The way you cut that thing in half...that was pretty brutal."

"Yeah. That thing attacked me right after I got it." You place a gloved hand on Kyoko's cauterized stump of a leg - and forcing enough of your own magic into it, you regenerate her leg for her. It's a haphazard job, but it'll do for now until you get her back to base. The most important person in your world manages to stand up finally, albeit a bit shakily - but she manages to all the same, and that's what matters. "Come on, let's blow this shithole before their reinforcements arrive." You pluck out your earbud and toss it to Chiaki. "Get Ashford on and call for evac."

Both you and Kyoko blink at her. "...What?" You say finally, too stunned to get angry. "Where?"

Chiaki's answer is to rack her Shield - and it's here that you're reminded again just how ridiculous things can get when she's around.

She took out a fucking MiG. A fucking MIG from her Shield. The entire thing hovering in the air in front of you, wreathed in purple light.

If that's not ridiculous, then you don't know what is.

Yeah, Deculture already said that. I was the person who asked about it originally.

However >>30610431 just pointed out that Chiaki was somewhat off-character there with Sayaka. The Chiaki we know would not be stammering or thinking that Sayaka off all people was brutal.

I will say that if it IS true and Braids is in charge, it would have been nicely foreshadowed here with Chiaki acting a bit off.

Then again, maybe I am just seeing whats not there.

I don't think Chiaki used her Deagle, seeing as how Sayaka happened to burst in on the same fight that we left in-progress the last time we were in control of Chiaki.

As far as the knowledge required for controlling the MiG (or magically taking hold of any vehicle) goes, its entirely plausible that Chiaki knows more about her powers than we do as players.

The stammering maybe, but even if you don't get along with someone personally, acknowledging their feats of brutality where acknowledgement is due is the way things should be.

Because if you can't get over your personal differences to let a person know that they did some pretty admirable violence, what CAN you do it for?

It is the difference between scratch building an entirely new system tpfor magical girls to take advantage of or adapting already done research which is very effective at increasing strength, speed, resilience and then bolting on what she knows about tech

It is that the less basic work she needs to do the more awesome modification and fine tuning misaka can do

Oh, now that I look at this again, note her arms, her left is dark above her elbow, her right isn't blackened at all. Also, even with perspective, the proportions on her right arm seem off, in that her upper arm seems abnormally short.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

"Murderface!" Sayaka's voice crackles in your ear, delivered by an ancient padded flight headset. Even with the static, you can tell she's pissed. "Murderface, do you know who this thing belongs to?"

You merely grumble something underneath your breath as you keep your eyes forward, your hands on the controls, knowing that she'll tell you regardless of whatever you say.

"The Russian Air Force, Murderface," Sayaka snarls. "The fucking Russians! You stole from the fucking Russians! Look, there's even unopened vodka bottles inside the goddamn medkit under the seat! How do you even--" It's here that she's cut off, not by any sudden occurrence or someone else interjecting themselves into the conversation unexpectedly - it's more of her being so angry that she couldn't force herself to finish her sentences, knowing that doing so would just make her angrier. "When did you--WHY did you--"

Why is she bitching about it? An evac's an evac, isn't it?

"That's not the fucking POINT, Murderface! You stole this thing from the air force of another fucking country!"

They were just sitting outside, freezing in the fucking airstrip you found them on. Of course you had to take them.

"THEM?!" Sayaka nearly explodes out of her seat. "You mean you stole more than one--"

...Yeah. Maximum awesome.

You are a Magical Girl, and you're currently on your way back home from a mission. A mission that, if you'll be honest, could've been a bit less fucked.

Well, granted, it could've even been more fucked, but at least it's practically accomplished now - what with the main objective in your Equerry's possession and with all three of you heading back to Headquarters in one piece. ...Well, mostly in one piece, in Kyoko's case.

Your Equerry's being a bitch about your choice of evac, but she's generally a bitch about everything, so nothing really new there.

It's not like the three of you have a choice, anyway - you'd tried to contact Ashford, to have her bring in the plane for an evac, but she'd apologized for being unable to. Radar had detected that the Sixteenth's carrier flagship, the Vengeful Spirit was en route to Big Shell, most likely to provide support.

So that basically left you and your squad without an evac - until, of course, you decided to take the matter into your own hands. Or rather, in your own Shield.

You know that there's an awful lot of crap inside your Shield. A veritable armory of things you have no memory of taking - or stealing. Some of it useful, being rifles and all manner of firearms and explosives - others bordering on impractical and possibly suicidal, such as a Davy Crockett still locked inside its storage locker.

...You threw that back in immediately before Misaka saw it.

You're just as much of a fan of vindictive overkill as anyone else, but even you have limits.

All Magical Girls had their own Inventory - an invisible space they could place and withdraw items from without a need for pockets. It was an innate ability afforded by the costume you got upon contracting, along with everything else. But it had its limitations, of course. You couldn't store anything much too huge inside it, for one, and it generally filled up, although the capacity limit varied from Magical Girl to Magical Girl.

Your Shield, besides being able to stop time, was another Inventory in its own right, but...well, limitless. Infinite, or you at least think so. With enough time and effort, you could store objects of wildly varying sizes, from something as small as a black leatherbound journal to an entire wing of MiGs. Quantity wasn't an issue either. You've tried to empty it once, to see just how much crap it actually had - but after filling Misaka's warehouse twice over and with no sign of stopping, you gave up. Moreso when your Shield spat out the giant metal coffin containing Tiny Pete, very nearly crushing you flat.

...That was another thing you didn't like about your Shield. How it sprung surprises on you - usually bad ones - at the worst possible time. It got worse when this bullshit about the Golden Weapons started - your Shield seemingly WANTING you to use them more often, even going so much as to drop them on your lap even if you so much as look at it funny. Even when you've never stashed the Golden Weapon in your Shield beforehand, or when you've one and put an entire fucking continent between you and the Golden Weapon itself.

This time, though - instead of the nasty surprise that you were bracing yourself for when you slipped your chainaxes back into your shield, expecting a katana's handle to suddenly snap onto your wrist as you pulled it out and away - what you got instead was your Golden Desert Eagle.

Your sore fingers wrapping around the grip with such ease and familiarity that you almost felt guilty for leaving it behind. That it was such a sin to even think of going on a mission without it resting in its holster, strapped against your frame.

And it's then that a familiar voice stuttered into existence in your mind. One that you've heard once or twice before, and one you've definitely conversed with, in a darkened room with four mirrors glowering over you.

"Y-you need a way home, right?" It was Braids, her voice breathy, almost asthmatic, each phrase gasped out in a meek and hesitant stutter. "Please, I-let me help."

And you allowed her. After killing the two remaining Sixteenth agents - Risa hooting and whooping as you hacked them down with Kyoko's help - you felt her take over your body briefly, your movements not quite your own. You watched idly, fascinated, as she used your hands to rack your Shield, her movements quick, smooth and practiced - and blinked as she drew out one of the MiGs you stole in Siberia. Just like that. AND she had it held up in the air, light the same color as your Soul Gem enveloping it and anchoring it in place. Totally negating the fact that you needed an air strip to actually use the damn thing.

"This...this is how I can help," You heard her whisper as you, Sayaka and Kyoko piled into the plane itself. "I can help you find specific items in your Shield, a-and manipulate them with our Soul Gem." Something approaching pride colored her voice as it blossomed in your mind. "I-I think it's called T-telekinesis," she added after a moment.

Telekinesis. Well. That should definitely be handy.

...But what about you suddenly learning how to fly a fucking MiG? You've never studied how to, and Kyuubey certainly never offered a course on it.

"D-Dildoes knows," Braids had murmured, and you could hear her blushing at the ribald nickname. "She knows...she knows a lot of things. She didn't want to help at first, but I...I insisted."

You made a mental note to talk to that particular incarnation after this is all over. But you make sure to thank Braids for her help. ...It's not really often that you find help just being given to you. Sometimes you have to ask nicely for it.

"T-that's okay," Braids had said. "We're...we're all in this together. And...and I want us to win."

That was ten minutes ago, before Sayaka started bending your ear about stealing stuff you shouldn't be stealing. You could still feel her presence, though, hovering like a stray thought at the back of your mind.

"Stop squirming, Kyoko! Ugh, you're getting really heavy, you know that?" Your equerry seems to have changed targets now. "We're going to have to get you back on weights when we get home!"

"Aww, come on! I HATE lifting! Can't I just do cardio a whole lot? I still jog--"

"That's not nearly enough! Either start lifting again or stop snacking!"

Anyway. It seems that you have a clear shot back to Mitakihara, so things are relatively peaceful for the moment.

What do you do?

We stole russian MiGs from russia a long time ago, and currently are flying home over international air space. We'll probably have to drop off someplace safe and return by other means - possibly flying under the radar to get to shore, then repackaging the MiG and then hiking back/calling for evac back there.

Or just fly back and have the MiG vanish, eh. The tl;dr it's unlikely there's any hardware that would be able to stop us for now.

I am considering the character, though. Chiaki doesn't want to be Murderface anymore so being able to call and not sound like a sarcastic jerk would be good progress. The setting itself is also highly linked with Chiaki so her improving will improve the world around her.

I guess leaving the cleanup to QB also works for just giving an apology, but it still feels less sincere and it's not as good for Chiaki's rehabilitation.

Magical girls get away with a lot of things. Our enemies apparently fly a hover-carrier around the world and manage to stay a secret. Tracking these MiGs is probably hard when they keep popping in and out of the shield.

Also, that stuff about every magical girl having a magical inventory is new, or at least I don't remember it.

You decide to ask Sayaka about the main objective. Namely, to verify if she actually has it - because it would certainly be on the wrong side of hilarious if it turned out that all three of you had gone through all that trouble for nothing.

"What?" Sayaka's voice barks from her rebreather. "Of course I have it, dumbass! Why'd you think I was cutting up that huge ugly robot for? It attacked me as soon as I secured it!" There's a bit of rummaging and cursing behind you - both Eversors fidgeting in the otherwise cramped copilot seat - and it's here that your Equerry triumphantly lifts up the kitschy jewelry box that you saw during the op briefing. "It was in this display case thing with that thing looming over it like a fucking RPG boss."

You crane your neck to get a good look at it. It's...well, it's definitely the same item, that's for sure.

Something about it seems off, though. Like it shouldn't be opened, like it should be left well alone. At the same time, though, you couldn't help but be curious as to what's actually inside.

[]Yeah. ...Good job, Sayaka.
[]Ask Sayaka to hand it over. You want to examine it a bit more closely.

You nod, here. Yeah, you're satisfied. It looks like the real thing, anyway, so that should be good enough.

"It IS the real thing. I'd bet my rank on it." Sayaka grumbles from behind the muzzle of her rebreather, fidgeting underneath a now-snoring Kyoko as she stuffs the jewelry box back into her inventory. "Unlike you, Murderface, I actually take the time to study all pertinent op materials." It's here her tone of voice turns nasty. "Not like SOMEONE I know--"

Sayaka.

"WHAT?"

Good job. You say this as sincerely as you can, as levelly and as honestly as you possibly could. You even turn in your seat to look at her straight in the eye as you do so, catching the priceless sight of your Equerry shocked beyond belief. You turn back to your controls a moment later, not waiting for her reply.

Silence. Utter silence, except for Kyoko's snoring, made muffled by her own rebreather.

"I-it's not like I got it for you, dumbass," Your Equerry's hurried reply comes a moment too slow for it to be made with any sort of venom at all. "I just wanted to get it over with! Fucking Sixteenth - if there ever was an Officio I hated more, it's those armored merc bitches. They don't even use magic anymore, you know that? Just fucking illegal stims and shiny new toys!"

She's blushing. She's totally fucking blushing. But you don't point it out, merely grunting to acknowledge that you're listening.

After a few more moments of scathing commentary from the Eversor on how the Sixteenth apparently inhales penises by the wheelbarrowload, it's here that Sayaka seems to hesitate again. "I...I guess I gotta thank you too, Murderface. Not only for saving Kyoko, but...well, holding me back earlier." She swallows audibly. "I mean, I know I'm good, but...I probably would've gotten us killed back there."

It's here that she gives the back of your seat a light kick. "What're you doing, suddenly being reliable all of a fucking sudden?"

How do you respond?

It's just an optical illusion, you murmur into your own rebreather, your eyes planted firmly ahead of you. If you fuck up enough, fast enough, it looks like you know what you're doing.

You hear Sayaka choke and cough inside her rebreather at this, the ugly sound taking a few minutes to resolve to actual laughter. "H-hah! Well, as long as you don't let it get to your head, Murderface, then I wouldn't mind if you fucked up like that more often." There's something new in your Equerry's voice, now, something that you're pretty sure isn't made by her rebreather. It sounds like trust. Camaraderie, even. A small, tiny, infinitesmal amount, but it was there.

[+1000 SAYAKA POINTS!]

You find yourself smiling slightly at this. You'll do your best not to get too cocky about it. Then again, you HAVE been fucking up for a thousand years, so maybe it's time for you to get some stuff right for once.

"A thousand years?" Sayaka asks, confused. "What's this about a thousand years? Stop fucking around, Murderface, you're barely older than I am!" She shakes her head, before sighing as she looks down on the sleeping Kyoko on her lap. The redhead's head resting back on her shoulder. "I'm just glad she's okay." Your equerry's voice, usually loud and harsh, falls into a soft whisper. "Don't really know what'll I'll do without her, the stupid idiot."

...Christ, is she going to get sentimental, like couples do? Do you need to turn the receiver in her rebreather off?

"Oh, go fuck yourself, Murderface." And just like that, Sayaka's venom is back, although less abrasive and more...palatable, if that could be considered. "Not my fault you're still waffling with Hanegawa. Or should I call it pancaking?" A sneer. "I heard from Kyoko that you actually scored during your date. You know that Warmasters aren't supposed to fuck their staff, right?"

How do you respond?

You shake your head at this. You scored some nice pancakes the morning after, at best. No actual fucking happened - just the kiss, which you're pretty sure is getting re-chirped to fucking hell and back. It's also hard to get into that kind of mood after Sayaka's cat friend came in and RUINED everything.

Oh, and Midori got drunk under the table, in a hilarious switching of roles. Apparently, karma is just as big of a bitch as Sayaka is.

The sneering tone disappears immediately from Sayaka's voice at that, like a balloon being forcibly deflated by someone taking a morning star at it. It's genuine enough that she even ignores your crack about her being...well, herself. "...Yeah. That's...yeah, I can see how that'd ruin the evening." The Eversor seems to be genuinely regretful here, a rare apologetic tone coloring her words. "Well, you know. If you're really sure about what you feel about Hanegawa, I'll..." A moment's hesitation, here. "...I guess I can help you some, if you want?"

You blink at this, and you turn to look at her, briefly. She'd do that? For you?

"Look where you're flying, for fuck's sake!" Sayaka snaps. "And yeah, I guess! I mean, I'm no pick-up-and-fuck-artist like Kharn, but I'd rather give you advice than see you get it from her of all people." She pauses here. "...Hanegawa's a good person, and she thinks you're super hot shit. I think it's more than hero worship, or that trashy shit she draws. It's more than that, and I'd hate to see you fuck it up by treating her like a piece of meat."

...You never had plans on doing that, but help going in the right direction would be good, yeah.

"Right. Just...talk to me whenever you need to ask about that kind of thing."

You'll keep it mind. Hopefully, with Sayaka's help, it won't feel like you're simply groping in the dark with this relationship bullshit.

...Hmm. Well, there is something you'd like to ask.

"Yeah? What is it?"

Silence.

"What about her?" There's a guarded tone in your Equerry's voice all of a sudden as she answers. "Isn't she dead, or something? Why ask about her?"

You blink at this, opening your mouth to correct her - before remembering that the rest of the world knows that Wendy Cooldown is dead. She'd told you herself, and it doesn't look like she's told anyone else.

Still, you feel that Sayaka's hiding something. Not outright lying to you, but...concealing something.

What do you ask about Wendy?

You tell Sayaka to...pretend with you, for a moment. Pretend that Wendy Cooldown, for all intents and purposes, is not dead. Pretend that she still wants you. That she saw the kiss, and that seeing it really broke her heart.

What the hell should you do to fix that kind of thing? Hypothetically, of course.

"Hypothetically?" Sayaka echoes, her brow furrowing. "...With that kind of situation, it's...Jesus Christ, Murderface, that's pretty fucked. I mean, if she was still alive, and she SAW that kiss published online, well...there's no ifs or buts about it, she's definitely going to be pissed. I mean, here she is, she's probably told her friends about you and everything and how you're happy together...and then she sees a photo of you playing tongue hockey with someone else on the internet? I'd Witch Out right then and there, no question, if I was in her shoes. Just kill everything around me so you're brought in and then I can kill you, too."

...That's reassuring to know, but you asked about what you can do to probably stop that kind of shit from happening.

"Yeah, yeah." You hear Sayaka mumble to herself as she shifts on her seat, seemingly trying to get comfortable even with a sleeping Eversor on her lap. "Alright, hypothetically, and I'm...gonna take your amnesia into consideration, because that's the only thing you've got working for you, here...I'd just go ahead and say sorry. Say sorry like you mean it, because you're a shitty person and you have a shitty memory and you don't really mean to do all these shitty things."

She waves a hand. "Just go ahead and fucking sacrifice yourself to the altar of dignity, just to make sure she knows you're serious."

...That's it? Just saying sorry'll fix it?

"FUCK no it's not going to fix it." The blue-haired Eversor snaps. "But it's a start, and that's always a good thing to aim for. Once she knows you didn't do it out of spite or just trying to get back at her for something, then....well, she'll probably listen to whatever you have to say to her."

A moment. "Not that Cooldown was unreasonable, or anything like that," Sayaka murmurs. "She was American, sure, but she wasn't stupid. Out of all the Rabbits, she was the most cool-headed one." Your equerry taps at her temple with a gloved index finger. "Never got into trouble unless she really wanted to. So yeah, I think apologizing for what you did is a good start. Just be sure to do it in person, and do it sincerely."

That sounds easy enough. You're all about doing stuff up close and personal. And sincerely.

But is that it, then? What about the rest of the steps? That's only Step One, and you need all the way to Step Not Having To Worry About Being Shanked In The Kidneys. Hypothetically.

"Those steps kinda depend on what her response is to Step One," Sayaka notes sourly. "But, again, hypothetically, if she says okay, and puts away that freaky knife she uses..." The Eversor shakes her head. "I don't know. Ask if you can still be friends after all this? I mean, it's common enough for us Magical Girls to want to kill each other, there's no shortage of that, but friends...it's easy enough to think that you'll have them forever, but fact is all it takes is one fuckup and they're gone. In our line of work, we have to accept that." She looks down on Kyoko, before brushing some of the redhead's hair away from her closed eyes, a curiously tender gesture.

"Of course, she's...American, and they do things differently over there. And more often." Sayaka looks back up at you pointedly. "The remaining friends thing may just set her off, they think that's a sign of weakness. And Americans hate that, it's like blood in the water."

Right. What does she suggest, then? So you don't appear weak to your ex who is dead but hypothetically not.

Yeah. You did say.

"Well, hypothetically..." Even with her rebreather covering the lower half of her face and nose, Sayaka looks almost...well, guilty. "If you got Midori and her to agree on it, then maybe you could..."

Could? Could what?

"You know." Sayaka's going red now, her blush visible even from under her oxygen mask. "Both of them. At the same time."

...Did your straight-laced, straight-edge Equerry just suggest that you--

"Well, you fucking asked!" The blue-haired Eversor all but yells into her rebreather. "Hah, and the fact that you asked that, even 'hypothetically', means that you were thinking about actually doing that kind of thing! Am I right?! Hypothetical my ass!"

How do you respond?

Do you have a plan for this quest overall, and how long do you intend to run it? Its interesting that its been going for a long time now, and Chiaki has still just collected 4/20 GWs.

Do you intend a quick end where she gets the rest in large numbers at once, or do you plan to continue running this quest for several years still?

Mami is best main series meguca. I really like Fennel from Prose Magica. I really like Midori, but mostly because I talk with Midorifag a lot and get to hear about aspects of her personality that the main quest doesn't show off well.

Vanity's sake for the other writeup stuff I dabble in, I also really like Raleigh in the Second and Yuri in the Twentieth.

I guess there's not a trick to it? Dialogue is kind of a strength of mine so it comes fairly naturally, but when I'm feeling out new characters or new interactions I'll throw out dumb lines to Decu or Midorin while we're chatting, as sort of a practice thing I guess. I dunno what else to tell you, unfortunately.

I guess it comes down to knowing the characters well enough to know how they'd react to someone with the other character's personality type.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

You ask your Equerry - your straight-as-an-arrow, so-square-she's-all-edges bitch of an Equerry - to tell you more about what she's suggesting. A suggestion that you never thought would actually come from her, of all people.

You'd have expected it to come from Kharn, or even Risa, being the weird foreigners they are. Not from Miki Sayaka herself, famous in your Officio for having such a big stick up her ass she'd be able to beat God to death with it if she ever managed to lever it out of there.

"W-what else is there to say about it? I-it's not fucking rocket science, Murderface." Sayaka stutters here, and you could feel her glaring at the back of your head. Probably trying to see if she could make your brain explode out the front of your skull. "Just...it's just having a relationship with two people at the same time."

Isn't...isn't that just two-timing, though? Cheating on another girl with another? That's pretty much what got you into shit with Wendy in the first place. Is Sayaka giving you a shovel to dig yourself deeper in the hole you've already dug for yourself?

"No, it's not cheating, for fuck's sake!" Sayaka growls from behind her rebreather. "It's different! Cheating's when you take up another relationship on the sly and neglect the first one. What I'm suggesting is taking another relationship, then making sure your first relationship knows about this and is okay with it, and maybe another relationship forms from that. So it's...instead of just two people, it's three." You hear her mumble 'dumbass' under her breath. "Do you understand? That's a pretty important distinction, you know."

...Yeah. You sort of do. It's...do Americans actually do that kind of thing? You know about Kharn and her sleeping around, but this is a completely different level...

"Well, they're foreign, aren't they? Of course they'd do something like that."

You can't argue with that, you agree. Still...it seems like she knows a lot about this. She isn't speaking from experience, is she?

"Are you--" Sayaka looks at you, wide-eyed, before shaking her head, visibly trying to hold herself back. "You know what? I'll let that pass, Murderface. You've been somewhat tolerable, and you did save Kyoko. But don't fucking push it, alright?"

...Right.

"Good. Sayaka nods. "Anyway. I learned about it during one of the times I had to visit the Eighth on Officio business. Before your time, so you weren't there."

Huh. Well, how did that look like?

"It was alright, I guess?" Sayaka shrugs her bare shoulders here. "Didn't look all that different from a typical relationship, just more members. I was expecting it to be absolutely creepy, but it looked alright."

She chuckles, the sound strangely resembling that someone drowning underwater. "They still have the same fights couples go through, arguments, taking sides and such, but it's neat to have a third party to mediate things whenever things get too bad. Also helps when one of them is away or busy - the one left behind isn't too lonely or neglected, since she's got the other one."

>>30730272

Sayaka hesitates. "One thing I did notice, though. All the setups like that I found? The...three-person setup?" She holds up a gloved hand, three fingers raised. "They have sex a lot. Like...a whole lot of it. AWOL lot." She frowns and shudders, as if visibly shaken from a memory. "Stumbled into one of their showers once, and...well. You know."

...She doesn't say.

Americans, huh?

"Americans." Sayaka nods sagely.

What do you do now?

They were completely isolated for 200+ years until the US showed up in 1853 and said "open up and trade with us or we'll fucking kill you all."
Semi-relevant, synopsis for a show airing in April:
>In the late Edo period, Japan had experienced an unprecedented crisis by Kurofune (Black Ships), the ships from foreign countries. But a giant robot called Onigami, which has existed since ancient time, dispelled the Kurofune ships and the exclusion of foreigners was accomplished. The story begins in Japan where Meiji restoration in 1868 didn't happen. The tagline says, "I can be the greatest man in the world, because I am a virgin!!"

You consider this new information that Sayaka's given you, and mentally file it away. It's...something interesting to look into a bit more, you think. You're not sure if you'll go through with it at all - it sounds like a messy way to deal with things, despite Sayaka's assurances - but at least you have a go-to plan in case you're pressed to do something about it.

Right now, though, you're just trying to get yourself and your two squadmates back home, so you focus on that for now. You make sure to thank Sayaka for telling you about it, however. After all, it's not every day that she's helpful. It's not everyday that she actually listened to your problems instead of telling you to shut up or kill yourself.

"Well, don't spread it around. I don't need more people thinking I'm trying to butter you up for another promotion, or something." Sayaka snaps here, although you can hear the smile in her voice. "Now go on and get us home, Murderface. I'm kind of losing all blood circulation in my legs, here, so I'd like to get home sooner than later, alright?"

Sure. You'll get on that.

As you turn back to the task at hand - that is, manhandling the stolen MiG into getting you back into Japanese airspace - it's here that you attempt to contact Kyuubey. He'd want to know what's going on now, at least.

Drawing upon Dildoes' half-remembered memories of operating jets of similar make, you manage to get the MiG's comms working. Soon, Kyuubey's voice crackles from the speakers of your pilot headset.

"Ah, Matsuda. How considerate of you to call in." There's no discernable difference as to how Kyuubey is talking now and how he talked before, but you could swear he sounds almost...relieved. Not really something you're used to, at all.

"You've secured your evac, I presume? We've been tracking your position, and unless you've suddenly sprouted wings, you seem to be making quite a speedy return. You just passed Manila just a few moments ago."

Ah. Yeah, you find an alternative evac from your own Shield. Convenient, that.

"Yes, quite so." Now the mutant cat bastard sounds amused. "Very fortunate of you to just have a functioning, well-maintained MiG in your Shield, Matsuda. I'm sure that you were thinking of using it for this exact purpose when you procured it from...wherever you got it from. Am I correct to assume that?"

...Yeah. Just in case this specific scenario happened.

"Very well." A pause here. "Ashford is also en route to return, so you'll probably catch up on your current flight path. I've also made sure the necessary airspace watchers have been sufficiently warned of your approach, so they don't suddenly shoot down what appears to be a lone, armed jet fighter of the Russian Air Force making its way to Japan."

That's...nice of him. You thank Kyuubey for this.

"Always a pleasure to assist my Warmaster." The incubator has never sounded so smug while deflecting gratitude. "Right. What of the objective, Matsuda? Has it been secured?" A moment, and it's here that Kyuubey seems to sound...well, just a tiny bit vindictive. Almost cruel. "And how much of a bother were my younger brother's henchmen to you? Probably. Essentially the whole thing comes from that cat taming writeup. If I may quote:

“She’s a different person now, Wendy-san. She’s finally getting rid of some of the awful habits she’d picked up from Kharn and…” Miss Tomoe nibbled her lip a little, then sighed softly. “And from you, Wendy.” She stared into her tea, giving the implications a moment to sink in. …Not that they needed to. It hit me almost as hard as the amnesia.

Oh. Oh fuck no. She was trying to tell me I wasn’t good enough for her little girl anymore.

You turn back to Sayaka, who's also looped into this conversation via the copilot headset she'd also slipped on when you started to contact Kyuubey - and the blue-haired Eversor shrugs, evidently confused as well. You turn back to your controls, before replying to the seemingly...well, oddly bloodthirsty mutant cat bastard.

As for the Sixteenth, well...they didn't scream a lot when they died. They did however, scream a lot before the fact. Mostly it was just grandstanding, the usual death threats and promises of retribution. Nothing you haven't heard before. You made sure to at least leave the Soul Gems of those you put away intact, so they could try again next time.

That's the first time you had to specify that kind of thing, especially in a report call. Is...is everything alright over there? Is Kyuubey okay?

...Christ, the mutant cat bastard's got you asking about how he is. He actually got you to be CONCERNED about him.

Is this how deeply the watch-wearing dildoness has seeped into you? Is this how much you've been corrupted?

There's silence at the other end of the line, followed by a low chuckle. "While I appreciate your...very rare concern, Matsuda, I'm afraid that it was simply a failed attempt at humor in my part. I was trying to see if you'd be amused by trying to behave as unhinged as some of my brothers keep insisting I actually am."

Really? The little fucker was...trying to make a joke?

"As I said, a failed attempt. I'll endeavor to make a more spirited attempt in the future, when the opportunity allows itself."

Huh. Well. It's...as long as he's not actually insane, then.

"I assure you I haven't. Causing you undue concern was the completely opposite reaction I was looking for." Another chuckle. "If I had, then you would know for a certainty immediately. There would be no room for doubt when it happens."

Ah. That's good to know, then.

"In any case, I congratulate you for a job well done. Please extend this to Miki Sayaka and Sakura Kyoko as well, the latter I can hear snoring even from here. I suppose you'll want a medical evac for her once you land?"

...Yeah, you'll want that evac. And about that landing--

"I've already had Mitakihara Airport cease all operations and clear all their runways in preparation for your approach, Matsuda." Your Incubator cuts you off here. "I've also dispatched the evac to meet you upon landing and provide medical attention to Sakura Kyoko - and yourself as well, should you require it." Kyuubey pauses for a moment. "Is that satisfactory?"

Uh. It's...yeah, that's...satisfactory, you reply after a moment of stunned awe. Your Incubator just fucking shut down one of the largest airports in Japan. Just how much influence does this mutant cat have?

"Don't be so surprised, Matsuda. This isn't the first mission I've sent my own Warmaster into. It's natural for an Incubator to handle things personally when his Warmaster is involved, after all." A smug silence. "Ah, about the main objective. I do hope you haven't opened it? It's harmless and inert as it is right now, but opening it could cause complications you'd probably not want to deal with."

...Yeah, you didn't open it. No one did.

"Very good, Matsuda. Will there be anything else, then? Anything else you'd like to mention or ask?"

[]Ask about the main objective. What's inside the box?

Well, there is something you'd like to know. It's been nagging at you for the entire duration of the mission, as soon as you got the dossiers.

...What's inside the box? Kyuubey's all but confirmed that it's not the actual box itself - as bejeweled and gaudily ornate as it is - and that whatever's inside isn't something to be fucked with. So if it's not too much to ask - you are his Warmaster after all - what the hell is inside the box you and your squad very nearly got killed trying to steal?

Silence at the other end, long enough that you wonder if you've lost the connection - before Kyuubey speaks up. "Well. I suppose it wouldn't do any harm to let my Warmaster know. You are very nearly ratified, after all." A blurt of static, followed by a series of beeps, and Kyuubey's voice comes through clear than before. Louder, too. "I've switched to an encrypted channel. Miki Sayaka, would you mind if Matsuda and I a few moments to ourselves?"

You turn to look at Sayaka again, who blinks and shrugs - before reaching forward on her own control panel and unplugging her headset. On your own controls, you patch Kyuubey's frequency through to your own headset, and only your own. No one else would be able to listen in, not even your Equerry.

"Now, before I tell you, Matsuda. What do you know about Grief Seeds?"

Grief Seeds? You blink at this. Well, they're what Soul Gems turn into when Magical Girls turn into Witches. They're also what's dropped by Witches after they're destroyed, used to clean other Soul Gems and keep their owners functional and non-Witchy.

"Correct." Kyuubey responds. "You are also familiar of the fact that Soul Gems, improperly handled and left in the wild, has the potential to reconstitute itself into a Witch, yes? Or at the least, a familiar?"

>>30733701

What about Grief Seeds, then? Is Kyuubey telling you that the thing inside the box is a Grief Seed?

"Yes, it is, Matsuda. It is a Grief Seed--"

You open your mouth to cut him off, there. What?! The mutant bastard cat sent you to another fucking country just for a Grief Seed?!

"--and yet not a Grief Seed." Kyuubey finishes despite your interruption. "This is a new type of Grief Seed entirely, Matsuda. One that we believe comes from Witches much more powerful than the sort we're used to. The discrepancy between them is enough that we are forced to come up with a new name for them, to prevent confusion."

Really. So what are they called, then?

"A Witch Core." Kyuubey replies. "The one you were sent to retrieve belongs to a Witch categorized as Alpha. As you know, there is only one other category higher than that, and the Witch named FAUST is the sole member of that category."

...Right. So what's the name of the Witch whose 'Witch Core' or whatever you were sent to retrieve, then?

Octavia von Seckendorff? That's...a bit of a funny name. You're used to Witches having short, one-word names, but you suppose the stronger a Witch is, the more names they have, or something.

It's also strangely familiar. Not the good kind of familiar either, but the bad kind. The one where you feel your gut slowly clench at the memory of it.

In the back of your mind, you hear Braids gasp. And behind your seat, you hear Sayaka humming to the refrain of a Kirishima Ruri song you already forgot the title to.

How do you react?

We need to find out who the client is, and probably keep the core. Its inevitably going to be vitally important to the quest.

Though in order to convince QB to do so, we probably need to come clean about the incarnations in the DEagle to explain how we know Oktavia is Sayakas dimensional travelling superboosted witch.

If we do that though, we are going to piss off Pinky something fierce, since she ordered us not to talk to those incarnations.

Thats the point. Braids knows, and will almost certainly tell Chiaki. Once Chiaki learns the truth, its obvious that just handing alternate-Sayaka way is not an option.

But QB obviously won't just break a contract without a very good reason, which means we would have to tell him about Braids and the others and explain everything.

If we don't though, we won't have justification to keep Oktavia. Losing that thing will inevitably bite us in the ass hard.

Anyway, I don't think the issue is that the weapons have spirits in them. QB might well know already, since Kharn might have told him. We told Sayaka so easily that I doubt thats a big deal.

The issue is do we tell him that the spirits in the DEagle are actually Chiakis past incarnations. THAT is big news.

In Hat's forum sidestory, two megucas out to kill eachother come across a witch, stop what they were doing, and form a sort of uneasy truce to fight it.

Is this standard procedure? Do active witches take priority over other missions/objectives to the point that MGs at cross purposes will stop to fight a witch together should one appear?

Madoka and Homura are important, but Sayaka's own power level is nothing to be sneezed at (and by extension, all of the core PMMM cast are bound by fate)

If Madoka and Homura are now exponentially more powerful because of the accumulated karma of innumerable loops, then so too are the people their wishes have dragged along with them.

>> ☐ Anonymous 03/09/14(Sun)17:13 No.30737124

I don't think Homura became powerfull because of time looping (beyond the normal growth due to practise and experience). That only happened to Madoka, since Madoka was the center of Homuras wish and the reason why the looping was happening.

What happened in rebellion was totally separate from the loops.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 03/10/14(Mon)07:40 No.30753469

You narrow your eyes at the horizon from the pilot's seat of your stolen MiG.

So...what makes a Witch Core much more special than a normal Grief Seed? Besides the fact that the Witch that drops it is supposedly much more hardcore than the normal ones?

Kyuubey's voice crackles in your ear as it's spit out by your headset's speaker. "Well, for one, they're quite rare. Disgustingly so. There are only a few ways in which they can be reliably obtained - and all of them are risky, expensive ventures that only an Officio such as the First can afford to undertake."

"Second is the fact that...well. If we categorize a Grief Seed is a remnant of a Witch that has been destroyed, to slowly gather grief until it can rise from the ashes and consume mindlessly once more, then a Witch Core is the crystallized essence of the Witch itself. It is the entire Witch, its thoughts, its memories, its hate, its anger, its soul, compressed into a single bauble no bigger than a Soul Gem. It is a Grief Seed, and more besides."

...So it's really just a fancier Grief Seed, then.

"That's a crude and simple way to cut to the heart of the matter, but yes."

What you don't get, though, is why are they so sought after? Why was the Sixteenth hired to guard something like that?

"For one, a single Witch Core can fulfill the Grief Seed requirement of an entire, fully-staffed Officio for weeks." Kyuubey replies. "Even months if need be, through careful maintenance and use. Also, they can serve as Grief Seed replenishers - drain existent Grief Seeds of their Grief and render them usable once more."

Ah. Now you get it. Yeah, you guess that would drive the value up.

But you have the feeling that it's not just that.

"...You are correct again, Matsuda. It is not just that which makes a Witch Core highly desired." There's a strange note to Kyuubey's voice, now. "Of course, we will have to discuss that in the privacy of my own office. I do not think even our encrypted channels are secure enough for such a sensitive subject."

Right. You'll have to remember to ask him that once you get home, then.

"I'll be in my office when you get back, Matsuda. Feel free to join me and the client for breakfast, so you can hand the main objective to them personally."

...Breakfast? That's...that sounds good, you reply, suddenly finding yourself famished. You'll be there.

"As you should. Tomoe Mami and Hanegawa Midori are busy at the kitchens, making your breakfast as we speak." Another low chuckle. "I do not think they slept at all last night. They kept vigil in my office, watching me keep track of your movements. When your readouts indicated that you were under heavy duress, well..." You could hear the mutant cat bastard let out a sigh. "Suffice to say, I had to leave them alone in my office to get some sleep of my own."

Ah. That's...well. You're not sure what you should say here. Granted, it's your fault - slightly - but...

"Just reassure them that you are not some Vindicare scout on your very first mission, Matsuda. You are my Warmaster, and I do think those who I pick to lead my Officio are competent enough to take care of themselves."

Right. You'll do that.

"You have my thanks." A moment. "I suppose I don't need to stress the fact that what we just discussed earlier is classified, to the highest degree?"

...Yeah. He doesn't need to.

"Excellent. Have a safe return, Matsuda. I'll be looking forward to your debriefing." It's here that the channel effectively clicks off, leaving you with empty static.

You switch out of the frequency, and hear another click. Sayaka must have plugged her headset back in. "Well?" Sayaka asks. "What'd Kyuubey say was in that box?"

How do you respond?

You turn to look at Sayaka for a moment, before turning back to the MiG's controls.

It's classified, you reply. You can't tell her what it is. Sorry.

Your Equerry is silent for a moment, before she nods. "I got the idea that it was when Kyuubey wanted me to unplug. That's fine with me, though - classified shit stays classified no matter who asks, and you're not supposed to tell anyone." It's here that she gives the back of your seat another light kick. "I'd have kicked your ass if you told me, you know."

...Wait. She'd kick YOUR ass if you answered her question? How does that even work?

"I'm testing you, dumbass!" Even through her rebreather, you could tell she's smirking. "Whoever it is, confidential stays confidential. Classified stays classified. Trust has nothing to do with it - rules are rules, and they're there because they work. Try them out sometime, Murderface."

Heh. Well, you'll think about it. You're already wearing a fucking watch, why not go the entire nine yards, right?

"Oh. Speaking of watches." Sayaka reaches over to hand you back Tiny Pete's teleport beacon. "...Thanks. Saved my ass a whole lot of trouble back there, with that giant metal monster thing." She pauses as you take the watch from her, stuffing it back into your inventory. "That's actually pretty cool, you know."

Yeah. Yeah it is.

...To be honest, though? Her cutting that thing in half, right in front of you? Did she plan it or what?

"Huh? I didn't plan anything. I just thought that'd be the quickest way to deal with it."

Really? Because it could've been fucking choreographed, that's how picture perfect it was.

"...Heh. Well...alright, alright, MAYBE I planned it a little." A rebreather-muffled chuckle. "Did Kyoko see me do it?"

Yeah. Yeah, she did.

"Did...did she think I was cool?"

...Does she even need to ask you that?

Silence.

"Right. Thanks, Murderface." A sigh. "Hey, you got this, or what? Doesn't seem like they're giving chase, and we're practically barrelling back towards Japan, now. Mind if I get some sleep before we land?"

You consider this for a moment, before shrugging. Yeah, you got this, you reply. She can take a nap if she wants.

"Thanks." There's a grunt, here, and a creak as Sayaka tries to recline. "Ah, for fuck's sake, she's really gotten heavy. I gotta get her back into a real diet this time..."

Silence falls as your other passenger falls asleep, forming a duet of soft snoring behind you. In your mind, however, you hear Braids sigh.

What do you do, now?

[]Talk to Braids, ask her about her reaction earlier.
[]Talk to Risa, ask her about Sayaka suddenly getting a points raise, and if the Witch Core is involved in it.
[]Continue flying back towards Japan. (Time Skip)

We know there was atleast one empty mirror when we last had a conference. I doubt more will show up (would get too confusing).

And while homu-conference would be good, I think entering the DEagle-world would be bad since we kinda need to fly. Maybe we can ask the others about Oktavia once we land.

You give the MiG's control panels one last check, making sure your heading's correct and you're not suddenly running out of fuel. Radar seems to be clear too - nobody from behind or anywhere else trying to sneak up on you. Should be a clear shot to Japan then, it's just a matter of time.

You decide to spend a bit of that time talking to Braids, one of your...past selves, you wince at the term, living inside your Golden Desert Eagle. She's the shy, meek one in the lot, her stuttering and constant hesitation not exactly brooking confidence - but she was helpful enough when you needed help, so there's that.

Braids replies after a moment. Hesitant as always, but just a bit more this time. As if something other than shyness is making it hard for her to talk.

+ I'm...I'm fine, Matsuda-san, + Braids pulses. + I...I just remembered something. Something really bad. +

...Was it related to what you and Kyuubey were talking about earlier? The Witch Core?

+ I...y-yes, Matsuda-san. + A long, shuddering sigh, typical of one very near tears. + Yes, it's about...it's about Octavia von Seckendorff. + She half-sobs, half-coughs here. You can't see her now, but even to you it's obvious that she's slowly losing her resolve not to cry. + I...I was hoping I wouldn't hear that name again. +

Really? You blink at this. Was...Octavia von Seckendorff really a powerful Witch, then, if it's given one of your past selves PTSD?

+ N-no...w-well, she's really strong, y-yes, and really scary, but... + Braids hiccups here. + I-it's not just that. She's...Octavia von Seckendorff is Sayaka-san's Witch form, Matsuda-san.

I mean, I hoped that Sayaka had the option to become a fish if we fuck up badly with the whole "Blessed Lady`s Knight" an all but I didnt expect that there that the Saint herself shows up.

Jesus christ, this timeline is all kinds of fucked. We have Homucifer, Faust/Madokami and now Vindicator-Fish.

But Sayaka's here, you argue. She's taking a nap in the copilot seat, along with Kyoko. She hasn't Witched out. It's not something you can easily miss, being this close to her, right? So how could Octavia von Seckendorff's Witch Core exist here, in this timeline, when the Magical Girl it's supposed to be hasn't even Witched out yet?

+ I...I don't really know... + Braids sounds ready to break down into tears again. + I-I suppose...since this is the last timeline, and all the other timelines are locked away, m-maybe stuff from them is leaking through to here? + Another hiccup. + I don't really...know a whole lot about it, sorry...+

You glower at the horizon for a moment, before letting out a sigh of your own into your rebreather. It's fine, you pulse out to her. No need to apologize if she doesn't know. You'll try to ask the others when you get the chance to.

You hear her sniffle, murmuring a hesitant assent, before letting out what sounds like a prolonged, muffled snort: probably her blowing her nose on a handkerchief, or something. You drum your fingers on the control panel in front of you, gathering your thoughts - and it's here that you ask another question. One you're slightly glad that you didn't have to say out loud.

+ I don't want Sayaka to turn into Octavia, + You pulse out to Braids. + How do I stop her from turning into a Witch? +

Braids goes quiet here - long enough that you're about to call out to her again when she finally replies.

+ I...I don't know if it'll be the same here, Matsuda-san, but...from what I've seen from the others, and from my own experience... + She swallows audibly, as if suddenly finding her throat painfully dry.

+ There was always that one time when things started getting really bad, and Sayaka wanted to do something...that would seem too dangerous, or too risky, or just...just too stupid. We'd do our best to stop her, because...because we don't want to risk losing her, or her getting hurt, or getting Madoka hurt.+

She pauses to take a shuddering breath. + Each time, Sayaka-san would tell us to trust her, that she knows what she's doing. And we would never believe her, and we'd do everything we could to make sure she doesn't go through with what she's planning. +

Another sniffle. + She witches out approximately two days, thirteen hours, twenty minutes and fifty-eight seconds later, Matsuda-san. And every time...it's not pretty. + A weak laugh. + Especially when we fell in love with her at one point, too. +

How do you react?

The trick is to support her.

That way, when she starts to fail she doesn't think
>Oh god, Homu was right. I can't do this. I can't. I'm sorry...
Instead, she thinks
>No fuck you I CAN do this!

Sayaka is an anime heroine. If she believes she can, she will. She doesn't lose until she gives up.

Even when she doesn't believe in herself she just has to believe in the us that believes in her to succeed.

You very nearly snap the small pen you got with your journal in two, as Braids hits you with that blistering gut-shot out of complete fucking nowhere. Just when you were in the middle of writing down, in the very first page of your journal, the words 'TRUST SAYAKA NO MATTER WHAT'. You had also underlined the reminder a couple of times, making sure that you'd take note of it if on the off-chance that amnesia strikes.

You...you actually fell in love with Sayaka? What kind of fucked-up timeline was this? What kind of shit had to go down for that kind of WRONGNESS to happen?

+ H-hey! + Braids blurts out here. + D-don't say that about them, Matsuda-san! It was beautiful! I...we...I-I mean, the Homura of that timeline, she really tried her best to get along with everyone, even when everyone hated her! + You could hear her breathing hard, here, as if hyperventilating. + E-even when Kyoko-san told her she was useless, s-she still tried her best! And then Sayaka-san saved her during a Witch hunt, and then...and then--! +

Alright, alright. You get the picture, you pulse, trying your best not to color your thoughts with too much...revulsion. You and Sayaka...it's one of those things that really stretch the limits of possibility, in your opinion, but you guess that whenever multiple timelines and dimensions are concerned, anything can happen.

Including you hooking up with the Blueberry Bitch.

+ Please don't call her that. + Braids's voice is low, now, almost...threatening. + You shouldn't call our most important friends cruel names like that, Matsuda-san. +

...Right. Fine. You'll...try.

At least you now know how to try and prevent Sayaka from heading down that road.

You just wish you can do it when the time to decide finally comes in.

Is there anything else you want to ask Braids?

[]Ask if you can talk to the other incarnations.
[]...You're the one who fell in love with Sayaka, aren't you?
[]Nothing else. Focus on getting home.

...She's the one who fell in love with Sayaka, isn't she? Otherwise, she wouldn't be reacting like this. Isn't she?

+ Enough. + When Braids replies, it's with a chilly, frigid tone, so cold that you could have sworn it was Dildoes talking rather than your shy and meek braids-wearing variant. + I've heard enough, Matsuda-san. When you'd like to talk to me again, please make sure that you've washed out the foul note of ridicule from your mouth. + She pauses here momentarily, before continuing.

+ Your Sayaka-chan may hate you, but that's because you've been nothing but hateful to her. Hateful, drunk, and rude. I treated her with respect, with kindness, and with love - and she gave me all of that in return and more. She was my hero, and...and I made sure she didn't suffer too much when I killed her Witch. +

You blink here, before wincing as you feel the pulse-equivalent of someone slamming the door on you as they storm out. It's not a physical sensation, far from it - it's a sudden emptiness, a sudden chill on your neck and shoulders, making you feel genuinely shitty for going a bit too far with that.

A sigh leaves your lips as you open your journal again and scribble a new line.

You encircle the last bit a couple of times, before closing the small black book and stuffing it back into your inventory.

"Updated my journal," You growl into your rebreather. "Pissed myself off in the process."

Yeah, the fact that we have had chapters from her POV and seen how her mind works kinda makes the idea that she is a spy difficult.

Ofcourse she could have been brainwashed or something in preparation, but that would mean that the 10th both knew Chiaki would not kill her and would recruit her to the 9th. Stretches credibility for it to be a planned thing.

Blackmail of her family or such however is something that I could very well see happening, with Chiaki needing to rescue them or whatever.

The rest of your flight home was thankfully unremarkable, and peaceful. You'd been expecting your stolen MiG's radar to alert you of the multiple hostiles coming in for behind, or even ping you for the missile lock that never really came.

Landing the MiG was...an interesting experience, for sure. You've never landed a plane before, but the way all the necessary steps just seemed to click for you was slightly disconcerting on its own right. Just how much shit does Dildoes know with this kind of thing? Just how much combat experience do you actually have?

Anyway. You managed not to get you and your squad killed in a burning conflagration. Kyoko was immediately shoved into an medevac truck despite her loud complaints and assurances that she's okay - only quieting down when Sayaka volunteered to go with her.

This left you alone, to be ferried back to Headquarters via company car. Sayaka also left with you the main objective - and you saw her gaze linger a bit too long on the gaudy jewelry box before turning away.

A quick stop by sickbay, one of the nurses on duty taking care of the worst of your injuries...and you find yourself walking into Kyuubey's office.

Huh. It almost feels like you never left, really. The dried bloodstains, your lack of glasses and the various tears and rips of your costume the only evidence that you actually just got through a mission.

"Ah, Matsuda. You're just in time for breakfast." You hear Kyuubey's greeting in your mind as you push through the double doors to his office. As usual, he's on his desk, the wall-to-wall monitors blanked out and showing only white space - but in front of his desk is a small table, set for two people.

The plate closest to Kyuubey is empty except for a small saucer of milk, while the other plate is stacked high with freshly-cooked pancakes. The stack is already drizzled with just enough syrup, a butter square of acceptable thinness slowly melting on the uppermost tier.

"Just let me finish my remaining tasks and I'll join you." The Incubator says as you take your seat in front of the pancakes. Feeling your mouth water at the familiar, heavenly scent of perfectly-made pancakes. You don't even realize that you've grabbed both knife and fork already, a napkin tucked into the front of your collar. "...Or you can just start and I'll catch up. Whatever you prefer."

You don't even give him an answer. You start tearing into the pancakes proper, feeling yourself completely and utterly ravenous. Like a pit had opened in your belly somehow, craving, burning to be filled with sustenance. The pancake variety and ONLY that.

"I suppose this would be a bad time to ask you for a detailed debriefing, Matsuda," Kyuubey says from his desk, his round crimson eyes watching you carefully. "Let's make things simple and brief, then."

You nod here, grunting your assent as you continue to devour the Mami-style pancakes. Simple and brief is good. You always hated debriefings.

Christ, these things taste better than they ever did. ...It feels like it's been ages since you had them. Seriously.

"Very well. I won't ask about any of the details of the mission, as I think I'll be accepting a very detailed report from Miki Sayaka sometime today." Kyuubey nods. "What I'll ask instead, Matsuda, is do you think you can wipe out the Sixteenth if it came to it? What's your assessment, in case we decide to reave the Sixteenth Officio clean of life?"

How do you respond?

What is there to debate? Some anons can't properly understand context and it leads to them voting for something that they didn't intend. The only solution that doesn't involve textual hand-holding and the reading equivalent of training wheels, is for them to read the posts more closely and not take each post as its own self-contained post but as part of a larger conversation and put things in context.

Yes, and...?

The way I interpreted it is not invalid. I am not missing context, I didn't not fail to comprehend the larger conversation. All I did was ascribe a tone and motivation to the words which, while contextually appropriate, was not the same as Deculture's.
The validity of my interpretation does not make yours any less valid, and vice versa.

Add to that the fact that the fact that Chiaki and Sayaka have actually started becoming friends in the last few threads and the "the context" of asking Braids about Sayaka suddenly becomes a lot more muddled.

You swallow the mouthful of pancake that you've been busily chewing as you consider Kyuubey's question, lowering your knife and fork as you do so. It's not everyday you get asked to assess another Officio and decide how hard of a time the Ninth would have in murdering it.

Looking at Kyuubey, you tell him that it'll be tough, but doable. The Sixteenth, from what you've seen, is very reliant on technology, but does so in a way that makes them...well, utterly lethal. You've never seen someone like Kyoko get tagged by a sniper before, the red-haired Eversor had always been too quick to get hit. Their armored suits most likely have enhancing capabilities beside just additional protection. Stims may also be involved there, the strong and probably illegal kind.

The fact that they also field robots - huge, agile ones that had taken no less than your Equerry and Rank Leader Eversor to put down permanently - could also make the hypothetical conflict a very bloody and drawn-out one, with hundreds of casualties on either side. It's just a matter of how many they can field before the Ninth overruns them.

So, yes. That's your assessment. Attacking the Sixteenth for the pure purpose of destroying them, of breaking them apart until nothing remained - will be a bloody affair, but it's doable. Only, of course, Kyuubey was willing to deal with most likely half of the Officio dead, their Soul Gems unrecoverable.

"I see." Kyuubey nods. "Thank you, Matsuda. Your assessment is quite important, and as such acknowledged. I will think about your answers and base my decisions on them."

...Wait. He isn't really planning on inciting war with the Sixteenth, is he?

If you aren't missing the context, then why did you ascribe a tone and motivation to words which were not contextually appropriate and were not what the writer meant them to have?

The validity of your interpretation is not relevant, because this isn't comparative lit. class, this is whether you can understand the situation being described and the choices laid out.
If you interpreted it differently from what the writer meant, then that's just plain wrong and shows an error in reading comprehension.

The Incubator blinks at you, before shaking his head as he replies. "Nothing of the sort, Matsuda. Simply preparing for future possibilities and eventualities. Better to have them and not need them, than need them and not have them." He pauses for a second, as if making a point out of just what he said. "Preparation, Matsuda, is always key to survival. Planning. Anticipating. Measuring. It's how we will sufficiently exert our will upon others, or they'll exert theirs on us."

Ah. Well. You can see his point there, you think.

Sometimes, though, you really wonder about Kyuubey. And if his mutant cat bastard brothers were actually right, that you're working for an insane mutant cat bastard.

You shift this disturbing - and admittedly appetite-ruining - train of thought briefly to one side as you focus on your breakfast once more, intent on savoring every last bit. It's also here that Kyuubey makes a satisfied noise, before hopping off of his desk and onto the dining table, in front of the saucer of milk. He gives the saucer an almost hesitant look, before shaking his head and refocusing his attentions to you. His tail flicking from side to side.

"Alright, Matsuda. The main objective, if you please."

You blink at Kyuubey, before pulling out the gaudy jewelry box and placing it on the center of the table, between you and your Incubator. Its embedded Swarovski crystals gleaming in the lights of the monitors all over the room. The sound it makes as you place it on the tablecloth is almost...flimsy, making it sound like a cheap knockoff copy.

"This is the genuine article, no doubt." The white-furred mutant cat says, looking at the jewelry box from all over. "The Witch Core is inside, intact, and dormant. Its Nightmare Barrier field suppressed by the box itself." Kyuubey nods again, satisfied. "A commendable job, Matsuda. I hope you continue on this vein as both Warmaster and as a vindicare of the Ninth."

You return his nod, before looking around. ...Kyuubey did say the client was going to join you for breakfast, right? He must be running late - you're already down to your last panacake and he's still not here.

"Oh?" Kyuubey asks as he pulls the box a bit closer to him. "I wouldn't say so, Matsuda. The client is already here, in this room. Enjoying breakfast, the same as you."

Really? Well, there are only two people that you can see in this office - well, one Magical Girl and a mutant cat bastard, but--

Oh. Fuck. He has got to be kidding you.

"Preparations, Matsuda. Planning for eventualities." Kyuubey says as a circle of light appears underneath the jewelry box, where it slowly sinks into and disappears. A sharp snap of the air around you, and the light circle vanishes, taking with it the box and leaving behind almost no trace of its existence. "It has and will always be the key to survival."

The problem with harems in general is that while the sexual aspects of the relationship get ramped up, the emotional connection with any specific girl gets diluted. I realize and recognize that this group is dedicated to the Watermelon route, and has been for a very long time, but the idea of a harem being an emotional cop-out just keeps sticking to me.

Sex is good and all, but contrary to what many would have you believe, it isn't everything.

Eightball's kind of a dick, but you could do a lot worse. He has an obsession with image, and getting outdone in any way really pisses him off; He saw the Canadian incubator get a roomba ride, so he got a gem-sttudded one with hydraulics. He saw Coobie get a cat tower, he got a bigger one.

His management skills aren't terrible, but he's pretty verbally abusive. It's part of the verbal tic he's developed to keep himself distinct, and Alpha Team at least has mostly gotten used to being called cumdumpsters whenever he's mad about something.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

You growl a choice insult at your Incubator, not bothering to try and conceal it under your breath. It's not like he wouldn't hear anyway, with those ears of his. Even if he didn't, he always had that mind-reading thing he always swore he never, ever used, but you always suspected he did when it was convenient.

"Now, now. No need to resort to such language, Matsuda." Kyuubey looks slightly offended here, despite its facial features not changing from its perennially-curious look. "It may surprise you to discover that I do this sort of thing for valid reasons, and not simply to spite or anger you."

That's debatable, you think, before sullenly turning back to your pancakes. Continuing to tear into your breakfast with a deathrow inmate's gusto, fork and knife gripped in stabbing grips.

Ever since you've become Warmaster, the mutant cat bastard's behavior has been...admirable at best, and barely tolerable at the worst. As such, what poisonous, bilious spite that had made you curse and grit your teeth at the very sight of him had mellowed to simple annoyance, the times in which you'd almost pulled a gun on him becoming few and far between. But this honest, almost casual confession at deception threatened to bring it all back in a caustic flood.

But only just. It's not enough, not yet. As much as it rankled you, he did have a point. He's already told you how valuable a Witch Core is, valuable enough that it's almost understandable that he'd risk going war with another Officio for it. You forced yourself to see through his perspective, his cold, businesslike rationale at such decisions. It made sense, in a watch-wearing dildo kind of way. He made sense. Even though it pissed you off.

You don't think he knows about what Braids had told you earlier, either. So you doubt it's...to fuck with your Equerry or something. Unless he was, in which case you'd certainly pull a gun on him then.

You savagely chew on a mouthful of syrup-soaked pancake, down it with a glass of iced water, before growling out a single word at Kyuubey.

"Why?"

The furry white bastard blinks his bright red eyes at you, scarlet marbles buried in soft white snow, before nodding. "Consider it a final test of sorts, Matsuda, before I officially ratify you as Warmaster. I wanted to see how you'd conduct yourself during a mission with a simple, direct objective from an unknown client. I wanted to see if you'd...slack off and not take it all that seriously, in contrast to the Kirishima Ruri mission, where I imposed upon you countless times that it was important for us to succeed."

He pauses for a moment. "Granted, your execution of it was a bit rough, but..." He nods to the box. "You brought Miki Sayaka and Sakura Kyoko alive and safe, along with the main objective, and you showed a rival Officio of ours a taste of what we're capable of. Very professionally, if I may add."

A test, huh...? So did you pass, or what?

>>30848489

"You passed, of course. Just as I expected you to." He makes a pleased noise here. "I should listen to Tomoe Mami more often, I must admit. Her decisions regarding you, while seeming ill-advised at first, has proven to be quite accurate and beneficial to the Officio." The incubator's expression ratches up a bit more on the smug meter. "I am still receiving commendations from my brethren regarding the Kirishima Ruri mission. Apparently, Miss Kirishima has always been a difficult one for them to handle."

Really? Well. That was a bitch of a mission, so you're not surprised.

...Wait. He's changing the subject! The little bastard's changing the subject! You want to know more about this Witch Core, dammit!

"...Nothing escapes you, I see." Kyuubey makes a chuckling sound. "Very well, Matsuda. Ask, and I'll try to answer as best I could." It's here that a skull, bleached a gleaming white and its teeth encrusted in gold, appears beside your Incubator, manifested there through one of his light portals.

"Hino Setsuna sends her most profuse regards, by the way. She is reunited with Squad Taiho, and sends a gift of appreciation." He glances at the skull with some distaste, before turning back to you. "Well? Anything you wish to now about the Witch Core, Matsuda, or would you like to move on to more important matters? You do have a few things on your itinerary that I've taken the liberty of adding that needs to be taken care of as soon as you can."

[]Ask about the Witch Core. What is he going to do with it?
[]Put aside the Witch Core for now, and ask about your itinerary. Might as well get it over with.
[]Ask about Midori. Where is she? Why isn't she here to welcome you home...?
[]Other.

You glare at the bleached skull briefly before continuing to slaughter and massacre your breakfast, vehemently refusing to let the macabre trophy ruin your appetite. While you're pleased to hear that Hino Setsuna had come back from her revenge assignment in one piece and reunited with her squad, you'll have to do something about people thinking that you'd like skulls as gifts too. You're not Kharn, for fuck's sake.

Chasing down another mouthful of pancake with a hearty gulp of ice water, it's here that you ask Kyuubey about the Witch Core. Specifically, what the hell is he going to do with it? And you assume this isn't the first one he's found?

There's a moment of silence as your Incubator seems to decide whether or not to tell you, before he replies. "...For safe keeping, Matsuda, to be used only when it is absolutely necessary. A weapon such as this is most effective when it's concealed until the last possible moment, for the killing thrust." He nods. "As I've said, only a select few of the Officios CAN harvest Witch Cores - fewer know they actually exist. I doubt the Sixteenth even knew what they were guarding, only that they were asked to guard it."

Another brief hesitation. "And yes, you are correct in your assumptions. This is not the first and only Witch Core in our possession. We have another one, earned a few years ago, and its price was..." Kyuubey trails off into silence here, before shaking his head. "...too high a price, even with the utility it's provided us now."

You'd ask to know more here, but you sense that he's not up to talking about it at the moment.

So instead, you ask something that you've been meaning to ask ever since you stepped through his office doors.

Where's Midori? Why wasn't she around to welcome you home?

"You're going to choke on your food if you don't slow down, Matsuda." Kyuubey predicts this with unerring accuracy as your chaser of ice water goes down the wrong way, and you clamp one hand over your mouth to prevent coughing half-chewed food all over your boss. You thump your chest a few times with a fist to force everything down. "...I did say you passed my test as Warmaster, Matsuda, but this brings to mind a few concerning issues."

...Concerning issues? What the fuck about?

"This attachment to Hanegawa, for one. I'm not blind, Matsuda, nor am I deaf to what's being talked about in my Officio." He nods at you. "Remember, I chose you for this role because you are to make the difficult decisions. You decide who lives and who dies - the Magical Girls under your command and those who stand in our way." A smile. "Can I trust that this attraction to Hanegawa will not distract you from your duties, and what needs to be done?"

How do you respond?

Hastily, you undo the pin that keeps your sleeve folded up - just in time, too, as a newly-made arm, of flesh and bone, fills it. All fingers working, ability to grasp objects fine, ability to make rude gestures good.

Nope. New arm grown from scratch.

You could argue that I suppose, but I don't really buy it.

If scars were a part of the person, then a missing arm would be a part of the person too and the arm could not have been regrown.

The only way it would make sense is if QB regrew the arm based on DNA specifications.

That would depend entirely on where the 'template' for the new arm came from. If it was genetically, or from the Soul Gem, presumably it would be restored whole, or in the condition the arm was in at-point-of-contracting respectively.

Yeah, Walpurgisnacht is a merging of multiple witches right? Still, you could argue that after they have merged deeply enough to manifest as a single entity, they don't separate at death and you get a Core.

Not sure what other high-level witches there could have been a few years ago, or what could have been a loss so great that QB thinks it was not worth it.

It might also explain how QB is keeping Walpurgisnacht contained. I always felt it a bit odd that a witch of that power could not just bust out of its prison. But if its actually in the form of a Core rather than in physical form, then that would explain it.

Which would mean that the corruption we are feeding it through the soulgem link will inevitably give Walpurgisnacht enough power to respawn in physical form before the quest is over, leaving us linked to a fully living rampaging witch (because something ALWAYS goes wrong when you have crazy scientists doing mad experiments).

You narrow your eyes at the white furry bastard as you lower your fork and knife. He's got a lot of nerve, bringing that up after Kharn. But you'll do what needs to be done, he can rest assured of that. You've fucked up enough times in your career, and you don't exactly plan on making it a habit.

"See that you do, Matsuda. I have high hopes for you." Kyuubey seems to be satisfied with your answer.

[+ 10 Kyuubey Points!]

"Now, I assume you'd want to know about your itinerary right now? Or would you like to do it while we pay Hanegawa a visit, to see how she's doing while training your future Callidus forces?"

You blink at Kyuubey in mid-pancake stab.

"I did say I'm not oblivious to what's going on in my own Officio, Matsuda," Your Incubator chides you mildly. "I know what you were thinking about. And no, put your knife away, I wasn't even skimming your surface thoughts, much less reading your mind - just adding up the facts and such." He seems to smirk here. "Or, if you'd rather we left her alone to work, we can either visit Sakura Kyoko in sick bay to see how she's recuperating, or visit Tomoe Mami as she attends to your prisoners."

Your prisoners...?

"From the Kirishima Ruri mission, Matsuda." Kyuubey reminds you, a patient note in his voice. "Lucius and her remaining squad, remember?"

Ah. Yes. You remember her.

"If you say so, Matsuda."

Where do you want to go to discuss your itinerary?

You decide to go check up on how Mami's doing with Lucius and her lackeys. You've put it off long enough, dealing with them, although you distinctly remember that they've been a bit uncooperative, even with the blonde handling things. That either makes them really resilient or really fucking stupid.

"We'll discuss your itinerary on the way, then." Kyuubey says as he hops down from the table. "Finish your breakfast, Matsuda, and for goodness' sake, wipe your face afterwards. You've got bits of pancake and syrup on your cheeks."

You oblige him grudgingly as you mop up the remnants of your meal. What is he, your father? He's not your real father.

"I realize that. Shall we?"

And with this, you follow Kyuubey as you head towards Tomoe Mami's interrogation room. Interrogation rooms are different from Silent Rooms, although the latter can certainly serve as the former's purpose. For one, it has a small Silent Room battery, to be turned on and off on the interrogator's command, and it's set only to affect half of the room that the interrogatee is kept on, usually with restraints

"Right, for your itinerary." Kyuubey clears his throat. "You have two pending appointments for the day - one later in the afternoon, and the other at night. The first, of course, is the certification of a new Vindicare Squad. They'd just finished their advanced training course with flying colors, and are now certified to take on Beta-Class Witches and missions." It's here that Kyuubey smiles. "They've requested personally that the Warmaster, who is a Vindicare herself, attend their certification ceremony among their peers, and grant them their new squad name."

You follow Kyuubey into an elevator, and it immediately descends, down to the subterranean levels. "The one later tonight is the monthly Remembrance Ceremony. You remember what that

...Of course. It's where the names of Officio members who've either died during field action or by Witching Out are read in memoriam. The Warmaster's usually required to say something there, a small speech of a sort, but Kharn never attended it. Not once. It had always been Malal, or Mami.

"Ah, and before I forget. Hold out your hand, Matsuda." You blink as you do so, and a rectangular shape glows into existence on top of it. The light disappears quickly, leaving behind what looks like a ticket to some show scheduled for tonight. It reads, 'Noriko-chan's M-otivational Talkshow, One Night Only! Admits 1 Front Seat! No firearms or deadly weapons allowed, bring your own tomatoes!'

An...M-idol show? A ticket to an M-idol Show?

"This came through special delivery for you yesterday." Kyuubey says in your confusion. "As you can see, it's on the same time as the Remembrance Ceremony."

...Ah.

Kyuubey nods here. "As always, you can have your staff attend to these events in your stead as you see fit, if you wish to devote your time to something else, but it's generally a good idea for you to attend to them on your own."

What do you do decide?

>You cannot attend the M-Idol Show and the Remembrance Ceremony at the same time. You can also have someone attend the Certification Ceremony if you wish. The options not picked will have one of your subordinates (Sayaka, Kyoko, Mami, Midori) attending in your stead.

You decide that you'll attend both ceremonies. It feels wrong to have anyone else do so - not when you're still new at the job, anyway. And you have a few ideas on what kind of squad name you'll be giving the newly-certified Vindicare Squad.

"Then, I assume you'll not attend the showing, then?" Kyuubey says as the both of you step out of the elevator, the car stopping at B16 - the Interrogation room floor.

You consider this for a moment, before shaking your head. You'll keep the ticket, you say. Maybe if you have time after the Remembrance Ceremony, you'll see if you can make the final minutes. Noriko had been helpful, at least, to keep your sanity during the Kirishima Ruri op. The least you can do is to show up, even backstage, to offer a few words of support.

"Very well, Matsuda. Ah, we're here." Kyuubey says as they come upon one of the more well-worn interrogation rooms in the floor, the others relatively unused. The door is heavy and leaden, much like the one sealing Haruka in her prison, but without the myriad of gatling guns aimed at it. "If you please, Matsuda."

You nod, here, and press the button on the console set into the wall next to the door itself. Activating its sister console inside, allowing anyone outside to contact the party inside.

"Yes? Who is this, please?" Mami's voice is light, easy, and warm. Reminding you of honey mixed in bracing, warm tea.

"It's us, Mami," Kyuubey speaks up, and you note here how he's using the blonde's first name. "Matsuda and I."

"Oh!" You hear Mami gasp in surprise. "Please, come in!" You hear some whispered murmuring underneath the crackle of the console speakers - Mami most probably telling whoever's the unfortunate fucker to not do anything stupid while you're there. Because you'll shoot them, seriously.

The door opens easily enough, and it's here that you see an interrogation room that...doesn't really look like an interrogation room.

No, it looks more like...a therapist's room, really. One with a bed in the middle.

And Mami, fully dressed in her crisp white blouse and pencil skirt - her blazer carefully folded and draped over the back of a chair - is sitting on the edge of the bed, while a very familiar girl in a simple white gown is resting her head on the blonde's lap. Using it as a pillow. The girl's eyes red as she continues to quietly cry, mewling as Mami runs her fingers through her short, platinum-blonde hair.

"I'll be with you in a moment, Chiaki-san, Kyuubey," Mami whispers, winking at you while holding an index finger up to her lips.

You nod dumbly, stunned not only at the sight but from the sudden rise of spiteful, frothing jealousy threatening to make you draw a weapon from your Shield and start shooting.

That's...that's fucking Meteor Hammer Bitch taking your FUCKING PLACE!

"...Is something the matter, Matsuda?" You hear Kyuubey suddenly speak, a hint of amusement in its voice. "Are you by any chance jealous of Miss Kana being interrogated in this manner?"

How do you respond?

We should get an update from Mami on how Meteor bitch and the Javelin girl have been treated. Their relationship is the leverage we need to get intell.

We could go the carrot route and offer them safety if they cooperate. Or we could go the stick route and offer to torture one in front of the other.

I get the feeling some of the girls under the prophet are just going through the motions and might want to get away from all that bullshit given the chance.

There's no telling what she does and does not know. She obviously visits other people - Wendy, for one - so it's impossible to say what she may or may not see.

Yeah, practising telekinesis is a smart idea, but we should probably ask Braids for help. And also apologize for accidentally offending her previously.

Presumably she does not watch us constantly. Thats why I said "assuming". It depends on whether or not she was paying attention to us during the mission, or eating soulgems somewhere else.

However since we have no way to actually know if she was watching at the time, we have no way to know if we still have those 2 charges or not. As such, its probably wise not to totally rely on the timestops.

We should also communicate with the incarnations in silent rooms whenever one is available, just in case it helps. Maybe talk with Braids later considering our location.

You reach up to adjust your glasses - but stop as you pinch only empty air, briefly forgetting that you've lost them back at Big Shell. Shaking your head briefly, you continue raising your hand, raking your fingers through your ponytail instead and then flicking it off of your shoulders in one smooth motion.

Who wouldn't be jealous, really? You murmur to your Incubator, your glare centered on the scene before you, taking in the sight of Mami cooing sweet, comforting nothings into Meteor Hammer Bitch's ear.

Anyone would kill to get that treatment, you add, suppressing the need to growl or snarl the words out.

"...I see." Kyuubey replies, saying nothing else.

A moment of this treatment and the girl gets up from her divinely-soft, divinely-warm pillow, clear regret and anguish of doing so in her face.

It's also hear that you see a leather collar, bright red in color, wrapped around the girl's neck like a fashionable choker. It even has a tag. Doesn't have a leash attached to it, though, or a chain - probably just something symbolic rather than a practical restraint.

Mami murmurs a few more inaudible words to her, a tender smile curling the corners of her soft lips, and Meteor Hammer Bitch sniffs again, before crawling on the bed, towards the side farthest from you, and curling up there. Wrapping the covers around her tightly as she takes in a shuddering, sobbing breath.

"Chiaki-san, Kyuubey, I'm sorry to keep you waiting," Mami says as she greets the both of you, getting up from the bed and walking forward. You note here that she's not wearing her shoes - she's walking on the cold tile floor on stockinged feet. "You caught me during my daily interrogation with Kana-san."

"Never mind it, Mami," Kyuubey replies before you could. "I brought Matsuda here because she asked to. Also, she'll be attending both ceremonies, so you may want to give her some pointers as to what to expect." Kyuubey nods at the both of you. "In the meantime, Matsuda, I'll leave you with Mami. I need to take care of the business you delivered to me earlier, and it must be handled now."

Ah. Right. The...thing. Yeah.

"Don't let me stew you in your own jealousy, Matsuda," Kyuubey suddenly adds, darting away and out of sight before you could swear and draw a firearm. Mami blinks at you, obviously puzzled, before blinking - and then, smiling.

"Jealous, Chiaki-san? Of who?" She giggles here, softly, gently, pure honey poured into your ears. "You're not saying you're jealous of Kana-san, are you? This is interrogation!"

...It's...it's just not the interrogation you're used to, you grumble while looking away. You're used to interrogation involving beatings and torture. You just came from one yourself. You didn't know they could ever involve cuddling, or...lap pillows.

"That explains why you're absolutely filthy," Mami's brow furrows, shaking her head as reaches out with both soft hands to straighten your blood-flecked bow tie. "And your glasses are gone, too. Lost to the mission location, I assume?"

Yeah. You lost them. ...Sorry.

"No worries, Chiaki-san." Mami smiles again, lifting your spirits considerably. "Just remember to refresh your costume before you attend the ceremonies, alright? And a long shower, this time!"

Okay, okay. You were planning on that anyway.

Mami smiles again, nodding in approval. "Very good, Chiaki-san. As you should. I won't be around to remind you forever, you know!"

...You're not sure what to reply to that. You're not sure if you should even be thinking of that.

"Anyway, Chiaki-san! Anything I can do for you today?"

How do you respond?

There's quite a commotion in the little alleyway. Here a vender of illegal wares argues with his customer over the price of smuggled goods. On the other side of the street, a lady has to wash her clothes in a small pink plastic tub, water from the nearby hose causing the suds to overflow and spill out. And beneath their feet, the dirt is cracked. Some poor schmuck rides in on a bike and draws leers from everyone there, but only for a moment. For I'm the main spectacle.

Well, myself and the chick trying to beat me unconscious.

She's agile, I'll give her that. She tries to approach with a flip through the air, ending in kick aimed straight for my head. But she's wide open to an uppercut that knocks her to the ground. I follow up with a spinning roundhouse kick that she hastily ducks out of the way of. Again she tries for a flying kick, so I grab her leg and throw her back down. By now she's unsteady on her feet and wide open to a good old fashioned leg sweep. Again she's making out with the dirt.

Still she staggers back up, determined not to go down easy, but I wasn't going to let her get in a single attack. A jab to the face makes her stagger back, and I shift towards her with a gut punch. She clumsily makes a kick at me, her movements sluggish and easy to read. More than enough for me to sidestep it and counter with a kick to the head.

Everyone can see it now : she's dazed and about ready to fall unconscious. Her sheer stubbornness is forcing her to stand upright. Which is cute and all, but it doesn't help her at all. Especially when I grab her and suplex her stupid face into the barren soil.

I can't even tell if she's still breathing at this point. But the small crowd that's gathered around us don't seem to care about her well-being. They cheer me, the victor.

My flawless victory is announced, and I look to my opponent, my expression carefully blank.

"You're bad at Street Fighter, ma'am."

The person who followed me home snapped the controller I gave her in two upon her hundredth loss, little grey bits of plastic flying around my mostly bare room. In our casual clothing - well, I am, anyway. She's wearing a stupidly frilly dress - we're sitting on the bed, across from the desk that holds my pathetically tiny television, playing the only thing I could afford from the pawn shop. She springs up and growls at me. "Fighting games are boring," is how she - Heather Crunch - justifies her loss. She sure stuck around a long time for somebody who dislikes them so much. "It doesn't feel anything like real fighting!"

"Yes, ma'am." Go fuck yourself. You're the one who invited yourself in and insisted on joining me in playing video games. I was already convinced you were trying to rape me from your creepy double entendres. I had to put everything back the way it was after your flamboyant ass wrecked it so I'd be allowed to get lunch, and then I had to hunt down something to eat after the cafeteria closed. After that I had to get back to the tortuous task of filling out forms written in Incubator-text for eight more hours because our Supreme Overlord Bunnycat the Sixth is an asshole. And I wish he'd figure out that those breathing exercises don't work when you don't have any fucking motor control so you can't fucking relax, you just get more and more antsy as the pain sets in and if that fucking bunnycat piece of shit bothered to ask in the first place he'd know that kind of thing but no of course not the boss knows everything about nothing and I just want to wring his smug little neck and feed him his own cold, black heart until he chokes on it. I hope he dies. Him and his brother from the Eighth. I hate them. I want those fucking things to die. Die Die die die diediedie-

"I stay in my residence and use this old machine to entertain myself after work until I fall asleep," I find myself answering to her disappointed face, pointing to the game console. It'd be really fun to lie right about now. Just a little bit. Something that'd shut her up. But I can't bring myself to do it, so I continue spilling my guts. "On weekends I stay in here and do much of the same."

She's folding her arms over her chest. "Nothing else?"

"I also go out and replenish my supply of sweets for the week. Local store has stuff at half-price before 10 AM on Sunday." After she barged in, I'd forgotten that I had some hard candies stashed in the drawer beneath the television. No wonder I'm feeling so pissy. I remedy that by opening said drawer to access the clear plastic sack containing my latest haul. Not paying the over-exuberant bitch any mind, I take a random one out, quickly unwrap it, and pop it into my mouth.

Mmm, watermelon.

Bitchcakes looks like she's thinking up something really wicked. Turning her head this way and that, making her ponytails rock back and forth like a metronome. She's making obnoxious affirmation noises, too. I didn't think anybody actually did that sort of thing, and yet here she is.

"Aha! I've got it!" she exclaims, leaping up onto the desk and - oh come on! Not the TV! Get off my fucking TV! "It is my belief that you would BENEFIT from spending your weekend basking in my GLORIOUS presence!"

"ERGO!" she yells as she jumps down, bringing three fucking months' salary crashing to the ground in broken glass. "As rrrrrrrank leader, I am going to spend MY valuable time aiding YOU!" Stop pointing at me. "To find your inner weapon! And we are starting... Tomorrow!"

That thing. That loud thing that pretends to be human just forced me into working on a weekend. I have to do unpaid overtime. I have to work without pay. More work. No pay. No pay for the work. If she would bother to look , she'd see me scowling.

And yet, amidst it all, a ray of hope shines through : the horrible girl is at my door and is making to leave. Before she does, she delivers an ultimatum : "I wanna see you at the gym at 8-o'clock tomorrow morning! Don't you dare be late!" before the thing that would not leave... leaves. Stomping down the hallway, further and further away from me. Giving me a brief period of solace to think about tomorrow. She's probably going to make me exercise.

She's the first person I've met here that looks like a normal human being, and yet she's breaking my things and making me fulfill her strange whims. And I'm pretty sure she's some kind of deviant.

I'm staring down at the smashed remnants of my dearest friend. The plastic's bent and broken. There's shards of glass all over the place that'll need vacuuming. And I have a sour taste in my mouth that the candy cannot mask.

I've decided.

I hate her. Yeah, I... I think I really hate her.

Thanks! Heres a question:

In the previous thread, we learned that in the past, Homura was both killed by Oktavia and also fell in love with Sayaka.

I guess after Rebellion and after the birth of the TNO/Homucifer and Madoka being "ripped out of heaven" and becoming Faust, Homura somehow started looping again in such a way where even death merely reset the loop then? That makes sense I guess.

But then, how did Homura revert to her shy Braids personality? Did she start forgetting her memories even before Chiaki-incarnation whenever she looped, which is how the Braids incarnation ended up becoming a shy girl again and falling in love with Sayaka?

Can you confirm, or explain how this is possible otherwise, since Homura turning into a witch or dying or otherwise being prevented from turning her shield would have been a total game over in the canon pre-rebellion loops. Not to mention that there are no hints of Homura ever falling in love with Sayaka in pre-rebellion canon timeline or reverting to "Moemura" personality.

(It's been almost four months since the first two chapters, so I've provided a brief recap of events. It's May of 1940, and the German military has initiated Fall Gelb, the first stage of their push into Western Europe. Claire Roux was a tailor's daughter in a small village near the French Ardennes. A small force of German soldiers, supposedly under the command of the Thirteenth Incubator, struck the town at night. Their target- an orphanage of magical girls that, with the Seventh's cooperation, secretly aimed to challenge their dominance in mainland Europe.

The town burned, and her family perished. In her desperation, she formed a contract with the Seventh, becoming a magical girl. After the battle, she met Mireille Linois, a surviving Callidus, and Amelia Brynn, an envoy from the Black Templars in England. The trio make north, to Dunkirk and the Black Templar's main contingent. They are hunted by the same soldiers who perpetrated the attack, and an unseen Culexus.)

“And then Ava came down really hard on her for getting seconds. I've never seen someone so upset over food. Sure, we only had so much, but it's not like anyone was starving. You had to be there, we were all so shocked.”

Mireille shouted a steady monologue over the engine as they traveled. Claire was eager to hear anything she could about other magical girls, and the upbeat Callidus was a good storyteller.

“And then Grace piped in with the biggest grin- “gee, boss, I thought we were supposed to be FIGHTING the Nazis!” You should have SEEN the look on Ava's face!” The bike's balance shifted a little as Mireille laughed. “Oh, right, you guys wouldn't know, when she was flustered or angry she'd always fall back into her German accent. That's why it was so funny.”

Claire had heard Amy, the cloaked driver, start to laugh a few times, before she would hide it with conspicuous coughs. The Black Templar had seemed less distant, and even friendly since defeating the witch. She spoke up. “Your leader was German, then?” Her voice was silenced by the engine, struggling loudly up a hill. “The letter said she had intelligence on the Thirteenth's group.”

“Sure was! She hunted with them a few years back. Something made her leave. Struck out on her own, you know? I guess they ramped up recruitment and militarized after that. She never told us too much, but the Seventh approached her and they started gathering girls of their own.” Mireille shrugged. “I can tell your bosses what I know.”

Amy grunted and nodded. Behind her back, the gray archer looked down at the sidecar and did an exaggerated imitation. Claire let out a small giggle and started fiddling with the radio receiver on her lap. She wasn't sure she'd be as quick to mock the initiate knight after seeing her fight that afternoon.

It was almost spooky how much better she'd felt after “using” the grief seed in her pocket. Her thoughts had sorted themselves out as the taint left her soul. She knew it when she transformed and shrugged off a bullet, but that was when her inhuman nature truly hit her.

The driver glanced back. “Stop playing with the receiver, Claire. We need it working.” Her heart obviously wasn't in the chiding. Mireille slapped her on the back. “We wouldn't want to miss another thrilling report on-”

The sarcasm was cut short as the mesh speaker emitted a long, ear-piercing tone. One of those dials must have been volume. Amy jumped, swerving the bike, and slamming on the breaks. “What did you-”

A hesitant voice floated out of the radio. “To any other...fledglings who escaped the nest. Rendezvous at the northern...safe-house.” The brief message ended, replaced by several confused radiomen.

“Ooh, cool and cryptic.” Mireille cut them both off as everyone spoke at once. “That's Grace Laurent, one of my colleagues. The first part was an inside joke, Ava's magic was flight- so we were all under her wing. It's good that she's safe...” A brief pause. Not long enough for either of them to speak, but long enough to emphasize what followed. “...but this is probably a trap.”

Claire's momentary excitement flipped around into confusion. “Why? You just said she was a friend!” Amy said nothing, an unreadable look on her face. Mireille's smile returned as she calmly explained. “It might NOT be a trap, but our arrangement back in your hometown didn't leak itself. There must be a traitor. Those Nazis saw us escape, but they can't search the entire countryside. It's a simple deduction.”

“You don't trust her?” There had to be a limit to caution.

“I don't, in light of recent events. If she's really out there, she'll lay low until we limp into town, lick our wounds, and find reinforcements with the BTs.” Mireille looked over to Amy and beamed.

Amy carefully broke into the conversation. “What if it isn't a trap, but the enemy hears the message?” Mireille's smile didn't falter. “Then my Callidus lessons were wasted on her.”

Claire took a step toward her. “You can't leave your friend there to fight that thing from town, that Culexus!” Mireille let out an embellished sigh and shook her head, braids swishing from side to side. “But you'd want to fight it yourself? And really, she's more a coworker than a friend.”

“We should at least check it out.”

Amy spoke, slowly, in an uncertain voice that was unlike Claire's impression of her. “I think we should go. A knight would go.” She seemed to regain her composure. “We can approach stealthily. You're a Callidus, aren't you? If we sense a trap, we gather what intelligence we can and pull out. If all is at it appears, they come with us to Dunkirk."

She took the unexpected support in stride and looked at her companion expectantly. The Callidus appeared to deflate, seeing where the conversation was going. "Amelia, your order needs to know about the enemy's movement. You'd endanger them for this?"

Amy swung herself back on the motorcycle and chuckled weakly. "Believe me, I'd only be endangering myself if my sister heard about me ignoring a damsel in distress."

The trio was perched on the limbs of a large tree. The desolate chapel in front of them didn't look like much of a "safe-house," but it was an unmistakable landmark. The building may once have been the pride of a local noble, but time and the forest had claimed it. Moss grew up the wall, and small branches grew through the shattered remnants of ornate windows. Parts of the slanted roof had collapsed inwards. It was these numerous holes and cracks that Mireille intently studied with a pair of small binoculars.

Amy was prone on a branch beneath them, scanning their surroundings for movement. "No fancy Callidus tricks to see inside?" she asked dryly.

"Well, I could get closer." She stuck her arms out for balance as she hopped over to the next tree.

Claire swung down, landing over Amy. "After all of her caution before, she's just hopping over to peek inside?" Looking down on the knight like this, she was shorter than Claire had thought.

"She's the specialist, here." She retorted, standing up. "I've only known her a few days more than you have, but she seems to know what she's doing."

The subject of their concern had reached the roof, about thirty meters away, setting herself down flat to peek inside. A few moments later, she sat up, gesturing toward them. "She's beckoning us over? Think it's safe?" In the distance, she raised her finger to her mouth, shushing them, and leaned back down, again looking into the chapel.

Shrugging to each other, they leapt from branch to branch, quickly and quietly approaching. Even in a tense situation, she couldn't help but enjoy skipping through the air. She heard the voices before she even touched down on the roof.

"I'll say what I said before, this is such a waste of time." The young female voice was full of disdain. "You saw an archer with gray braids, right? She never gave a damn about me."

A girl stood at the foot of the altar, her straight brown hair falling over a pale pink dress. The dress was made of a single piece of cloth and was utterly pristine, without a wrinkle or a speck of dirt, even as filth surrounded her. She could only be a magical girl. She defiantly faced a tall man. Even with his back to her, Claire instantly recognized him as the officer who had led the attack.

Below them, he spoke, with annoyance and resignation. "We've repeating ourselves, Miss Laurent. We found no trail. In the morning, we give up and return. You may spend the night searching, if you wish, but I suspect you would have little success. If you are to remain, I ask you cooperate."

A squad of soldiers watched the scene with expressions ranging from amusement to anger. Their uniforms matched those from the attack, and in addition to their rifles, some carried barbed tridents. She had learned not to underestimate their strength in numbers- as invulnerable as she might be, it didn't matter if she was skewered to the floor, tendons severed.

A mirthful soldier soldier nodded at the argument and commented on something that was quickly followed by raucous laughter. The officer turned and silenced them with a glance.

“How was I going to spy on them if I didn't?”

The traitor's brief silence was more than she could stand. She spun on the soldiers. “Your discipline is dreadful! If my teacher had seen me loitering around in the open like this, I'd have been retrieving arrows for weeks.” She spun back to face their boss. “Are you REALLY trained soldiers? Why-”

Grace, and everything else, was cut off as an angry voice boomed through the space. It came with a jarring impact that shook Claire to her soul. Had there been more in her stomach, she might have been sick. The girls next to her grunted, and Amy shifted back, knocking down a loose slate.

A new girl stomped out of a blind spot beneath them and up to the two at the altar. Just looking at her made Claire's pulse jump. This was the Culexus. She took in her appearance in a moment. A sickly-looking blonde girl in a red dress. Red didn't look good on her.

The next moment, she remembered the dress. It had been in her father's shop. Claire had made it herself. It was her magnum opus, a source of pride. Her father displayed it in the window, bragging to every customer. It wasn't for sale. Now he was dead, and the shop was gone.

The girl let out a flurry of angry, animated German at Grace, who had stumbled, gasping for air, clutching the altar for support. The dam had broken, and Grace was barely enduring the flood. Each line was punctuated with a flinch from the pink girl on the floor.

The room was still. The captain, standing between the two, looked equally amused and concerned. He ended the silence. “Miss Paria doesn't like you. With your complaining, she can't focus and hide her power.” More silence.

Grace stood up, uncertainly, and spat at the observers. “You're just a bunch of disposable human thugs, weak without your pet Culexus.” She let out a hacking cough. “Know your place...” She slunk back to a pew and sat scowling. A muscular young man snickered, and another, carrying a weighted net, walked up and gave the Culexus a jovial slap on the back.

These three were the reason for everything. Captain Dieter Gris. The Culexus, Paria. Grace Laurent. They had worked together to steal everything from her.

“Your traitor's right about one thing, they wouldn't be much if we took that girl out of the picture.” Amy said, as nonchalant as ever. “Your bow isn't magical, think you have a clear shot?”

The archer bit her lip, weighing the situation. “They don't suspect a thing. I think I might.” She moved up to a crouch. “How about you two? Ready for a brawl? ...Claire? You alright?”

Awkward seconds later, she found her voice. “A brawl. Yeah, I'm alright. I want this.” Something clicked.

There was a small gasp. “Claire, your sword.” Mireille whispered, in shock. Looking down, she saw the rapier covered in fire. Flames licked at her thigh, but she felt only a pleasant warmth. She knew that this was part of her magic.

Her magic. Reality came back. Magic. All three turned, as one, back to the chapel. Paria was staring right at them, eyes wide with realization. She could sense magic.

Time slowed, and her own heartbeat was deafening. The German Culexus was the first to move, tugging on the captain's sleeve. In a flash, Mireille drew her bow. Gris saw them. From beneath her cloak, Amy drew a large, jeweled hammer. An arrow was knocked back. She could feel the Culexus' influence reaching out, grabbing toward them. Gris dived, pushing Paria to the ground.

An arrow thunk-ed into the wooden altar, where Paria had been an instant before. Soldiers shouted as Mireille clicked her tongue. Amy drew a large, jeweled hammer from her cloak and ran along the roof. Sapphire light spilled out of her weapon as she held it above her head. It was swung downwards into the parapet.

The stone roof collapsed over the front of the church, burying the German leadership. A cloud of dust and dirt pushed Claire from behind as she dived toward the shocked form of the traitor. Grace brought her left arm up to parry, and a gaudy short-sword twinkled into being in her hand. “Who the hell are you?” She followed through with a riposte, forcing Claire to step back. The girl smirked at something behind Claire.

She heard another impact, followed by a scream, as a soldier behind her collapsed into her peripheral vision, a wicked broadhead piercing his gut. He dropped to the ground, screaming in agony.

Claire stabbed forward, her footwork instinctual. The parry came late- the thrust was deflected, but drew blood in a glancing blow on the shoulder. Grace shrieked in pain and rage as the flaming sword started to cauterize the wound. Her immaculate dress had been shredded and burnt, and her expression of hatred matched Claire's own as she made to strike back.

With a burst of colorful light, a second weapon, a dagger, formed in Grace's free right hand, and plunged toward her chest. The attack had left Claire open. She was unable to deflect it, and threw her left arm in its path.

It would seem that magical weapons hurt much more than mundane ones. She staggered backwards, the dagger was hilt-deep and had pierced straight through her arm. Grace stepped back, a smug grin plastered on her face. Claire wished she could hate her to death.

Holding her useless arm to her chest, she afforded herself a brief look at the rest of the battle. Amy stood over a pile of gore, fighting an angry group of soldiers that advanced from all sides. The rest were preoccupied firing at Mireille, who danced around the architecture as she fought, landing on a stone cross and loosing two arrows before skipping over to a ledge.

The rubble was stirring, and a handful were rising out of the roof's collapse, dazed but ready to fight.

She was now circling around, maneuvering Claire's back against the wall. Before she could retaliate, her opponent desperately dodged to the side, taking shelter behind a pew. An arrow bounced off of the stone where she had been moments before.

Grace glanced around the room, and kicked the pew at Claire, stumbling her backwards as her opponent retreated. Their duel had reached the entrance, watched over by an unrecognizable statue, headless and coated in moss. Grace had positioned it between herself and Mireille's current roost.

Before Claire could pursue, there was activity on the opposite end, as Captain Dieter Gris rose out of the debris, helping up Paria, shielded below him. The battle had a new priority.

Her two allies seemed to agree. The crowd of soldiers around Amy was noticeably reduced, and she broke through them, shaking off a net, roaring as she charged.

From somewhere, two arrows were loosed at the blonde Culexus. With a burst of adrenaline, the German captain shielded her with a wooden slab from the wreckage, the broken altar's surface. The arrows buried themselves in it.

Paria turned to face Amy, her face determined as she finally rejoined the battle. An impact shook every magical girl in the room as her power was fully focused on Amy, whose strings were cut. Her hammer faded away as the force of her charge slammed her into the ground. She was down.

Her instincts screamed for her to run away, but Claire resolved herself and ran over to her fallen comrade. As she stood guard over the limp body, her stance daring any soldiers to advance, Mireille dropped down behind the Culexus, pulling out a long knife and lunging for her throat.

Paria staggered with a cough, and then stood up straight, wiping a trail of blood from her lip. Had she hurt herself with her magic? She looked down on Mireille, speaking foreign words in a triumphant tone as she turned to face Claire.

Alone, with every remaining gun in the room aimed at her, the full attention of a powerful Culexus, and the traitor strolling confidently down the aisle, she found herself resigned to defeat. Her fury was redirected inwards. Even after giving up her humanity, she had been defeated.

Involuntarily, she loosened her grip on her rapier, which slipped from her hand and disappeared before hitting the floor. It was a strange feeling- she was losing control of her own body as the anti-magic slowly coiled around her.

As she fell on top of Amy, her vision was the last thing to go. She saw a young soldier, wounded but relieved to have survived. She saw Grace laugh as she stood over Mireille, snapping her bow in half. And finally, she saw the hem of her favorite red dress moving toward her, and a hand closing over the soul gem at her neck.

This might be a stupid question but are the Homucifer meetings with Nicole from some writeup, or something you just know?

Its kinda funny actually that Homucifer looks like Chiaki. Good thing she does not appear more often to people, or Chiakis reputation would be ruined.

And what about the actual Homura Akemi native to this dimension. If she is not a MG herself, then she must really despise Chiaki at this point since everyone would just assume she is Chiaki in disguise.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 03/16/14(Sun)08:33 No.30869118

Hnh. That so? What about Meteor Hammer Cunt, then? You jerk your chin towards the shivering girl cocooned in blankets.

"Her name is Ishimura Kana, Chiaki-san," Mami chides you gently, her brow furrowing. "I'm...well, I'm still working on her. She's the most receptive of the group, though, and I've been able to get her to trust me so far." It's here that her voice lowers to barely a whisper. "If you give me a few more days with her, perhaps a week, Chiaki-san...I think I can get everything we need to know about this Prophet."

It's here that she looks at you, her warm honey-colored eyes staring into yours. "Of course, I'll step aside if my Warmaster has other ideas." She smiles here, a patient, saintly smile that wouldn't have been out of place beaming from the face of winged, angelic divinity.

"As for the ceremonies..." The blonde falls silent for a moment, deep in thought. "Well, just be presentable and solemn, Chiaki-san. You don't need me to write a speech for you or anything, just make sure you say what's proper for the occasion."

She giggles. "They know how Chiaki-san talks, anyway, and you suddenly busting out with a speech that someone else wrote would sound really fake." Another giggle, before she blinks, as if remembering something.

"Oh! And be sure to think up of a proper squad name, if they ask you to provide one." It's here that her smile becomes a bit strained. "Just try not to be too creative, alright, Chiaki-san? It's the squad name they'll be using for the rest of their careers."

Ah. You'll...remember that, yeah. The bit about the squad names.

Mami nods here, smiling brightly again. "Well...getting back to Kana-san, here..." She gestures briefly at the now-sleeping girl behind her. "How do you want me to proceed with her, Warmaster? As well as the rest of the prisoners?"

How do you respond?

[]Let Mami deal with it. She knows what she's doing, and you trust her.
[]You'll take it over from here. Your method's messier and certainly less fluffier, but you know it works. Sometimes.

You can't be 'Adorable' without being 'Adored'. That's the thing, right there. Mami makes everyone 'Adore' here, whether they want to or not. That's why she was in charge of Girl-A, yo. But thats a pretty good definition. Noir revolves about a protag that is very flawed and does some morally questionable things while trying to do the right thing in a world that is depicted as inherrently corrupt.

Often the Protag is flawed or his moral ambiguity is established due to how he tried to do the right thing in the past and how it alienated him because the the world shat on him.

You decide to let Mami deal with Kana and the rest of the prisoners. She seems to know what she's doing, and you trust her enough to do the right thing. She didn't even need to ask, really.

Although...you'd like to meet Lucius personally yourself. Not to interrogate her or anything, but just to meet her, face to face. You should do that much at least, since...well, she HAD been doing her best to kill you back at the stadium. Maybe she'd let something that you can use slip if you tried talking to her.

Mami seems to consider this, before nodding. "I...hmm. I suppose that's worth a shot, Chiaki-san. You were her main objective, as far as I can guess, and she was ready to sacrifice her entire team just to kill you. That kind of dedication..." She shakes her head, her soft yellow curls bouncing with her movement. "...If only she didn't get mixed up in this Prophet business, she'd have made a great Rank Leader."

Mami taps a perfectly-manicured finger on her chin, before turning her wrist to glance at her watch. "I can have Housekeeping get her ready and cleaned up for an interview right now, if you'd like. She'll be ready by the time we get there, and I'll just make sure we end it well before the certification ceremony."

Another smile. "Unless Chiaki-san has something else she needs to attend to? Lucius isn't going anywhere, and neither is her squad."

How do you reply?

Grief seed.

Blue is considered the same color as green in the Himba language, and it is pronounced as "buru", which sounds like a Japanese person trying to say "blue".

Thus we establish that blue=green.

SAYAKA IS THE DANGER! OH GOD WARN KYOKO!

You shake your head. Some other time, you tell Mami. You've got other stuff to take care of first. Youd like it if she could arrange it for some other day, when your schedule's not as full.

Mami, as polite and as patient with you as ever, nods and smiles. "Hee, how responsible, Chiaki-san! Alright, I'll schedule it for sometime this week. I'll be sure to notify and call you at least a day in advance for it. That'll give me enough time to try it again with her, too. Maybe by then, she'll be more amenable to telling us the information we need." She nods again. "I'll take care of this personally, Chiaki-san, don't you worry."

Heh. You're not worried one bit, if she's handling it. But...you ARE worried for her. Is she going to be okay? The prisoners ARE girls who were brainwashed into being willing soul gem bombs, after all. That kind of crazy is the crazy that goes for the jugular even when you've sawed their arms off and blown their kneecaps out.

The smile that Mami gives you now is just as saintly and as warm as any of her previous smiles - but you feel, for the shortest of moments, a chill run up your spine at the sight of it.

You recognize it for what it is: a very brief surge of pure, intense killing intent.

It wasn't directed at you - you'd have pulled out your Desert Eagle right then and there, by reflex alone - or anybody else, but just revealed momentarily. Like a blade being partly drawn from its sheath.

"I've handled worse, Chiaki-san! And I'm still here, aren't I?" Mami giggles again, and suddenly moves forward to catch you in a soft, warm hug. The dreadful moment fading quickly, as quick as it had risen, but leaving its taste on your tongue. "Now, go and take care of whatever it is you've got scheduled. Remember what we talked about, too!"

Despite everything, you find yourself returning the hug, a small smile tugging the corners of your lips upwards. ...Yes. Of course you'll remember.

"Good!" She squeezes you tighter, warmer, and you feel your knees almost buckle at the sheer...coziness currently wrapping around your frame. The warmth of someone else's body, pressing against yours, just for you. Only for you. Her soft honey perfume mingling with the crisp scent of the fresh linen sheets of the bed.

"I'm glad you got back safely, Chiaki-san." She whispers in your ear. "Thank you for coming back to us." The blonde squeezes you again.

"Thank you for coming back to me."

You leave the interrogation room a moment later, the remnants of mission fatigue all but shorn away completely, a rather goofy smile on your face. You also feel a disturbing heat on your cheeks, which, along with the smile, you hope would fade before you have to talk to someone important.

"Three hundred thousand," Risa suddenly murmurs beside you, her dog-eared shadow manifesting with the far-off sound of a chainsaw revving as its motorized teeth bites into flesh.

"Three hundred thousand points for the blonde, mate. Jesus Christ, no, four. Seriously." She shakes her head at you, running her hands up and down her arms. "Cripes, I've got gooseflesh all over just being in the same fucking room with her!"

Huh. Is...is she talking about Mami? Is Risa actually scared of Mami?

How do you react?

No, but as was said earlier, Malals entry on her was pretty damn creepy. From the Wiki:

TOMOE

[UNLOCKING ENTRY #7]

[You love her, don't you? It's alright. Everyone loves her. She makes sure of it. There's nobody in the magical girl business more connected than Tomoe Mami - she's got friends in every Officio. More than that, she has people that would kill for her, maybe even die for her for nothing more than a smile and a pat on the head. Not just rank and file, either - Warmasters have fallen in love with Tomoe Mami. Special forces. Cannibals and murderers, heroes and psychopaths. If Mami died, the entire magical world would grieve, and then it would hunt.]

[You're one of them. There's no shame in it. She's a mother figure for a lot of people, and a lover for a lot of others. Someone that always knows what carrot to use and when, and how to use the stick after she pulls the ribbons out.]

[I don't trust her. Nobody should command that much power. But if you're on her side - no, of course you're on her side. If she's on your side, and you know that for certain, she's probably the most valuable asset you could have. Just be careful. Watch your back. Don't let her smile fool you. She's a killer, just like any other magical girl that's been around for as long as she has.]

[Maybe worse.]

I love it. Mami is scary. Lets make sure she remains our friend eh?

In retrospect, it could just be that Risa's SO thrown off by being in the same room as her that it's only coming off as being a first-time assessment. (The "no, actually 400k" bit is mostly what points to that.)

And even if it was her being forgetful and having to first-time it a second time, I suppose she'd have to do a new assessment every time regardless in order to properly factor in betrayal bonuses and the like.

She got stabbed. But recovered quickly (because Magical Girl). I still wonder if the way she acted after Kirika's death was legit sadness of losing a friend, way to mask frustration of losing an asset or just an act to match up with the image she's trying to keep.

You very nearly stop in your tracks as what Risa had said finally sinks in - but you force yourself to continue walking as you rifle inside your Shield's inventory, trying to see if it'd be lenient for once and spit out a forgotten cigarette stick or two. Pleasantly, it does, and you busy yourself with lighting one.

"What're ya, hard of hearin'?" Risa snaps as you give your lit cigarette a quick series of puffs, helping the tip catch aflame as you flip your zippo closed. "I said that bint's worth four hundred thousand points, Murderface. Bag her, and yer just a couple of squads away from gettin' the high score!"

You heard her just fine the first time, you grumble around your cigarette, taking a moment to savor the taste of the smoke, the sensation of its calming tendrils roiling around your chest. You hold your breath here, wanting to hold on to that small bit of peace and calm, before letting go of it in a deep exhalation.

"Well?" The wolf-eared ghost says impatiently. "Come on! She's practically inna locked room, here, and we can always foist the murder off that chick she's coddlin', and--"

No. You say finally, cutting the shadow off. Not for all the points in the world.

"You get the entire fucking Cruor Praetoria as yer own posse! Twelve fuckin' giant demons with wings! An' the loving admiration of all your peers! How the fuck is that not worth it?!"

You take another long, slow drag from your cigarette. She really wants to know?

"Of course I fuckin' do!" Risa growls. "Christ, even Kharn--"

Even Kharn couldn't kill Mami, you cut her off again. And Risa thinks you could?

It's not just a question of ability here, you explain as calmly as you can. Even if for some strange, insane reason that you believed that you had a chance to stand up against the Ninth's finest Vindicare - one who shot and sniped and clubbed her way to the top without the unfair advantage of Time Stop - there's no way you'd even make a single aggresive move against her. Not for all the money, whisky or giant winged demon dudes in the world.

Because she's Mami. She's your Mami.

"..." Risa stops in her tracks here, suddenly silent. You continue on walking, leaving the shadow behind. She catches up a moment later by the elevators, as you press the button to summon a car.

"Okay, okay. I think we can work this, here." Risa holds up both hands. "Why don't I just take over, huh? So that it's technically not you who's doing it. I'll let you back in when it's done, and I'll even make sure that I wash your hands first! So you don't see all the blood and stuff! And--"

You shake your head again, narrowing your eyes at the ghost. Isn't she fucking listening? You don't WANT the goddamn points. You'll earn the points and the high score some other way. Besides, does she even know what kind of backlash you'll get killing Mami, even if you even so much as tried it?

Your own fucking people will hunt you down and kill you. Not the Tenth, or the Prophet, or even the Sixteenth. Your own Officio will hunt you down and murder you, with Blueberry Bitch leading the entire operation. ...Probably Kyoko too, at that, and she'd be crying the entire time.

"That...that bad?" If there was a way for a shadow to actually get pale, you have no doubt Risa'd be doing it now. "Cripes."

You nod. So yeah, she can forget about that. If you're honest, you think 400K's a bit too low for her. Someone like Mami...she'd deserve at least twice that.

"It's not like I make all of these point totals up on the spot, you know." Risa says wretchedly as she squats beside the elevator, grunting. "There's a lot of stuff ta consider. There's the ability of the sparklie itself, an' the innate potential...if the Blessed Lady likes 'em or not, that kinda point modifier." She lets out a sigh.

"But, to be completely honest with ya..." The shadow looks up at you, almost pitifully, like a beaten dog. "She just...I think she's serious bad news. I mean, didn't ya feel that earlier? When she smiled at you the last time?"

How do you respond?

We did have a POV from Mami a while back, so we know she is not a "MUAHAHAHA" evil manipulator or anything, so you are probably right that she would be loyal to us so long as we did not turn on her first.

However there is stil the issue that in that same POV flashback, we learned that she has a GW (a golden musket). And even after learning everything about GWs as she recently has, she has still chosen to both keep quiet about it and not give the GW either to QB or Chiaki.

That is suspicious and also leaves open the option that Pinky might be influencing her mind or otherwise corrupting her.

That would be a valid argument if you were a soldier that was actually purple but you didn't know it.

But that isn't the case; you may be a soldier but you can't know that you are unaware of your true color because the perceptions between individuals vary based on perception, thus you will never know that you are actually purple.

You narrow your eyes at Risa. What does she mean about Mami being bad news? She'd better explain further, or you'll stuff her in storage for an entire fucking year.

Risa returns your glare with one of her own, before slowly standing up and patting her knees. "Right. Well, I already bent yer ear warnin' ya about the blue bitch, and I can't say much about that because..." She pauses here, tilting her head, as if suddenly listening for something. "'Cause of quantum, see. Stars aren't right enough for that and all that rot."

...That's bullshit, but she can go on, sure. You probably could guess what she was warning you about.

The wolf-eared ghost lets out another sigh, as if lamenting some unknown regret, before nodding to herself. "I know I go on about betrayin' your best friends and everythin', but I don't really go into it as much as you think I do. No one should have to, in a good, just world. You shouldn't have to hug your best friend without worryin' if she's just making sure she knows where to stick the knife in."

"I killed my best friend," Risa suddenly admits. "I killed my best friend and I ate her corpse AND her Soul Gem. Not because I thought it'd be a fun idea at the time, or that I was hungry and needed a snack, but because I thought I was saving her." She looks down on her ghostly, nearly-transparent hands. "I thought I was savin' the entire fuckin' world by killin' her, my squad, an' my Warmaster."

You're silent at this. What the fuck can you say to something like that?

"There're only two kinds of people who betray people who trust 'em, Murderface." Risa holds up a hand, two fingers sticking out from a clenched fist. " Cowards, because they're worthless pieces of shit who only look out for themselves, and good people - because they're okay with bearin' that kind of unforgivable sin if it means contributin' to the bigger picture. And that blonde bint over there--" She jerks a thumb at Mami's interrogation room. "--ain't got the look of a coward. Not by a long shot. For one thing, she doesn't have these." The ghost grabs both her wolf ears, pinching them.

This is fucking ridiculous. Risa's scared of Mami because she's a good person? When is being a good person so fucking scary to a spirit that inhabits a pair of fuckoff chainaxes?

"You don't really get it, do you?" Risa's grin is a weak, sickly one. "Well...didn't really expect you to. Just remember to be careful and watch your back. Especially around her."

...If it'll get her to shut up about this forever, fine. You'll make sure to shield yourself from Mami's goody-good rays, waiting for her inevitable betrayal because she's so fucking nice.

"Please yourself, ya buggerin' git. I'm done." Risa growls at you, before suddenly fading. "Wake me up when blood must flow. And I'm still disappointed ya let that free thousand points get away, you know!"

The Elevator doors open as soon as Risa vanishes, and you step inside. You toss the spent butt of your cigarette - already smoked down to the filter - and make to light another one, just as you think on which floor to go.

Fuck that, only if Sayaka is around to cut our arms off for when she goes banana nut butters and tries to take over our body. And we agreed with Sayaka that we are going to duel her with it tomorrow.

We made that hypothesis a long time ago. When we found out Oriko was the Prophet and that she was using Ahrimans staff. I think it's the agreed upon plan of action.

If we manage to save Oriko though, and offer to try and protect her in the future, Kirika will probably cooperate and not try to possess us.

And Oriko presumably knows that Ahriman (I think that was her name) is inside the staff she is carrying.

So we could use that to try and convince Oriko that Kirika is still around too, and have Kirika convince her to surrender the staff and give up.

It has its risks, but if we just kill Oriko, then we can forget ever using the sword.

To what extent are the spirits inside the Golden Weapons aware of things around Chiaki? Risa for example was apparently in the shield, but she still saw Mami and could choose to appear and talk to Chiaki at will. Yuu also did something similar during the idol job.

Can they all do that? For example, since Chiaki is also carrying the DEagle right now, are the Braids-, Dildoes- and Murderface-incarnations watching everything thats happening around Chiaki, and could they also choose to speak to her and comment anytime they wanted to?

Sometimes they do if they're really pushing themselves to the limit, or are inherently weak. But they generally have a very strong constitution, Eversors specially.

Risa can be very aware and very independent. So far she's the only one that can do it that Chiaki's found. The Chainaxes are crazy. The three stooges can somewhat because they ARE Chiaki in a sense, and Yuu can only do it while siphoning energy off of Chiaki.

But Chiaki can do that because she is:
A)Magical Girl
B)Has her soulgem linked with Walpurgisnacht that absorbs most of the corruption.

Oriko could not wield the sword. She would just go insane and corrupted just like Kirika herself did. And I would assume Kirika would realise that, considering she DID go insane.

I presume if we remind her about how she was ranting about "the devils green blood", and ask if she wants that for Oriko, we can get her to cooperate.

Trying to get a general consensus from so few people out of so many options would result in a lot of options that got 1-2 votes.

In addition to this good point here, all of the golden weapons also have their own spirits, meaning taking more than one would probably make it hard to focus on meeting those characters and learning about them.

Honestly? We were already kicking around ideas for the High Priestess of the Church about...geez, over a year ago now. On a whim I decided I wanted to play with the idea of a Madotsuki magical girl with a similar narrative to Chiaki's, and maybe if Decu liked her she could act as a mostly nameless midboss later.

Decu liked her a lot more than I anticipated.

I liked her from the first moment we met her. If I remember correctly, it was a magical fever dream where we killed each other. Good shit. Hard to not like a character like that.

Think we will get a Magical Nevada-tan with a golden box cutter?

How many people voting at the time were aware of that? How many would have voted for something else if the option was not given, knowing it would automatically lose since very few people choose the "other" option if its not explicitly mentioned.

Something like "you only brought one" pretty much implies Deculture only wanted us to bring one anyway. And for valid reasons as Wendy pointed out.

You are right about the combinations though, which is why it would probably make sense for most popular options to be given, or for Deculture to choose one and let us choose the other. Most people don't want to use the gauntlets and the Deagle together for example.

For example, if we vote to go ahead with the plan to convince Oriko via Kirika-in-sword (which we would presumably talk to Kirika about during the Sayaka duel), Deculture could decide that we take the sword by default, and let us choose one other GW.

True. But we have met them all now for the most part. Well, not Kirika in-sword, but we knew her from before.

The question is, is it possible to open it up as a general 'which weapons will you take?' without getting ten different answers with only a vote or three each? Genuinely looking for suggestions here.

Probably not. I think it's more likely that someone will remember next time that we can pick more than one, give an answer including more than one, and everyone will start a shitstorm about it.

First vote is to pick the first weapon from a group of two, or neither.

If the winning choice is neither, then it can be assumed that both other weapons are going to be taken.

Otherwise, vote for the remaining two weapons.

So in effect, it would go something like this:

First vote is chainaxe, katana, or neither. If chainaxe wins, we then move on to the second vote with either the bangles or the deagle. If more people pic neither for option one, then we go with the gauntlets and the deagle, and leave the other two behind.

Alternatively, set up both votes at once, so it'd be "Pick one : chainaxe, katana, or neither" and also "Pick one : gauntlets, deagle, or both".

Does that work?

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

You decide to give your personal vault a visit first. As much as you'd like to get back to your office and knock back a drink or two - Risa's irritating sourgraping having basically killed off the warm, pleasant buzz of spending a few moments with Tomoe Mami - you'd prefer to get all the important shit out of the way first.

Important shit being the Golden Weapons in your possession, of course. Pinky's gifts of murderous, gibbering insanity.

...Fuck. You're still salty over Risa talking about Mami like that. Yes, sure, you know the wolf-eared girl's clinically insane, in a cute and amusing way that reminds you slightly of a crazy, off-kilter uncle who allowed you to play with his dangerous power tools - but she didn't have to say that kind of bullshit about your personal blonde goddess of victory.

She doesn't even know Mami beyond that fucking meeting. Or at least, it seemed like it. Either way, you're not going to stand for it, chainaxe spirit or no. You're almost tempted to send her back to Kharn, if it weren't for the fact that you're still trying to gather all of them.

Fucking Golden Weapons, you growl underneath your breath, making a few trainees flinch and cower away from you as you pass by them in the corridor.

Fucking Pinky.

>>30889707

Your exhaled breath mists in front of you as you stand inside your own personal vault, the automated doors clicking and whirring and slamming closed. As expected, two of the four occupied frames are empty - specifically, the one for the chainaxes, and the other for the Desert Eagle, which had made the jump from here to Big Shell when you racked your shield.

Grunting, you place both weapons back into their customized foam insets - gently with your Desert Eagle, and none-too-gently with the stupid pair of motorized Magical Girl neckchewers. You could swear you heard Risa's bark of pain as both chainaxes bumped into each other, flakes of dried blood flecking off their gruesome paintjob at the impact.

With the Golden Weapons finally out of your possession, you feel...well, lighter, somehow, and at the same time also hollow. Like you're incomplete for some reason. Without thinking, your hand strays towards Muramasa, but it's quickly stopped by you staggering back and gripping both your knees in pain. The pain-killing effect of the XV Golden Weapon finally wearing off.

FUCK. SHIT. FUCKING BULLSHIT.

The pain recedes into a tolerable dull throb after what seems like a couple of eternities, and it's here that you straighten up, wiping the tears from your eyes.

+ Serves ya right + Comes the weak pulse from the chainaxes, and you shoot the paired weapons a glare.

Anyway. What do you do now?

You decide to check up on Yuu first. You remember that she was put out of action because of the Kirishima Ruri op, where she protected you from being cut in half by Lucius' killing stroke.

Taking the Golden Bracelets out from their customized foam insets, you note that they look more or less normal now - previously, as you left Yuu to heal on her own, one of them had a nasty-looking scratch. It's pretty much gone now, the luster and sheen of the gold having returned there.

+ Yuu? You, uh, there? + You feel yourself chuckle slightly at the pun, despite your still-black mood. There's no response, oddly enough, so you concentrate deeper. Harder. Silencing your breathing, your heartbeat, tuning out the drone of the climate control inside your vault.

When you open your eyes, you find yourself...in a broken-down gym. Cracked paint encrusting the walls, crinkling around sun-bleached posters of boxers and martial artists. A decrepit boxing ring, its ropes drooping miserably to the mat, rots in the middle of it all. Rusting weights and bars litter the floor, along with what looks like broken training dummies, planks, and swords snapped in half.

You shake your head at this, before a loud flurry of activity in the corner catches your attention. You walk forward, brow furrowing as you make your way around the ring - and it's here that you see Yuu's familiar black-garbed form, hoodie and stockings and all, beating the everliving FUCK out of a punching bag.

...You can't believe just how much force and weight seem to be going into each punch she sends smashing into the sand-filled bag. Each hit is quick, blindingly-so, a one-frame movement that you could easily miss just by blinking. Each hit ROCKS the bag, bending it nearly in half, cracking the already-duct tape reinforced leather and making new ruptures with every impact. Each hit echoes throughout the cavernous gym, a solid bassy thud that smacks against your eardrums and makes the nearby windows vibrate in reluctant sympathy.

But as deafeningly-loud and flinchingly-violent each punch from those tiny little fists are, you could easily hear Yuu's words, hissed under her panting breaths, colored by exertion and focus and perhaps even desperation.

"Have to train harder," The tanned girl growls under hre breath. "Have to be faster than this. Stronger than this. So Matsuda-san won't get hurt again by my being so weak. SO FUCKING WEAK." She all but snarls the last bit as she lets loose a monstrous hook on the bag - the impact blasting the leather pillar to the side and up, slamming hard against the ceiling before drooping back down again.

...Okay. You didn't know Yuu was this intense. It's...you had an idea, sure, but not like this.

Okay.

The way that picture's drawn, It looks like Chiaki's got a naked torso, abdomen and butt with some frills and a bow glued to her waist and with, like, a sleeved mantle on her arms and shoulders.

You call Yuu by her name, not shouting it but more like just saying it a couple of notches higher than what you think is an acceptable indoor voice volume.

For a moment, you think that she didn't actually hear you - but after a few more moments of feverishly and ferociously mauling the stricken punching bag with her fists, Yuu seems to slow down, before stepping forward and holding the bag still. Her quick, heavy breathing briefly becoming the only other sound in the gym - besides your own breathing, of course.

"Huh? Who was that...?" Yuu's brow furrows, looking around - and it's here that you see her eyes widen under the shadow of her hood as she finally spots you.

"Matsuda-san!" She cries out, pushing the bag out of the way as she half-runs, half-sprints towards you. You inwardly wince at this, while at the same time faintly amused that someone could actually sound so pleased at seeing you. "I...you're back! You're finally back!"

As she crosses the handful of steps between you, it almost seems like Yuu was just about to jump into your arms, here - but had consciously stopped herself at the last moment, skidding to a halt and holding her clenched fists to her chest. "T-thank...thank you for coming back, Matsuda-san!" She holds her arms stiff to her sides, before bowing crisply and deeply at the waist. "I'm...I'm really happy you didn't dispose of me after I failed you! P-please, I'll try my absolute best next time...!"

...Dispose of her? What? You blink at her here, before reaching down to surreptitiously scratch at a suddenly-itchy spot on your behind through your pantyhose. Why the hell would you do that?

And what's this about her failing you? She did nothing of the sort back at the stadium. In fact, you remember that it would've been you being dragged back to Headquarters in a body bag, instead of Lucius' flunkies, if you hadn't brought Yuu with you.

"I..." Without looking up from her bow, it's hear that YUu's shoulders start to shake, along with her voice. "M-Miss Kirika had said that you'd be disposing of me as soon as you got home from your mission, because...because not only did I get you wounded, but I was useless to you when you needed me...!"

...Kirika. Even in death, that bitch is still mad. And still slandering you every chance she gets.

You let out a sigh as the still-bowing, still-shaking girl begins to cry in front of you. You had hoped that Kirika had mellowed out a bit after...well, getting retired by you, and spending a few months in storage. Evidently, she hasn't, even going back to her own hateful little tricks.

It's here that you reach out with a free hand towards Yuu, and, with a gentleness that you rarely show to anyone else - you pat her gently on her bowed, hooded head. Feeling her thick hair tousle gently underneath the soft black cloth covering most of her scalp and face.

Yuu utters what could be the cutest half-sob, half-squeak you've ever heard, and you watch her amber-pupilled black eyes swivel up at you in tearful wonderment.

You're not going to throw her away, you reassure her, forcing your voice to be even, to be gentle, to not sound like you're sneering or growling or any edgy bullshit like that. Kirika's...you and Kirika have a history of being bitches to each other, and she'd always won out. She's just being a bit more of a bitch now because of you killing her and everything. At least, you think so. It's the most logical conclusion to draw anyway.

...And no, she's not useless. She got injured saving you, remember? And even despite that, she gave you one of the most entertaining fights you've ever had.

So, no. She doesn't need to worry about that kind of thing at all.

Yuu makes another squeaking sound as you finish your little speech, here, and she cries again - but this time, stepping forward and burying her face into your chest, her small arms wrapping around you and hugging you tight. You let out a sigh - wincing slightly as you feel an iron grip pressing against either sides of your ribs - and you pat the sobbing girl on the back.

It's easy enough, really, to forget that a punching machine like Yuu's still just a girl. It's also easy to forget that Kirika has always been a bitch, and death apparently isn't going to change that.

When she finally calms down and detaches herself from you, it's here that Yuu bows again, apologizing profusely through a voice hoarse from too much crying. You stop her before it could get any worse, and instead ask her how she is.

"I'm...I'm fine, Matsuda-san. I'm all healed up from the last time, a-and I've been training ever since!" She jumps back a couple of steps, an eager grin curling her lips as she shadowboxes for a couple of seconds - her fists flying fast enough to leave blurring trails in their wake. "I've been trying my best to remember my Master's lessons in blocking and defense, too, so I can stop Matsuda-san from getting hurt!"

Well, what else can you say in the face of that kind of drive, that kind of energy? You manage a smile here, before nodding. You'll take that as her being ready for more action, then?

"Of course!" Yuu stops murdering the air in front of her to grab your hand, the hand that you'd patted her on the head with, and clasping it between her own. "Please, Matsuda-san, take me with you the next time you need help! I'll help you obliterate every enemy in your way!"

You could only hope you don't let her down yourself.

You tell Yuu that while you're happy that she's okay for active duty again, you also tell her not to overdo it. Being overeager can get you just as hurt as the opposite.

The tanned yougn woman nods here, smiling brightly. "I'll do my best, Matsuda-san! I'm not going to fail you like I did last time!"

Of course she won't. She's already promised, and you believe she'll die first before breaking that promise.

If only you could be just as dogged with your promises, eh?

I believe it was a mild bit of FoFA.

The last time we had something like that was with Yuu.

We basically FoFA'd against Sayaka.

Actually, the procedure made us highly resistant, but it did not instantly confer total immunity.

During the previous Sayaka training duel for instance, Chiaki actually texted a warning to Sayaka that he was going to mess with Muramasa before touching the blade.

There's also that offhanded comment that Risa made about corruption resistance, and Pinky not wanting us to build it up. This may mean that a weapon could flood Chiaki with enough corruption to overwhelm her, even with the Siberia procedure. We got lucky that Yuu likes us and that Risa isn't an asshole, but this corruption overwhelming scenario could be a real possibility with Golden Wep spirits that hate is and want to destroy all that we hold dear.

You walk over to the rack that bears the XX Golden Weapon, Muramasa, and all but rip the sword off of its customized frame. Meeting Yuu had improved your mood some, but finding out that Kirika's up to her old tricks still has soured it. Bringing you back into the black, brooding mood you'd been nursing after Risa harshed your mellow earlier.

You hold the blade by its sheath and give it a rattle. Bitch has got a lot to answer for, and you're going to get a few out of her now.

Next to Sayaka, anyway.

You open your eyes the moment the scent of blood and fire hits your nostrils, and you find yourself on top of the burning, bloodied helicopter pad of Mitakihara Tower One.

Fittingly enough, it's the place where you retired Kirika. Frozen in time, moments after the act itself.

And sitting on the helipad floor is none other than the former Rank Leader of the Ninth. In her black costume, the one trimmed with white silk ruffles and the rakish eyepatch on over her right eye.

"...What the fuck are you doing here, Murderface?" She says as she lifts her face to look at you - revealing a completely-black eye with a bright purple pupil. And she doesn't growl this - Kirika Kure had never really growled, or snarled, as far as you can remember. She drawled, with a silky smooth voice that wouldn't be out of place coming from a seductress.

"Get the fuck out of here. I didn't invite you in. Learn some fucking manners for once."

>>30892549

Oh, I see! Well, the power levels are generally NECO's bag, but they're pretty much a rough idea of what kind of attributes a particular Magical Girl is good at, and how she excels in them. The criteria for it is sort of up in the air, but SS is definitely one of 'the top ten best in the world'.

>>30892551

Kyuubey is always monitoring Chiaki's Soul Gem, along with Souji and Kharn with Siberia. They'll alert Chiaki right away for any abnormal spikes or danger of going past the limits.

As for what happens when the Corruption reaches 100%, well, Chiaki will need to be quickly airlifted back to Siberia to complete her procedure, as the one she had is a partial one.

The only way to develop resistance to Kirika's control is to give her the opportunity to take control.
So it would have been just as bad if we had tried to use her at any time earlier. Especially on the previous mission, where she would have taken the opportunity to let Kyouko die and kill Sayaka.

That's a really stupid thing to say.
The only way to develop some resistance to Kirika's attempts to take control of Chiaki's body would have been to expose ourselves to Kirika's attempts to take control of Chiaki's body by using Muramasa.

The only way to get that resistance without providing Kirika with more chances to make a mess of everything would have been to use Muramasa under controlled conditions, such as the training session with Sayaka scheduled for the next day.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

"I heard you were talking shit behind my back." You murmur around the bent cigarette you've managed to pull from your Shield's inventory just as Kirika had started flapping her lips around. You have the faintest suspicion that this is going to end with the both of you trying to kill each other again, right here on this very rooftop - or at least, the very convincing simulacra of one, inside the XX Golden Weapon - so you may as well enjoy the peace while it lasts. Get in your barbs while you can.

A flick of your wrist, a deep pull, and the tip of your cigarette glows as it starts to burn. You toss your zippo back into your inventory, holding your breath for as long as you can manage it, before releasing both lungfuls of smoke in a double stream of gray fumes through your nostrils. "Do you still get off doing that kind of shit?" You say this louder, harsher, allowing your ire for the crazy bitch that tried to kill you four lifetimes ago. "Like you're still in middle fucking school?"

"...I don't have the faintest idea of what you're snarling about now." Kirika turns away from you, before tossing what looks like a small, folded paper crane off of the helipad's edge.

"What I told her was the truth - if the infamous Murderface can't get any use out of you, you'll be discarded like so much garbage. Or even if she does, she'll just forget about you." She snaps her fingers once. "Just like that."

"Does telling the truth qualify as talking shit now, Murderface? I could have used some other juicy factoids, you know." The eyepatch-wearing Magical Girl cackles, before turning away again and tossing another paper crane down the skyscraper.

"Like how you can't uphold a promise worth a damn. Or how you've basically been defanged now, unable to do what needs to be done." She shakes her head. "Many times, you've had the opportunity to give praise to the Blessed Lady by shattering the souls of her enemies. And what do you do, Murderface?"

Another paper crane plummets to the ground below. "Nothing. You simply keep them, nurture them. Like you're trying to be something you're not." Kirika fairly spits the words. "Some sort of hero."

...Ah. Now you remember why you hate Kirika so much. You know, besides the being a bigger bitch than Sayaka ever was.

Kirika just LOVED to talk her fucking mouth off.

"So whatever the fuck you came here for, Matsuda - I'm not buying. I'm not listening. Be content with using Muramasa as a glorified pigsticker, or throw it into the ocean for all I care." Despite how she's almost purring the words, you can also hear what sounds like weary resignation in Kirika's voice. "Do the Blessed Lady's will with your own hands, or use that puling little whore that thinks you're her big sister." She throws another paper crane off the ledge. "I will never help you."

How do you respond?

[]If you don't help me, Oriko is going to die.

HOWEVER, I think this should be phrased a bit differently. If its said like that, it comes off as a threat (as in Chiaki threatening to kill Oriko if Kirika does not obey). Might cause her to attack or before we can say anything else.

We should instead make it clear that Oriko is now Ahrimans puppet and the only way to have even a chance of saving her is if Kirika starts cooperating.

[X] Here's the deal Kirika, you wither help me or Oriko gets sacrificed to the blessed lady. She is already most the way there, wielding the golden staff that Ahriman once used, being worn like a skin by her. Won't be long until in order to get more power back she makes her contract

I would almost rather use the chainaxes on this. Getting the highscore unlock upgrade thing would be awesome, and the axes are the only one we actually know how to get. And it seems fairly straightforward on top of that. Just kill shit.
~~Shame we actually have a lower chance of getting the highscore even with the headstart Kharn gave us than we have of unlocking one of the other weapons through pure blind luck. Fucking mercy knobbers...~~

Its not really a lie actually. I don't know if Ahriman is fully possessing Oriko, or if its more subtle manipulation, but Oriko is almost certainly being controlled to some degree.

Not to mention that the golden weapons always cause corruption, even IF the spirit inside is friendly (and Ahriman is most certainly not)

Notice she's not openly hostile. She's bitter, yes. But what she tells is pretty much right (at least as far as she remembers us, old Murderface was not a nice person).
If this conversation turns bad it will be our own fault in the first place, not for coming here now but for drawing assumptions that don't have to be here.

We are talking to Kirika in order to try to get her help with Oriko, so that we don't need to kill Oriko.

Girl A/Murderface would have happily killed Oriko without a second thought and would never even have bothered to look for other options.

If Kirika refuses to cooperate during this conversation, then its her fault, not ours. We are the ones looking for a peacefull option here, to the point of trying to work with someone we deeply dislike.

No.

We're talking to Kirika because in the event that it can't be avoided and we DO need to kill Oriko, I'd rather it be with Kirika in her hands than Ahriman.

Not that it's appreciably a better fight for us or anything - indeed, it might even be worse.

You glare down at Kirika's back. Focus, you remind yourself as you gnash your teeth against your burning cigarette's filter. Focus on what's important. Don't get mad. Whatever you do, don't get mad at this bitch who's probably just as mad that she got offed by a Vindicare.

"What makes you think I need your help?" You finally snap at her, a puff of smoke escaping your lips as you all but snarl the words. "Mikuni Oriko needs your help more than I do. She's the reason I'm here in the first place." You turn to spit the filter out, before grinding it into the asphalt with a twist of your heel. "I wouldn't have come here otherwise, you stupid bitch."

Silence. Only the faint rustle of another delicate paper crane being tossed over the helipad's edge. A stubborn, obstinate silence, one that didn't even yield so much as a twitch when you said Oriko's name.

...Christ. This is what she's been reduced to, then? You were hoping that as crazy and vindictive as Kirika had always been, she'd have enough compassion left in her - enough humanity - to actually be concerned about her friend.

You decide then and there that no matter hwat, you're never going to become like her. Even if you have to kill yourself first before it happens.

"...Fine." You shake your head here. "If you're content to have her deal with Risa instead of you, then so be it." You turn sharply on your heel as you make to walk away. "You know how that turned out the first time."

There's just no helping other people sometimes.

It's on your third step that Kirika finally speaks up. And when she does, it's with a voice that remarkably doesn't sound like she's sneering, or that she has all the dicks in the world in her mouth. It's with...worry. Concern. And a wariness that you've heard from so many other voices - the wariness of dealing with someone like you.

That's basically what we saw as the overall plot of MMxMM Volume I. It wasn't Murder Mayumi killing people, it was the idealisation of a relationship with a cold and distant dominant (probably the kind that would eventually open up to Miracle Midori and hint at loving her).

Murderface really isn't. Mami has a fairly decent evidence of psychopathy though, assuming the threads where we played as her are still canon.

Psychopathy and sociopathy aren't actually diagnostically distinct in most recent psychological classifications. ICD-10, at least, which is the one I know. Americans have their own super-special unique classification of mental disorders, which may or may not draw distinctions. Iunno.

When did I say I wanted to go choke them to death / go for the soul gem break? Seriously? I just said in the post that you replied to that I don't give a fuck about the kill vs just incapacitate them argument, I only was only saying that people should stop with the bullshit about chainaxed MG=murderkill. I wasn't even talking about what we would do with the soulgems after chainaxing the MGs, so stop trying to inject it into the conversation. It's irrelevant.

Though to play devil's advocate for the people that do want to kill the shit out of downed enemies, it will eventually result in the chainaxes getting an upgraded form when the highscore is broken. Whether that powerboost is worth more than Chiaki's becoming a better person thing and whether it's worth risking inter-officio hostilities is another matter entirely. Personally, I think that there's little reason to go for kills against the vast majority of MGs we run into on missions and that we could still probably get the highscore by only killing irredeemable assholes and witches (if we ever see another witch, anyway). Maybe Jyuubey will start some shit and we'll find out that incubators are loadsa points.

You rummage around your Shield again, trying to find another cigarette. This time, you come up empty - and you grumble a curse at no one in particular before shaking your head and trying again. It's in the middle of mid-rummage that you reply.

She can't trust you, you tell her, as plainly as you can. Yeah, sure, you'll admit that you're trying to be someone you're not. But the both of you know just what kind of person you really are.

For fuck's sake, you wouldn't trust yourself either, if you were in her shoes. With your track record? You could wake up a completely different person tomorrow. And that sucks for you and for everyone else.

...But at the same time, leaving Oriko the way she is now seems wrong. It's not something you can just look away from, and you know you've looked away from a lot.

Doing this seems right. Doing this...it's what someone you're trying to be would do. What someone who you'll never be able to become will do.

Silence, again, but as you turn to glance at Kirika - you note that she's looking at you, too. Her one eye looking at you, narrowed - but not in suspicion. Just close, careful scrutiny. As if trying to study you, while at the same time trying to come to a decision.

The former Eversor Rank Leader grunts then grunts, before turning back to her paper cranes. No sneering comeback, no snide rebuttal. Just a grunt.

You still take it as her capitulation, however, and make to sit on the lip of the helipad as well. Making sure to keep a respectful distance away from Kirika, but close enough to at least talk without shouting.

Seems like you can talk a bit more freely now, without trying to hate-fuck each other to death with glares and veiled threats.

[]Still mad I had Kirika retire you? You didn't exactly give me a chance to kill you first.

Theres a difference between roleplay fantasies and actual reality.

I could see Midori wanting to roleplay something from MMxMM with Chiaki to spice up her sexlife or something. I figure Chiaki would not have a problem with that.

I honestly figured it was a matter of Midori romanticising it a lot, like high school (and sadly, as 50 Shades proves, middle-aged) girls tend to do over the whole 'aloof dominant' thing.

You end up with character traits that would imply someone is socio/psychopathic, but it's only specific aspects that appeal to the author. Then they end up in a relationship with someone who actually behaves like that and realise, holy shit, it's not just the parts I got wet over and I have to deal with the whole abusive package. Which is the realisation that came crashing down on Midori's head in Siberia, I think.

Yeah. Looking back, the empty mirror was probably meant as a clue on how to get the DEagle upgrade. Should have realised it sooner.

However I don't think Chiaki even knows about the winged-incarnation yet does she? Unless I am mistaken, Midori has not told us what happened in Siberia yet has she? So all Chiaki knows that there is an empty mirror in the DEagle and nothing more.

We should try and get Midori to tell us everything, so we can atleast ask the three stooges about winghomu and how to make her cooperate with us.

Midori is also aware that the GWs were Madokas secret plan and that Madoka tricked Pinky into creating them. Telling that to the homugroup is probably important.

You decide to wait for Kirika to talk first. To let her fill the silence now stretching out between the both of you. Overhead, the cloudless blue sky starts to slowly darken, as if trying to signify the passage of time.

"It's the first to go, you know." After what seems like an age, Kirika rewards your patience by speaking first, her voice barely above a murmur.

What is? You prompt her after a while. Keeping your voice as low and as soft as hers, yet loud enough for her to hear.

"Memories." The former Eversor Rank Leader replies. "You start forgetting things, bit by bit. Things you wouldn't think you'd forget."

She picks up a paper crane from the bunch on her lap - and it's here that you realize that she has quite a lot folded up. Probably more than a thousand, each one the size of a small business card. "It's not the long term memories that go, or at least I think so. I still remember my name, and everything I've learned in my tenure." She pauses here, as if hesitating, but deciding at the last second to forge on. "But what you deem the most important to you. What you cherished the most."

...Oriko, then?

Kirika nods by the smallest fraction of a degree, still looking down on the small piece of origami on her palm. "I've already forgotten what she smells like, Murderface. How soft her skin is. What perfume she uses when we're scheduled to meet somewhere." A sigh. "I've forgotten what her hand feels like when it's holding mine."

You watch as she holds out her hand and tips it slowly - letting the paper crane fall in a tumbling plummet. Spiralling down to join the rest of its brothers and sisters down below - wherever they are.

"It's not...quick. You can fight it if you're determined enough. You can delay it." Another paper crane falls. "But it's inevitable, that much I know." It's here that she turns towards you. "This...Risa. The uncouth one who has a skull's grin for a smile. Has she told you anything about her past, besides Kharn?"

...Not really, no.

She means Yuu? ...She's told you a few bits here and there, but she did say that it's mostly a blur. Yuu did tell you about some fights she'd fought, however.

Kirika shakes her head. "She'd remember something like that easily. I'll wager that she won't be able to tell you anything about her family, or any relationship she'd made prior to her getting a Golden Weapon." A quick smile curls her lips, one that doesn't even touch her eyes. "The memories that form a person, Murderface. You lose them, being a ghost in this golden shell."

The Eversor sighs again.

"Soon, I'll forget everything about Oriko. I'm not sure how long I can keep fighting that fate, but I'm trying." Kirika makes a tired gesture at the cranes on her lap. "What I know, though, is I'll be significantly worse when it happens."

...How worse?

You find yourself smiling despite yourself.

Yeah. You can agree there.

"Horrifying to even consider, us agreeing." Another sigh, another paper crane sent to its doom. "Let's talk specifics, then, Murderface, if you can be bothered to. How do you plan on handling Oriko and her...worshippers?" She tilts her head to the side as she looks at you questioningly, the gesture curiously catlike. "And try to be honest, if you can. I will be able to tell if you're lying or not."

How do you reply?

[x] Well, you'd planned to separate her from the staff if you can, but beyond that you're basically making shit up at this point. Really, you had hoped for some pointers here on Oriko before laying any intricate plans. And obviously, if things go too shit, or Oriko's too far gone, you can't guarantee her survival.

"The plan as it is right now is to kill all of them. We managed to get a seance to her location and we're interrogating some of her followers so it should only be a matter of time.

She is holding on to Arihman's golden weapon so she is very dangerous. In the event of an assault, sparing her is going to be very unlikely.

I'm hoping that you might be able to get through to her."

I don't give a fuck about her worshippers. They sent me a head dressed up like Mami's. If I can convince Oriko to put the weapon down, or even to take your sword - would you be able to speak to her through it?
In either case, that'd be all we need.
If she can call off the dogs after, or If I have to put them all down makes no difference to me.

>[x] Her worshippers are going to get cut down. Once it's just me and you and her and Ahriman, the best case scenario would be for you to help me convince her to stop all this. If that doesn't work, which it probably won't, then we will need to force her to surrender the staff and capture her to assess the extent of the damage inflicted by using the staff. If you want to talk to her, I'll help you do so. Though, if everything goes to shit... we're going to have to kill her. I hope that doesn't happen. I really hope that doesn't happen because it would defeat the entire point of coming to you for this. If it does happen then maybe she'll end up in here with you. Or not. I got no clue how the fuck these things work anyway.
